Milk Scarcity Looms Here As Result Of Drought

Shortage Threat Presages Revival Of Efforts to Open Milkshed

Danger of a Washington milk shortage, caused by the severe drought, arose yesterday, presaging the revival of efforts to enlarge the Capital's milkshed in order to bolster supplies.

C. I. Dunn, Federal milk marketing administrator for Washington, voiced fears that the prolonged dry spell, if it does not end soon, will bring about an acute scarcity.

Production is considerably off, due largely to the drying up of streams, said Dunn, adding that if the situation persists it may be necessary to open the District market to producers who are now barred from this shed by municipal regulations.

Wisconsin Has Plenty

Simultaneously, Representative Merlin Hull (Progressive), of Wisconsin, assailed the exclusion of any dairy farmers from Washington. In spite of increasing home consumption and exports to Britain, Wisconsin producers still have plenty of dairy products available for shipment here, he declared.

At present they are kept out of the Capital by regulations requiring Health Department inspection of barns and cows. In the past the department has stated that it cannot afford to send inspectors into Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and other dairy States which would like to take advantage of the higher prices paid in Washington.

Hull accused the Department of Agriculture of discriminatory price-fixing, pointing out, for instance, that suppliers of the District market receive about $1 a pound for 3% per cent butterfat, compared with 41 cents in Wisconsin.

Outrage, He Says

"It is an outrage," he told The Post, "that 9000 needy Washington families can't get milk to feed their children."

Hull strongly urged the establishment here of a 1-cent milk program for undernourished children and liberalization of the 5-cent-quart project, both of which have been advocated by The Post since last May.

Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, has indicated that he will push his bill to permit importation of fluid cream, despite the indifferent reception which the measure received last month when the District Commissioners held a public hearing on it. Out of the city yesterday, Schulte is expected back this morning, his office said.

Local dairies canvassed yesterday by The Post were reluctant to admit that the city is facing a milk

Hot Spell Ended; Forecast Is Cooler, But Still No Rain

Washingtonians sighed with relief yesterday as Northwest winds ended the five-day hot spell but the Weather Bureau could hold out no promise of rain for the drought-ridden Capital, Maryland and Virginia.

Today it will be still cooler than yesterday when the mercury reached a moderate 84 at its peak at 1:15 p. m. A high reading of 78 degrees was predicted but "clear skies" was the forecast once more.

The temperature will be held down here and in this vicinity by breezes sweeping in from the West, the weatherman said.

Meanwhile, farmers in the Old Dominion and fish and game wardens in the Free State found little cheer in the situation.

Rebels Menace Belgrade, Reds Report

Puppet Regime Is Said to Be Fleeing Serbian Capital

By Daniel T. Brigham
Copyright by New York Times

Bern, Switzerland, Oct. 8.—Serious disorders have broken out in Belgrade and Smederovo during the last 24 hours, according to a Moscow radio bulletin tonight, which added that the government of Gen. Milan Nedjitch had been forced to leave the city "for the north," as popular demonstrations made it increasingly apparent that the people were going to attempt to storm his headquarters.

Late bulletins say women and children are being rushed from the center of the city—just in case the Germans carry out their threat to shell the capital.

It will be recalled, however, that four days ago the commander of the Yugoslav national army freed one hostage at his headquarters to bear a message to the German commander of the Belgrade garrison, in which he threatened to execute 650 German officers at present held by his forces unless the "indiscriminate" executions by the Germans ceased immediately.

German patrols are said to be functioning in the center of the town, making many arrests—but doing it quietly. Where the prisoners are being taken is still a secret, apparently because the authorities fear attempts by the irregulars to free them by force.

Nazis Reported Withdrawing

Meanwhile, as reports of new uprisings over the whole country leak through censorship, news is said to have reached Moscow that about half of old Serbia, Bosnia and Herzegovina have now been evacuated by occupational troops, which appear to be concentrating toward the outskirts of those provinces with the apparent intention of "holding," pending the arrival of further reinforcements.

Southwest of Belgrade the town of Valjevo was today occupied by the insurgents, while at Chakchak, the so-called "loyalist" garrison, is stated to have gone over to the insurgents with all its arms. Some 700 German officers and soldiers were seized by the garrison, who handed them over on arrival of the insurgents.

Another bulletin said Russian aviation is cooperating with the insurgents in all operations and is encountering little resistance. Severe raids were said to have been made on communications

Viereck Held, Accused of Using Frank

Nazi Agent Seized In N.Y.; Charged With Employing Privileges Held by Congressmen

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

An ace German propagandist, George Sylvester Viereck, was arrested yesterday on an indictment charging that he set up two anti-interventionist committees and used them to send his material through the mail under Congressional frank.

The dapper little Nazi agent was released in New York on bond of $15,000 to secure his appearance here for trial, which Attorney General Biddle said he wanted held "as soon as possible." Viereck is due to be arraigned in the District Court tomorrow.

Urging Federal authorities to make the bail $25,000, Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney called Viereck "one of the most serious menaces in this country." Viereck retorted with a bitter statement which charged he was being persecuted for working for peace.

The special grand jury investigating German agents here returned a secret indictment against Viereck Tuesday. Unsealed after his arrest, the true bill charged him with five instances of withholding vital information from the State Department when he registered as a foreign agent.

Evasiveness Charged

The grand jurors attached to the indictment photostatic copies of five registration statements which Viereck submitted between September 15, 1939, and the present time. These disclosed that he was the American agent of the newspaper, Neueste Nachrichten, published in his native Munich, of its editor, its publishers and of the official German Library of In[illegible]tion.

But, said the grand jurors, each of these registrations left out important facts about what Viereck was doing to influence American public policy. Each of the five registrations was presented as a separate count of the indictment, each count punishable by $1000 fine or two years in prison, or both.

The grand jurors charged Viereck with "aiding, abetting and assisting Prescott Dennett and divers other persons in organizing and setting up a certain committee known as 'Make Europe Pay War Debts Committee,'" This group, once headed by the late Senator Ernest Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, later was succeeded by the Islands for War Debts Committee. Dennett, secretary-treasurer, ran both at 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest.

Linked to Dennett

The grand jurors charged that Viereck carried on his propaganda "by contributing large sums of money for the maintenance and to defray the expenses of the said committees, it being the plan and purpose among others, of the defendant Viereck to use 'Make Europe 'Pay Committee' and 'Islands for War Debts Committee', the said Prescott Dennett and divers other persons to disseminate and distribute by mail under Congressional franking privilege and otherwise certain speeches and public addresses delivered on the floor of Congress and elsewhere by present and former members of both houses of the Congress of the United States . . ."

Dennett was questioned for seven days by the grand jury that indicted Viereck. Still pending is a contempt of court proceeding against Dennett, started when he failed to give the grand jurors his records of the membership and financing of his committees. After the court ordered Dennett to turn over all his records, Federal agents found that he had several large boxes full

Lack of Steel Hampers Vital Navy Ship Building Program

By Frank L. Kluckhohn
Copyright by New York Times

Inability to get adequate deliveries of steel is interfering with the vital naval building program, the Navy Department confirmed yesterday. Major work on two destroyers at the Philadelphia Navy Yard, for instance, has been held up two months through lack of steel and, for the same reason, it has been impossible to start work there on one of the new super-battleships.

Although naval officers, anxious to avoid controversies with other Government agencies, including the OPM, declined to do more than confirm these facts, already obtained from another source, officials asserted that this situation could be laid to the inability to obtain priorities on steel of all types, the use by the automobile industry of rolling machinery to produce cars for private users and general lack of capacity in the steel industry.

OPM allotment figures for the month of October, for instance, show that the railroads and the Maritime Commission, which is building merchantships, will each receive about twice as much steel as the Navy.

Strike Now, Reds Urge British; Nazis Mysteriously Get Text Of Roosevelt Letter to Stalin

Berlin Garbled Note to Smear President, Says White House

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt has sent Soviet Premier Stalin a personal letter expressing "great confidence" that the Russian armies "will ultimately prevail over Hitler," the White House revealed late yesterday.

The official text bore a close similarity to a version of the letter published earlier in the day in Berlin.

The White House release stirred immediate speculation over the methods by which German agents might have obtained a copy of the note, which is thought to have been presented at the Kremlin about 10 days ago by W. Averell Harriman.

Perhaps From Moscow

At the same time observers here were not overlooking the possibility that the Soviets might have taken pains to see that the letter came to the notice of Nazi agents in the hope that the message would be published in the Reich and that President Roosevelt's emphatic pledge of aid to Russia would be damaging to German morale.

The President's message, taken to Moscow as a letter of introduction for Harriman, head of the American delegation to discuss war aid to Russia, carried this pledge:

"I am confident that ways and means will be found to provide the material and supplies necessary to fight Hitler on all fronts, including your own."

The White House made public the letter after D. N. B., the German news agency, had issued a version of the note, beginning, "My dear friend, Stalin." The text released here began with the salutation, "My dear Mr. Stalin."

The D. N. B. letter closed with the words, "Yours in cordial friendship," while the White House release shows the note ending with the more formal phrase, "Yours very sincerely."

Altered for Propaganda

On "careful comparison" of the D. N. B. account and the actual text of the letter, the White House announcement said, "the propaganda objectives of the Nazi action become very clear."

White House aides declined to enlarge on this observation, but it was believed here that D. N. B. wished to portray the President to the German people as being on intimate terms with the Soviet leader and hoped by the same device to embarrass Mr. Roosevelt in this country on the eve of the neutrality revision debate.

The Berlin radio read the D. N. B. version of the letter last night, ac-

The President's Letter—and Berlin's Version

How the German government learned the contents of President Roosevelt's letter to Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia, carried to Stalin by W. Averell Harriman on the latter's lend-lease mission to Moscow, is a mystery causing concern in official circles here.

In the absence of official word, it was assumed that the letter was dictated by Mr. Roosevelt to a secretary, that probably a copy was given to the State Department and the original entrusted to Harriman, who stopped in London on his way to Moscow.

The closeness with which the German version of the letter followed the text issued late yesterday by the White House is striking, though the White House release invited "careful comparison" of the language in the two texts, saying that "when such a comparison is made the propaganda objectives of the Nazi action become very clear."

The German text, as carried by the New York Times, and the text released here later follow:

THE NAZI VERSION

"My Dear Friend Stalin:

"This letter will be handed to you by my friend Harriman, whom I have instructed to be leader of our Moscow delegation.

"I wish to take opportunity of expressing my great confidence that your armies finally will be victorious over Hitler.

"Mr. Harriman is well acquainted with your problems and will, I know, do everything he can to bring the Moscow negotiations to a successful conclusion.

"Harry Hopkins reported extensively about his successful and satisfactory visit to the foreign ministry. I cannot say how deeply we all were impressed by the achievements of the brave Soviet armies.

"We shall find suitable ways of obtaining materials and the equipment necessary to fight Hitler on all fronts, including the Soviet front.

"I assure you of our greatest determination to provide the necessary material support.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

WHITE HOUSE TEXT

"My Dear Mr. Stalin:

"This note will be presented to you by my friend Averell Harriman, whom I have asked to be head of our delegation to Moscow.

"Mr. Harriman is well aware of the strategic importance of your front and will, I know, do everything that he can to bring the negotiations in Moscow to a successful conclusion.

"Harry Hopkins has told me in great detail of his encouraging and satisfactory visits with you. I can't tell you how thrilled all of us are because of the gallant defense of the Soviet armies.

"I am confident that ways will be found to provide the material and supplies necessary to fight Hitler on all fronts, including your own.

"I want particularly to take this occasion to express my great confidence that your armies will ultimately prevail over Hitler and to assure you of our great determination to be of every possible material assistance.

"Yours very sincerely,

House Opens Debate on 2d Lend-Lease

'Clouds of Planes' Asked by Cannon; Soviet Aid Attacked

The House yesterday opened two days of debate on the Administration's bill for $5,985,000,000 in supplementary lend-lease appropriations with an appeal for American munitions superiority "to insure the defeat of the Axis."

Approving the full amount asked by the President, the House Appropriations Committee sped the bill to the House with the statement that "our first line of defense lies in lend-lease operations."

Appealing for funds to speed up production to aid every power combatting the Axis, Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee told the House:

"The turn of the war is imminant. What we do, we must do quickly. We must provide clouds of airplanes, acres of tanks and an avalanche of munitions for the countries fighting the Axis powers."

Republicans immediately opened an attack on aid to the Soviet,

'Dirty Business'

Biddle Backs Wire Tapping To Fight Spies

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Francis Biddle said yesterday that the Federal Bureau of Investigation was ready to use wire tapping in cases involving espionage, sabotage or kidnaping.

Speaking at his first press conference since taking the oath as Attorney General on September 12, Biddle disclosed in response to questions that a one-time flat prohibition against use of wire tapping by the Justice Department had been relaxed by his predecessor, Associate Justice Robert H. Jackson of the Supreme Court, to cover national defense and kidnaping cases and that he would follow Jackson's policy.

"I think that if you don't tap wires, your counter-espionage just goes out the window," Biddle said.

"Wiretapping is a dirty business—all espionage is a dirty business—and as a matter of policy I think that this dirty business ought to be strictly confined and its use in individual cases permitted only when authorized by the Attorney General."

Biddle volunteered the opinion that "there have been very, very few sabotage cases in this country."

Asked whether he contemplated any important changes in his official staff, with specific references to Director J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI, and Thurman Arnold, chief of the Anti-Trust Division, Biddle said that there had been much talk "about differences between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Arnold and me, but to say that they have been grossly exaggerated would be an understatement." He then said that

Roosevelt Will Ask Arming Of Ships Today

Legislation Ready After Congress Gets Message at Noon

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt today will ask Congress to repeal Section 6 of the Neutrality Act to permit America's Merchant Marine to arm against Axis attack.

In anticipation of his message, House and Senate leaders already have legislation prepared for introduction in both Houses immediately after reading of the President's request at noon.

A second point of revision—repeal of the Section 2 ban against entry of American flag ships into belligerent ports—may be covered in Mr. Roosevelt's message but immediate action not pressed.

An alternative bill covering both points has bene drafted if eleventh-hour strategy makes the broad course advisable. But Administration leaders were tentatively decided to confine present House action to arming of merchantmen and streamline the bill for speed.

Urgency of immediately authorizing American merchant ships to arm, particularly since Panama denied American-owned vessels under Panama registry that protection, was stressed by leaders attending yesterday's bipartisan conference at the White House.

This view is expected to be reflected in the President's message together with a recital of war developments and Axis attacks on lend-lease shipping that make necessary revision of neutrality policy.

Both Chairman Connally, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Chairman Bloom, of the Southern Nazi Pincer Presses 68 Miles Nearer To Moscow

'Last Complete Armies'

Call for Help

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Oct. 8.—Soviet armies withdrew today from the important railway town of Orel, south of Moscow, after furious fighting, the Red army high command announced tonight.

This latest Russian communique was a terse confession of mighty German pressure on two central sectors and just above the Sea of Azov, on the extreme south. It followed an appeal by the magazine Bolshevik for British action in the west now that Hitler was engaged to the death in the east.

"The British Empire," the magazine said, "now has the opportunity for taking the initiative into its hands and dealing destructive blows to the common foe of mankind, the Hitler Fascists."

Nazis Weak in West

Red Fleet, the official organ of the Soviet navy, estimated that the Germans had now only 25 to 30 weak divisions in France and little artillery and few planes left in all the west. At the same time it said the British army and air forces had greatly grown while the Royal Navy still held the seas.

Orel, on the Moscow-Kharkov-Rostov Railway, some 220 miles south of Moscow and 68 miles east of Bryansk, where the Russians had placed the battle line yesterday, was squarely in the path of the southern arm of a week-long German enveloping movement intended to trap and destroy the Russian armies defending the Soviet capital.

Reverses in South Admitted

Its fall put the second of two mighty Nazi columns in much more menacing position below the capital, while to the west the other supreme thrust was operating from the vicinity of Vyazma, only 125 miles short of Moscow.

In the far south, German advances were acknowledged by the

'Stay on the Job,' Green Cautions A. F. L. Delegates

Seattle, Oct. 8 (AP).—In direct response to President Roosevelt's appeal for labor peace and unity without work stoppages, A. F. L. President William Green tonight called "upon every member and every union in the American Federation of Labor to stay on the job and keep defense production going at full blast until the enemies of America are soundly defeated."

As to the plea for A. F. L.-C. I. O. unity, Green declared that the A. F. L.'s proposals for resumption of peace negotiations had been "rejected or ignored each time," and added:

"We suggest that you direct your future appeals to the C. I. O. with all the influence at your command until the representatives of that organization agree to confer with us."

Hankin Overcomes 'Red' Cry; Is Indorsed for PUC Post

Gregory Hankin, a Russian immigrant who credits the American form of democratic government and its system of free economic enterprise with lifting him from obscurity to his position as a Government attorney, late yesterday was unanimously indorsed for a District Public Utilities Commission post by a special Senate subcommittee.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, subcommittee chairman, and Senators Warren R. Austin (Republican), of Vermont, and D. Worth Clark (Democrat), of Idaho, all said they would urge Hankin's indorsement by the full Senate District Committee when it meets later this month.

Hankin was nominated to the PUC post by President Roosevelt on March 3. His indorsement by the Senate has hung fire since that time while rumors were afloat that he was associated with the Communist Party.

In a voice that occasionally trembled with intensity the stocky, Russian-born attorney who came to this country at the age of 13 told the Senators:

Fisherman Cries in Court:

Union 'Big Shots' Dress Up, 'Poor Guy Can't Buy Bread'

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 8. — A fisherman barred by an American Federation of Labor union from the Monterey banks because he fished under Congress of Industrial Organization (C. I. O.) jurisdiction in Alaskan waters protested in court that a "poor guy can't buy a loaf of bread now."

The protestations, shouted by Salvatore Partinico, went into the record yesterday over the objections of Russell Zaches, Monterey attorney for the A. F. L. Seine and Line Fishermen's Union.

"The outburst," remarked Superior Judge C. J. Goodell, "is understandable."

Partinico said that since 1911 he had belonged to a union from which both the A. F. L. group and the C. I. O. Alaska Fishermen's Union had sprung, and that during all those years he had fished both the Monterey and Alaskan waters.

"I want to go to work and make some money," the witness shouted excitedly in broken English, gesturing toward the union attorney.

"These fellows go around dressed like a million dollars. A poor guy can't buy a loaf of bread."

125 Miles From Moscow, Fighting Stalin's 'Best and Last'—Nazis

Northern, Southern Red Armies Are Called Decimated

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Oct. 8.—Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's powerful Russian armies defending Moscow are locked in a series of German rings and face "inexorable annihilation," and in the Ukraine Soviet resistance has collapsed and Marshal Samyon Budenny's armies there are in a state of dissolution.

The German spokesman said the Soviet armies now engaged in battle are "the best equipped and best trained of all the armies at Stalin's disposal. They are also the last complete armies at his disposal."

The northern armies, as well as the southern, he asserted, were decimated and have lost most of their equipment.

Sweeping Claims

With these claims—two of the most sweeping and confident to come from German military quarters since the beginning of the war with Russia—an authorized spokesman here tonight painted the German picture of the situation in the East.

Regarding both operations the spokesman said:

"New reports of German successes may be reckoned with very soon."

On the central front, the spokesman said, the mass of German troops is within 125 miles of Moscow. He emphasized "this does not mean our panzer spearheads or our reconnaissance detachments. It means the actual battlefront," leading to the actual battlefront," leading to the inescapable assumption that the spearheads and reconnaissance groups are still closer to the capital.

The information on which this comment was based was given today in the first special high command communique regarding the Moscow front since the opening of the new operations announced by Reichsfuehrer Hitler last Friday.

The communique said the German central armies under General Field Marshal Fedor von Bock brought to a consummation the operations begun a week ago by cracking Soviet defenses in this sector and building the bases for a "new series of powerful battles of annihilation."

"Several Armies Encircled"

The greatest of these battles is apparently in the area of Vyazma, where, the communique stated, "several Soviet armies were encircled and faced inexorable annihilation."

The original break-through of the Soviet defenses on the southern front is said to have been on the 185-mile sector between Vyazma, west of Moscow, and Orel, southwest of the capital. The entire German attack, however, is said to extend over a front running as far north as the Valdai hills.

The spokesman revealed for the first time that the new German operations were timed to begin last week after a major Soviet offensive in this sector had spent its force. The initiative, he said, was taken by Marshal Timoshenko at the time of the great battle of encirclement east of Kiev, capital of the Ukraine, with the purpose of relieving Marshal Semyon Budyenny there, as well as Marshal Kelementi Voroshilov at Leningrad. The brunt of Marshal Timoshenko's offensive was directed north of Smolensk and when this move failed of its mark the German offensive began.

In the Ukraine, it was said, the southern Russian armies have "been struck so heavily that they can be said to be destroyed. Remnants of these crushed and decimated divisions are being pursued in their flight eastward."

Donets Basin Cut Off

North of Kharkov, according to German reports, the communications of the Donets Basin with Moscow have been cut by incessant German air-force bombing raids. In these raids, D. N. B., the official news agency, claims that in the last three days 91 railway trains have been destroyed and 128 others damaged.

South of Kharkov, German troops, following the capture of the harbors of Berdyansk and Mariupol, are pushing on in the direction of Rostov at the mouth of the Don River, thus flanking the heart of the Donets Basin.

Britain Calls Italy Another Nazi Headache

Copyright by New York Times

London, Oct. 8.—Italy is so short of food that her people this winter will not be able "to put their backs into any sort of real war effort," an official of the British Ministry of Economic Warfare said today.

There is no reason to believe the Italian people will starve, according to the British official, but this is because they are making what little foods are available go around by their own means and at the sacrifice of their contribution to the Axis war endeavor. The British now classify Italy with France and the Netherlands as among the greatest headaches facing German administrators.

Some of the reasons for Italy's plight were set down as follows: The harvest has been below expectations. Food stocks are running low, if they are not exhausted. Imports of meat and maize from southeastern Europe are dependent on the humor of Berlin. There is an army to be fed.

This last-named factor, plus the strain placed on industry natural in a country waging war, makes Italy's position worse than that of her German-occupied neighbors. Like France and the Balkans and to some extent Belgium, which also have important peasant populations, Italy is confronted with a major problem in the spread of hoarding. Peasants have an ingrained tendency to look after their own interests, and Italian peasants are no exception. Thus the burden of food shortages has fallen on the townsfolk.

The bread ration recently put into effect, added to earlier restrictions, has resulted in cutting the average Italian working man's diet about in half, it is calculated here. With peasants taking their food at its source, it is estimated two-thirds of the current crop will be used by less than one-half the population.

That refers to grain. The case of olive oil is believed even worse.

The British estimate that about 96 per cent of the Italian people will be short of nourishment for an indefinite period.

The President's Day

By International News Service

THE OLD GANG: Back again earnest as life and twice as big, came the Congressional leaders with four additions. Vice President Wallace and Secretary Hull arrived first, slipped into the White House study for a few preliminary minutes with the Big Boss. A few minutes later the minority and majority Congressional leaders who spent two hours Tuesday talking over the Neutrality Act revision with the President filed in bulkier by three Representatives and Speaker San Rayburn. Cutting their running time down to 1½ hours the President and the Capitol Hill chiefs adjourned. The President decided to get the ball rolling immediately, said he would send a message to Congress today.

CLOCK-WORK: Thanks to some careful timing and clock-work, the President was able to run off a string of five callers before lunchtime. First of the 15-minute appointments brought handsome Ed Stettinius in for a routine bow as lend-lease coordinator; new Minister to Costa Rica Arthur Lane Bliss passed Stettinius on the way into the Presidential office. Gen. Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, marched in next to talk over some hospital woes with Commander in Chief Roosevelt; exited as WPA Administrator Howard Hunter entered. The President okayed a slight pay raise for 1,030,000 WPAers because of upped living costs. United States Housing Authority Nathan Strauss came in to see Mr. Roosevelt just because he wanted to see him—nothing on his mind especially.

TRAYS AND TAYLOR: Special Envoy Myron Taylor arrived promptly, impeccably groomed as always to lunch and talk further with FDR on those audiences in Rome with Pope Pius. Further talk concluded the report and the President intimated that he will probably reveal what's what at his press conference tomorrow.

PRESIDENTIAL STUFF: Presidents are obviously made of incredibly durable goods—after a hectic, grinding morning and decisions to be made on the spot, people to be seen, phoned, comforted, reprimanded ad infinitum, the President bit into a choking hulk of work as soon as Taylor departed. He decided, wrote and released a little answer to the D. N. B. story from Berlin on the contents of the letter W. Averell Harriman handed to Stalin and pointed out that this was an example of the neat Nazi way of espionage and propaganda. Then Mr. Roosevelt got to work on his message to Congress. Interrupted repeatedly by phone calls, other duties, he continued to get his views on the Neutrality Act revision into working order, was still at it when Mrs. Roosevelt came home from her office at OCD. After dinner and talking with Harry Hopkins he returned to the message at hand and worked through the warm, unquiet evening.

Fascists Cheer Duce as Retort To America

By the Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 8.—Demonstrations for Premier Mussolini in four northern cities where Il Duce gave his people the slogan, "Hold fast!" were cited by the Fascists tonight as Italy's answer to American suggestions of war-weakened morale.

Mussolini returned to Rome today from his tour of Parma, Bologna, Imola and Fienza.

The Fascists said 400,000 persons, mostly workers, who cheered him showed that hunger and British air bombardments had failed to undermine the Italians' morale or make them weary of the war.

Wilhelm Ohnesorge, German minister of posts, was constantly at Mussolini's side during the visits which were intended to disprove the American conception of Italy as the Achilles heel of the Axis.

All newspapers reported the demonstrations as a retort to American reports of discontent and disorders in Italy with dislike for the Germans.

Bologna apparently was chosen for a demonstration because it once was strongly Socialist and has been called "the center of Italian political strategy."

"You must hold fast," Il Duce told workers in Bologna.

"If we hold fast we will win. Your work is a form, and part, of the fighting. Through your intelligent and disciplined Fascist work you are contributing to the country's victory."

Shouts of "Duce! Duce!" interrupted his words, Italian reporters said, while the crowds broke through police lines in enthusiasm.

Lease-Lend? No, Lend-Lease Is Proper

Lend-lease is right and lease-lend is wrong.

This was settled yesterday when Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, interrupted a flurry of heated debate on the $5,985,000,000 supplementary lend-lease appropriation to ask that the proper cognomen be designated.

"It's officially the lend-lease bill," replied Chairman Clarence Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee.

War Sidelights

3d of Italy's Merchantmen Claimed Lost

Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 8 (AP).—Britain's steady battering of Italy's sea power has stripped Il Duce of nearly one-third of his merchant fleet, British sources said today.

Summaries of the British operations list 851,000 tons of Axis shipping—99 per cent of it Italian—as sent to the bottom of the Mediterranean and Red Seas since Italy went to war.

Official sources, although unable to give specific figures on the tonnage damaged, said scores of ships had been put out of action. It was estimated that at the outset of the war Mussolini's merchant fleet included 1235 ships totaling 3,500,000 tons.

British sources said more than 50 per cent of Mussolini's torpedoboats and destroyers are gone, all of his 10,000-ton, 8-inch-gun cruisers are out of action or sunk, one battleship is out of commission and three others, heavily damaged, are undergoing repairs.

Victory for U. S. Planes

Cairo, Oct. 8 (AP).—South African pilots flying American-made Glenn Martin bombers were reported today to have beaten off unscathed an attack by the newest German fighters in the first contact of the two types of planes.

In a 10-minute engagement over Capuzzo, on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, the bomber pilots were credited with sending one of the newest type of Messerschmitt 109's down in flames and damaging another so badly that it probably never reached its base.

A Beau for a Pilot

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—Pilots of a Beaufort fighter squadron have included "Beau" in the name of each plane, with such results as Beau-Peep, Beau-Nana, Beau-Na-Fide, Beau-Kay, Greta-Gar-Beau and Beau-Legs.

Army Pilot Hurt In Nicaragua

Managua, Nicaragua, Oct. 8 (AP).—Capt. James Buck, piloting one of 11 United States Army pursuit planes from the United States to Panama, struck a housetop while attempting to land here today and was injured seriously. His home is in San Antonio, Tex.

Nazis Mysteriously Get U. S. Note

cording to a C. B. S. report, with the announcer saying, "It is very significant that the U. S. A. President calls the Moscow tyrant, when addressing him in the message, 'My dear friend Stalin.'"

"Thanks to the German armed forces," he declared, "the promises of aid by the U. S. A. President to Moscow will remain theory." He added that the letter showed "the will of the U. S. A. President to deliver all of Europe and thus the entire European culture and religion to bolshevism."

Aside from the differences in salutation and closing phrase, there was little divergence between the D. N. B. version and the White House text.

Most of the variations in the body of the letter could be accounted for by the fact that the D. N. B. version, as it reached this country, had been translated from English to German and back to English.

It was thought likely that D. N. B., in preparing its account for publication, had been working from the actual text, but officials here offered no explanation as to how the letter might have fallen into German hands. D. N. B. said it received the letter from a "reliable source," but gave no details.

Nor would they discuss any measures the United States or Soviet governments may be taking to investigate the channels by which D. N. B. received its information.

There was no official comment here on the possibility that the "leak" was deliberate and that the Russians might be as anxious as D. N. B. to give the German people the impression that President Roosevelt and Stalin are working in close collaboration.

The President's letter, dated September 17, said, "I can't tell you how thrilled all of us are because of the gallant defense of the Soviet armies."

"I want particularly," Mr. Roosevelt wrote, "to take this occasion to express my great confidence that your armies will ultimately prevail over Hitler and to assure you of our great determination to be of every possible assistance."

Woollcott Keeps Friends Waiting—By N. Y. Time

London, Oct. 8 (AP).—Alexander Woollcott, radio broadcaster, kept his friends waiting to see him until 1 p. m. today because he insists he is still operating on Eastern standard time regardless of what the clocks say here.

When he finally got up he distributed lipsticks, cigarettes, silk stockings, razor blades, cigars and other American luxury items to his theatrical and literary acquaintances.

Woollcott arrived in England last night by steamer. He risked the crossing by boat rather than confine his luggage and his portly person to limited plane accommodations.

Rumanian 'Doll City' Is Built By Germans to Fool Soviets

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 8.—American travelers arriving from Rumania reported today that the Germans had built a "doll house City of Ploesti" about 10 miles outside the real Ploesti, important oil refining center, to mislead Russian bombers trying to destroy the refineries.

The fake city, they said, was on a scale of one-third the area of the actual city and stood only about 3 feet high.

It is complete to the last detail, with every refinery and all the chief buildings represented, with an accurate street plan, and even electric lights which may be left burning during the night to attract the Russian planes.

Fake Fires

There is a miniature railroad with tracks to catch the moonbeams.

Model oil storage tanks can be set afire whenever a bomb lands nearby, the Americans said, to convince attacking fliers that they had scored against an actual target.

From the air the whole thing is so deceptive that Ploesti itself has not been touched by any night raids and has been only slightly damaged by day, said the travelers, some of whom had lived in Ploesti for several years.

(The Russian navy paper, Red Fleet, confirmed the existence of this dummy town, but said the Russians never had been fooled.)

The fake town recently was moved from its first location when it appeared that the Russians were beginning to catch on, the travelers said.

Two Pipe Lines

As a less theatrical means of saving Rumanian oil they said the Germans had built two 10-inch pipe lines from Ploesti to Giurgiu on the Danube and had drained off all the oil which used to stand in tanks.

Now the Ploesti oil flows direct from well to pipe lines, reducing the danger of loss through bombing.

The same travelers reported that the Rumanians had been unable to make gasoline of a "winter-proof" type recently demanded by the Germans but that the Nazi experts still were working on the problem and also were demanding greater production of high-test aviation fuel.

Trade Group Asks Neutral Act Repeal

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 8.—A declaration in favor of repeal of the Neutrality Act was adopted today in the final deliberations of the National Foreign Trade Council at the conclusion of the council's three-day convention.

Delegates representing the Nation's leading financial institutions, manufacturers and exporters voted full indorsement of the Government's policy of naval, military and economic defense in collaboration with the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"The defeat of the Axis ambition for world domination is essential to the peace and prosperity of all nations," the final declaration said.

Hull Policies Favored

Continuation of negotiations for reciprocal trade agreements, along the lines set by Secretary of State Hull, was urged because "the principles underlying the trade agreements program offer the real alternative to policies of economic nationalism, which in the past proved so destructive to foreign trade and always resulted in lower standards of living for all."

Stabilization pacts to encourage the widest possible use of dollar exchange were advocated, the convention suggested that the United States be willing to entertain "important gold lending operations" to assist other countries to regain the gold standard.

The American Government also was asked to "obtain definite commitments for the progressive removal of trade discriminations against the United States throughout the British Commonwealth and elsewhere."

Plea for Harmony

Recognizing that restrictions on foreign trade were necessary in the present emergency, the convention asserted that at the end of the emergency period "all Government wartime restrictions should be speedily removed."

Reexamination of trade relations with Latin America was suggested on the ground that "development of normal trade has been retarded by the fears of some domestic producers that greater imports . . . would be ruinous to their welfare."

A plea for harmony and cooperation in working out postwar trade questions was made by Eugene P. Thomas, president of the council, who said "we may gain the mastery over the Axis and lose the fruits of victory through our inability to work together in harmony in the rebuilding of the new economic world."

Labor Chieftains Draw Up Heavy Convention Slate

By the Associated Press

Seattle, Oct. 8.—The American Federation of Labor convention business shaped up today into a seven-point program of major issues, all dealing with the war emergency.

The interrelated convention problems, some controversial (as evidenced by the themes of government and labor speakers, members' resolutions and the A. F. of L. executive council's own bulky recommendations), were:

1. Tightening union discipline, to prevent unwise or irresponsible strikes.

2. Getting labor a voice in solving the complex problems of defense priorities, to reduce priority unemployment and protect small businesses not now sharing largely in defense contracts.

3. Training new workers for defense jobs, and training old workers in new skills incident to defense contracts.

4. Obtaining a greatly expanded Federal Housing program to accommodate defense workers families.

Inflation Threats

5. Safeguarding against the threats of inflation by Federal control of prices, but not of wages.

6. Getting labor a seat at the postwar peace conference table and in setting up the machinery for vast low-cost housing projects and other means of preventing wholesale unemployment of labor and money when the industrial defense-boom ends.

7. Watchfulness on all legislation affecting labor, such as the new tax bill, to the end that there shall be "no war millionaires created by national defense."

Federation President William Green, replying in a radio address to President Roosevelt's appeal to the A. F. L. unions to utilize available Government mediation and conciliation agencies said:

"I appeal to every man and woman of the American Federation of Labor to remember at all times and under all circumstances that the national interest comes first."

Cites Record

Green said the President's appeal "echoes almost word for word" a public declaration of the A. F. L. executive council six months ago in an appeal to affiliated unions.

"Official records show that more than 99 per cent of the membership refrained from striking for any cause at any time durnig the defense program to date," Green continued.

With regard to "the fraction of 1 per cent of our members who have deviated from the no-strike policy," he said:

"I ask the public to bear in mind that labor organizations are made up of human beings, subject to human emotions and unable, no matter how hard they try, to attain perfection."

Curbing Accidents Will Aid Defense, Knox Tells Workers

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Calling for renewed efforts to curb accidents return to winter night attacks on retary Knox asserted tonight that an invasion of the Near East and the British Isles was "a certainty the moment the Nazi iron octopus can ready itself for the assault" and the United States was on the German list of "unfinished business."

He said, in an address prepared for delivery over the N. B. C. blue network and before the National Safety Congress, that industrial mishaps in normal times caused no irreparable damage to the Nation's security, but added:

"But not now. Not today, with Hitler's robust fanatics blasting at the gates of Leningrad and Odessa, with his Stuka bombers eager to return to winter night atttacks on British industrial centers, with the actual invasion of the Near East and the British Isles not a possibility, but a certainty the moment the Nazi iron octopus can ready itself for the assault, and with the United States the final and most important item on the Nazi agenda of unfinished business."

Knox also declared that he did not countenance defense strikes and said, "Any attempt, either by labor or capital, to gain unreasonable profit at the expense of the Nation's security has my bitterest condemnation."

He said labor and management showed an increasing williness to make concessions to avoid interrupting production.

"It is my sincere hope . . . that placing of stringent restrictions upon any group or groups included in this Nation's economy will not be necessary throughout the present emergency," he added. "It is also my hope and my belief—that if such restrictions become necessary they be put into effect without delay, that they be controls with plenty of teeth in them, and that they be rigidly enforced."

The Secretary of the Navy said the accident rate was rising and recalled 26,800,000 man-days of work were lost in 1940 because of industrial accidents compared with 6,700,000 lost through strikes.

The death or injury of a skilled worked, he stated, impeded the effort to aid countries "battling Hitler and his pathetic and bombastic stooge."

Seven U. S. Ships Fly Canada's Flag

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Oct. 8.—Seven of the 50 American destroyers given to Great Britain by the United States in exchange for Atlantic bases are now flying the flag of the Royal Canadian navy, it was disclosed in the House of Commons today.

The transfer of the vessels was not regarded as a commercial transaction, it was said, but as an arrangement for the disposal of the vessels which fitted in best with the admiralty's plan for the battle of the Atlantic. The ships were regarded as having become the property of the Canadian government.

Canadian Ship Sunk in Caribbean

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Sinking of the Canadian freighter Mondoc by an unexplained explosion near St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, was reported in marine circles today.

First reports said the 1926-ton vessel was torpedoed, but an official who declined the use of his name said she blew up last onday. Whether there were any survivors was not known.

(In Washington, the Navy and State Departments and the Canadian legation said they had not heard of the reported mishap.)

Steel Workers End Strike at Gary Tin Mill

By the United Press

A strike of C. I. O. steel workers at the Gary, Ind., tin mill of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation, which made 9000 men idle and threatened to involve an additional 40,000 employes at two of the company's affiliates, ended last night.

A company spokesman announced the men would return to work at 11 p. m. after an agreement with union representatives in which it was agreed that the company and union would jointly request the presence of police if a threat of law violation arose in conducting dues inspection.

The strike resulted as a protest against the arrest of a union member who allegedly prevented a woman employe from entering the plant for failure to pay dues.

Settlement efforts in disputes at a Cleveland steel products plant and two Texas ordnance projects occupied Federal labor experts, meantime.

At Cleveland, the eight-day strike of C. I. O. automobile workers at the Midland Steel Products plant forced the layoff of 6000 employes at Studebaker's South Bend, Ind., division for lack of frames and threatened similar shutdowns at the Hudson Motor Co., Detroit, and the Toledo, Ohio, plant of the Willys-Overland Co., producing Army "jeep" cars.

James F. Dewey, Government conciliator, demanded early termination of the Midland dispute over union demands for a 20-cent hourly wage increase. Some 1400 workers are idle.

A walkout of A. F. of L. teamsters halted work at the Army's eight-million-dollar San Jacinto ordnance depot near Houston, Tex., yesterday, after a strike of A. F. of L. workers had shut down operations a day before at an ordnance depot near Texarkana, Tex.

A Hillsdale, Mich., one-day jurisdictional dispute between the C. I. O. and A. F. of L. automobile workers' union ended at the Hillsdale Steel Products Co., permitting restoration of defense production. Seven men were hurt in a riot at the plant Tuesday.

Rich Widow Offered Funds, Spy Trial Told

By Pat McGrady
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 8.—A mysterious, wealthy woman who wanted to finance German agents here was mentioned guardedly today at the Brooklyn Federal court trial of 15 men charged with espionage conspiracy.

Neither Government nor defense counsel showed any inclination to identify her, beyond a statement that she was born in Germany and was the widow of an American manufacturer.

FBI Agent William Friedeman, relating a conversation which he said he had overheard between William Sebold, American counter-espionage agent, and Franz Josef Stigler, a defendant, in Sebold's office last May 23, testified:

"Stigler said he had met a wealthy German woman who could be of help. He said she was the widow of an American manufacturer, that her home was in Cuba and that she could render financial assistance, if called upon."

Defense Counsel Charles Oberwager asked where the woman lived.

"Stigler said she had homes in the United States and in Havana," replied Friedman.

"And did Stigler identify this woman by name?" asked Oberwager.

Assistant United States Attorney T. Vincent Quinn leaped to his feet, but before the Court could rule on his objection. Oberwager said, "Do not worry, I'll not ask him to name her."

Housing Plan Is Defended By Palmer

The general program and results of defense housing efforts were defended by Charles F. Palmer, defense housing coordinator, testifying yesterday before the Truman Defense Investigating Committee. Conceding that in some cases Federal housing built by the Government has not yet been occupied, he declared that it was better to err on the side of too much housing "and maybe have it cost a little more than it should than to save a little money and have a ship not be ready in time and weaken our national defense."

The witness, appearing to answer charges made by John Carmody, Federal Works Administrator, that Palmer had insisted on the construction of dormitories which now were only half occupied, laid the blame for this situation at Carmody's door.

Palmer told the committee that the failure of the FWA to equip dormitories constructed for single men had caused a lag in rentals.

Palmer said "Uncle Sam has been way ahead of the game in anticipating the need" to house transplanted workers in new defense areas.

He asserted that officials in charge of the program had "not been unduly influenced either by real estate interests or by labor," in selecting site.

To detailed figures by committee counsel Hugh A. Fulton showing projects not yet substantially filled by tenants, Palmer replied that some mistakes had been made in locating the projects too far from the work site, but that in most cases rising employment would fill up available quarters.

OPM to Defend Blocking of Housing Contract

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The OPM, called on yesterday by the Senate Defense Investigating Committee to explain its blocking of a million-dollar defense housing contract award in Wayne County, Mich., to the low bidder, will explain its opposition on grounds that labor strife would prevent performance and that the award would be counter to a Presidential statement demanding a truce on "raiding" by rival union organizations during the emergency.

Low bidder on the contract by $400,000 is the P. J. Currier Co., which has recently signed a contract with the C. I. O. Construction Workers. Award of the contract by Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody was blocked by Sidney Hillman, OPM co-chief, who recently affected a stabilization agreement with the A. F. of L. building trades.

The demand for explanation of the situation was made by Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, who said the investigating committee, which he heads, wished to know whether the OPM had a fixed policy to favor the A. F. of L.

Smith Denounces Delay

At the same time Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, termed the delay in the award the "most bold, brazen and outrageous effort to defraud the United States Government of which I ever heard."

He called for indictments against the A. F. of L. and an unnamed OPM official, and said that the stabilization agreement had the effect of giving the A. F. of L. a monopoly on all Federal construction.

In high OPM quarters, however, the charge was denied, officials pointing out that the stabilization agreement specifically permitted award of construction contracts to non-A. F. of L. contractors.

In the Currier case, however, OPM labor sources insisted, the C. I. O. is seeking to raid the established field of the A. F. of L. building trades. Award of the contract to Currier, a high official said, would result in "bloody chaos and civil war" in the Detroit area, and would spread far beyond the geographical and industrial bounds of Detroit and construction.

Refusal to permit the award of the contract, he said, would be defended to the Senate on the grounds that Currier could not complete construction without the employment of certain A. F. of L. craftsmen and deliverymen.

The agreement, he explained substituted time and one-half for the traditional A. F. of L. double time for overtime payments, and will save the Government between 200 and 300 million dollars on future defense construction, as compared to the $400,000 which might be saved on the Currier bid.

Although the A. F. of L. might have protested against the award of such a contract to a nonunion builder, he said, the OPM would nevertheless have granted it. In the Currier bid, however, the distinction lay in the complexion of the C. I. O. union, and the purposes of its leaders, he declared.

Last June President Roosevelt wrote Daniel J. Tobin, vice president of the A. F. of L. Building Trades Department and head of the A. F. of L. teamsters' union, that during the emergency, raiding by rival unions of each others' accepted fields was inimical to defense and that a truce should be declared.

The occasion was the grant of a C. I. O. charter by A. D. Lewis to former leaders of an A. F. of L. teamsters' local union in Minneapolis after they had been charged by the A. F. of L. with radicalism and Trotskyite leanings.

Lewis' Statement

Lewis, brother of John L. Lewis, former president of the C. I. O., last night issued a statement, as chairman of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.), declaring:

"When the Government says to a man that he must join a certain type of union, or none at all, it definitely marks the most backward step ever taken in the history of labor relations in this Nation . . .

"By what rule or reason or policy should any branch of labor or industry be denied an opportunity to participate on an equal basis in the defense program? . . .

"These are only a few of the vital questions raised by the reprehensible conduct of Sidney Hillman's division of the OPM in its stealthy efforts to enforce a deal with the building trades of the A. F. of L."

Cardinal Lauri, Camerlengo, Dies in Rome

By the Associated Press

Vatican City, Oct. 8.—Lorenzo Cardinal Lauri died today.

He was 76 years old, having been born October 15, 1864, in Rome.

Death came in a Rome hospital where the cardinal recently underwent an operation.

Pope Pius XII, who named him camerlengo on December 11, 1939, sent a special benediction to the cardinal last night. The last sacrament was administered last night.

The late Pope Pius XI raised him to the purple in 1927. He was chief penitentiary of the church under Pius XI and pronounced absolution for him as he lay dying in his little bedchamber in the Vatican Palace in the early morning of February 10, 1939.

As camerlengo under the new Pope, he would have acted as administrative head of the church, had Pius XII preceded him in death, in the period between the death of the present pontiff and the election of his successor.

Cardinal Lauri began his priestly work as a teacher of theology and after holding a number of lesser posts he was named papal nuncio in Lima, Peru, in 1917, with rank of archbishop. He remained there nearly four years and then was named papal nuncio in Warsaw, a post he held until he was created cardinal.

As a professor for many years he was the teacher and friend of a number of students who later rose to high positions in the church of the United States.

Among his pupils in Rome were Dennis Cardinal Dougherty of Philadelphia, and the late George Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago.

Hard-Pressed Reds Urge British Strike

Soviet command's admission that fighting was raging about Melitopol, on the pathway to Rostov on the River Don and to the Caucasus beyond. (The Germans already had claimed to be well beyond Melitopol with the seizure of the Sea of Azov ports of Ossipenko and Mariupol.)

ut it was on the Moscow approaches where the hour of greatest crisis was at hand.

There, in the greatest mechanized battle ever fought, the central Russian armies beat back desperately at a series of mighty concentric thrusts by which superior German forces were slowly extending their bloody salients.

In a terrible chaos on two ill-defined and shifting fronts, German advances were acknowledged here and there. But they were achieved, said Soviet military dispatches, at immense cost to the invaders—including more than 500 tanks destroyed—and by rushing up great new bodies of armored troops and infantry and fresh squadrons of dive bombers for this supreme test.

No major break-through, said the Russians, had been achieved.

Counterattacks Incessant

A single Red infantry division charging heedlessly with flaming bottles of gasoline was credited with exploding more than 300 German tanks; hundreds more were said to have been smashed by Soviet artillery fire and Soviet bombers, along with uncounted armored cars, trucks and troop transports.

Russian engineering companies, sweating under unending German fire, broke the bitter terrain with hundreds of miles of trenches and tank traps.

Before them division upon division of other Red combat troops counterattacked ceaselessly in efforts to smash back the lengthening projection from the Nazi line.

In one sector a Russian infantry unit destroyed 38 German tanks in repulsing a Nazi attack and inflicted heavy losses of men, a Russian communique said.

Air activity was not so extensive, the communique intimated, listing only 10 German planes downed on Moscow's approaches yesterday and six today.

Bombers Active in South

In the south, however, it credited Russian bombers in one day with destroying 81 German tanks, 180 trucks laden with ammunition, four cannon, four fuel tanks and many motorcycles.

The Russians declared that at least two of an undisclosed number of Nazi salients had been hammered back.

Moscow generally took the position that it was Hitler's last and greatest lunge before the onset of winter and that the German command was ready to write a frightful casualty roll rather than be balked in the coming snows.

While the situation in this greatest of theaters was acknowledged to be critical, continued and major Russian successes were reported from the Leningrad and Odessa fronts.

Before Leningrad, a strategic town was reported recaptured by Red troops which broke three strong German lines and threw the invaders far back from the city.

Report 9500 Slain

A single Russian division commanded by Maj. Gen. A. L. Bondarev, newly elevated from a colonelcy, reported killing 9500 German troops and the destruction in a single action of seven German artillery batteries and 35 antitank guns.

Too Late to Help Save Moscow, British Feel

London (Thursday), Oct. 9 (U.P.)—The German capture of Orel, 210 miles south of Moscow, and a semi-official appeal from Russia for British help caused grave anxiety today over the turn of events on the eastern front.

A suggestion from Moscow that now if ever was the time for the British army, navy and air force to go into action in the west struck a responsive note here but it did not answer the question, "How?"

Observers believed that in any event the chips were down in the battle for Moscow; that a decision probably would come within two weeks, and that the fate of the Soviet capital depends on what Marshal Timoshenko already has prepared in the way of defenses.

As for Britain intervening in time to help Moscow, observers pointed out that three plans have been discussed and that none seemed promising.

One would be an expedition to the continent and it was recalled that Lord Halifax, Ambassador to the United States, said recently on his return to Washington that Britain did not have the ships for such a venture.

Another plan would be an expedition into the Russian Caucasus, which authoritative sources now seem to rule out.

The third plan would be an offensive in various directions in the Mediterranean area. British Middle eastern forces are ready for major Eastern but, observers said, unfortunately an offensive there would have the least effect on German-Russian hostilities.

Roosevelt to Ask Arms for Ships Today

House Committee, will introduce identical bills. (Their legislative draftsmen jointly went to work yesterday.) But it already has been decided to speed the bill first through the House.

Hearings Open Monday

Chairman Bloom announced House hearings will open Monday and may be concluded Tuesday or Wednesday. He said he hoped the bill could reach the House floor by next Thursday. All underlined the time element in protecting American ships against attack.

A decision to oppose revision of the Neutrality Act to permit arming of merchantmen meanwhile was reached at a conference of Congressional opponents of the President's foreign policy.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, said about 60 members, from both parties, attended the conference and were "very determined" that at least a week of hearings should be held in the House.

"The main decision," said Taft, was to oppose in every way amendment to the Neutrality Act as being, in fact, an authorization to carry on war."

Limitation of the House bill to the armed merchantmen provision would not bar broadening amendments on the floor of either House or Senate.

The bill still might be amended in the Senate to permit direct delivery of lend-lease supplies by American ships to Allied ports, if this can be done without unreasonably prolonging debate.

In that event the bill could be sent back to the House, which is more closely divided, for concurrence.

Alfaro Criticizes Panama's Action

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 8 (AP).—Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, former President of Panama, in an interview today criticized that country's action in forbidding armed ships to fly the Panama flag.

"I have not had the opportunity to see the official text of reasons given for the action," said Dr. Alfaro, here for an address, "but press reports say it was based on neutrality.

"Neutrality exists no more and cannot exist as long as it is not respected by Germany. I believe the present world conflict amounts, in fact, to a war waged by totalitarian governments against democracies all over the world, and in such a conflict real democracies cannot be neutral."

He added that "there is no question that the present President of Panama, Arnulfo Arias, 'has been using entirely Nazi methods in his government and Panama today is a virtual dictatorship."

Dr. Alfaro now makes his home in Washington. He served as President of Panama in 1931-32, being defeated for the office at the end of this term by Harmodeo Arias, brother of the present President.

Agreed to Proceed

Agreement to proceed immediately with legislation to arm ships was reached at the second White House conference in two days, with House leaders called in for advice on strategy.

As spokesman for the group, Senate Majority Leader Barkley told reporters on leaving the White House of the decision to act first in the House but that he did not know whether the President would ask only arming of ships or repeal of section 2 as well.

Barkley said he personally favored repealing both sections so armed merchantmen could travel to belligerent ports, but "arming of ships, as a matter of timing, might be the most urgent."

Chairman Connally in a statement again stressed the desirability of both arming ships and permitting them to sail anywhere.

Urges Defense Right

"Men on American ships should have a right to defend themselves from attack just as men on land have such a right," Connally said. "They ought to have the weapons to make such a defense, to preserve their lives and their property."

Bloom told reporters that while he would like to see the entire act repealed, and authority for merchantmen to make deliveries at allied ports, no time should be lost in arming merchant vessels and Congress should authorize this much at once.

Under rules limiting debate the House is assured of a quick vote as soon as the bill is reported but there are no debate limits in the Senate.

Second Parley Held

Called in to tilt the balance in favor of this strategy were Speaker Sam Rayburn and House Majority Leader McCormack. Others invited to the second day's conference, who did not participate in the first, were House Minority Leader Martin and Representative Wadsworth (Republican), of New York, a leading House Republican supporter of the President's foreign policy.

Secretary of State Hull, Harry L. Hopkins, Presidential adviser, and Vice President Wallace again participated in the talks. From the Capital also went Senator Barkley, Senate Minority Leader McNary, Chairman Connally, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee; Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, former chairman of the committee; Senator Austin, of Vermont, assistant Senate Republican leader; Chairman Bloom, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee; Representative Luther Johnson (Democrat), of Texas, ranking majority member of the committee, and Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, minority member.

80,000 Slain in Axis Terror, Yugoslav Says

London (Thursday), Oct. 9 (U.P.)—Milan Grol, communications minister in the free Yugoslav government, charged today that 180,000 Serbs and Jews had been massacred, imprisoned or tortured into insanity in the former Yugoslavian state up to the end of August in an Axis-inspired terror.

A full German mechanized division recently blasted towns in Montenegro, slaughtering men, women and children, in an effort to wipe out suspected centers of guerrilla resistance, Grol asserted.

Grol listed these towns where he said "mass slaughter" has occurred:

Bihac, where "200 were killed and many more arrested."

Ljubljana, where "2500 were killed and more than 1000 wounded."

Donjilpac, where "3000 were killed."

Prijedor, where "1000 were killed."

Mostar, where "200 were killed in two nights."

Nevesinje, where "300 were killed."

In the southwestern mountain area, Grol said, the Germans ordered a mechanized division and a squadron of dive bombers to blast the area in cooperation with the Italians.

"Together they bombarded every village thought to be harboring guerrillas or supplying them," he said.

German artillery fire razed Ouiste Arba, where 12,000 lived, he said. Italian bombers, he charged, were attacking mountain villages daily.

Nazis Use Flame Throwers To Defeat Rebel Bands

By the Associated Press

Budapest, Oct. 8.—At least 90 persons have been killed in new mountain battles between a German army punitive expedition equipped with flame throwers, and Serbian insurgent bands, dispatches from Belgrade reported tonight.

The German expedition was said to have put hundreds of Serbs to death but to have met fierce resistance in some areas. Fighting from village to village, the Germans were met at times by bands numbering as many as 500 men, it was stated.

One large band was said to have attacked a village near the Morava River in the eastern part of Nazi-occupied Serbia.

After several hours of fighting the insurgents were said to have been routed. The Belgrade newspaper Novo Vreme said 31 men were killed, 80 wounded and 17 taken prisoner.

Jury Picked to Try Browne and Bioff

Pair Demanded Vast Sum From Movie Firms, Counsel Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 8.—A jury was completed today to hear evidence against George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes (A. F. L.) and William Bioff, West Coast labor leader, charged with violation of the Federal anti-racketeering act.

Prospective jurors were asked if they were prejudiced for or against labor unions or if they read a newspaper column written by Westbrook Pegler.

Judge Knox asked whether they had any fear of retaliation by unions if they rendered an adverse verdict.

United States Attorney Mathias Correa asserted in his opening statement that Browne and Bioff demanded two million dollars from the executives of four major motion picture companies under threat of wrecking their business.

Protection Pay

The demand was made at a meeting of producers and union representatives in 1935, Correa said, with each of the defendants alternately approaching the executives. He declared the defendants made it clear that the demand had no relation to labor matters, but that the film producers were to pay "for protection."

Browne and Bioff are being tried under an indictment alleging that they extorted $550,000 from Loew's, Inc.; Warner Brothers, Inc.; Paramount Pictures, Inc., and Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation between 1935 and May of 1941.

Both defendants, the prosecutor said, informed the producers that they regarded Browne's position solely as a means to exact money from the companies to line their own pockets, and Correa added that they indicated that Browne had been elected president for just that purpose.

Correa said the companies had little choice when faced by the demand because the executives knew that a strike could close their theaters, interfere with box-office receipts and cause tremendous losses.

No Brief for Executives

"The Government holds no brief for the executives of these companies," Correa continued. "Undoubtedly they should have been more courageous, but the fact remains that they paid."

The payments ranged from "$10,000 to $50,000 at a clip," Correa declared, and he asserted that "it was paid—$400,000 of it—in cash."

The other $150,000 he said, was paid in a manner devised by executives of Loew's Inc. The executives did not want to pay cash out of company funds, Correa said, but arranged for the purchase of raw film from the Dupont Co., for which a Hollywood sales agency paid back a 7 per cent commission to nominees of Browne and Bioff.

Judge John C. Knox adjourned the trial at the end of Correa's statement.

Girls' Job Ad Gets Replies In Kind

By Martin Kane
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 8.—Two girls who believe firmly that they can act but in a pinch are willing to try parachute-jumping, published a classified ad in a morning paper today and by tonight had what appeared to be ten bona fide offers of employment, 16 invitations to dinner, a bottle of scotch, and numerous proposals which ranged from the romantic to the whimsical.

The girls are Gay Churchill, 21, a brunette, and Bartan Lowell, 20, a strawberry blonde. They were graduated from college this June, met while acting in summer stock, and set out a month ago to storm New York, preferably as actresses. When New York refused to be stormed and their feet began to hurt, they ran this ad:

"Wanted—employment for two young women in early twenties; A. B. degrees, intelligent, attractive, whimsical, ambitious, literary, poverty-stricken. Can act, model, dance, sing, act, knit, sew, paint, decorate act sell ride horseback, read to invalids, swim, act, play hockey, walk dogs, play bridge, teach, speak French, German, Greek, Russian, Latin, fence, act, direct, design, construct, act, cook, mix drinks, play piano and ukelele (sic—they can't spell ukulele), compose, act, wash dogs, parachute jump, play tennis, hook rugs, mind children, act, psychoanalyse, debate, garden, photograph and act. Phone Chelsea 3-3059 between 5:30 and 9 p. m."

No one paid any attention to the last phrase. The phone began to ring at 5 a. m. The early calls came mostly from lonely men who had been out all night and had no place to go. George Kim Low, a chinese mortician, telephoned during the morning. He had no job to offer but inquired politely how the girls were making out.

"A couple of fathers called about their children," Miss Lowell reported. "One of them wanted to know if we could beat his brats to a pulp."

Slightly hoarse from repeating constantly, "Thank you, but we'd much rather have a job than a dinner date," Miss Lowell said she had accepted an offer to polish a flagpole for $5 but wasn't sure it was genuine. The man said he would bring it to their Greenwich Village apartment tomorrow. She had to turn down a "serious" offer of a job at taking Chinese in shorthand. The Bronx Zoo, or a reasonable facsimile, inquired if the girls could shave a baboon.

"And then there was a man with an intimate voice who said he wanted a companion, but he didn't seem to be an invalid," she recounted between dashes to the phone.

Early this evening a portly, bald man with a sociable look in his eye, puffed up the four flights of stairs to the girls' apartment. He was admitted, but when he saw a photographer and two reporters present he mumbled something about a "job in Wall Street" and catching a train. He departed hurriedly, leaving the scotch.

So far, however, the girls have had 10 offers which seem to promise acceptable jobs. One is to act in an amateur play which needs professional talent to bolster it, three are for receptionists' positions, a doubtful one is to demonstrate a scalp treatment on a commission basis, and others are for a florist's saleswoman, to do the schottische in a floor show, to walk a dog, and to do modeling.

Warden's Slayer Condemned to Die

McAlester, Okla., Oct. 8 (AP).—Convict Hiram Prather, 34, was convicted today by a District Court jury of murdering Warden Jess Dunn during a bloody prison break August 10 and was sentenced to death. The State contended that Prather, one of four convicts who seized Dunn as a hostage, fired the shot that killed the warden.

Three other convicts in the break were wounded fatally by Deputy Sheriff Bill Alexander, who trapped them in a dead end street as they fled the prison in a commandeered automobile. At the time of the break, Prather was serving a life term for murder.

shortage. They said, however, that surpluses are precariously low or nonexistent.

One production manager, whose name and dairy are withheld at his request, said that the water shortage is particularly grave around Frederick and Walkersville, Md.

"Farmers are having to carry water for their stock," he said, "and many of them are even having their milk cans washed at the plant to conserve water on the farm."

The picture he gave dovetails with the weekly crop weather bulletin issued yesterday by the Weather Bureau, which discloses a dismal situation.

Last month was Washington's driest September since 1884.

Maryland's precipitation during the month was only 14 per cent of normal, Virginia's 40 per cent.

"The unusual features of this year's rainfall," said the bulletin, "are emphasized by comparing Kansas, normally a relatively dry State, with Virginia in the humid area of the country, having 50 per cent more rainfall, on the average. This year, through September, Kansas has had nearly 15 per cent more rainfall than Virginia."

The Old Dominion's deficiency of 8.35 inches for the nine-month period is the equivalent of 950 tons for every acre of land.

As in Maryland, Virginia's wells and streams are drying up and in many places farmers are being forced to carry water for live stock. Pastures are very poor.

The drought is strictly Eastern, the normally dry Western half of the country having had plenty of rainfall.

LOST CHILD IN HOSPITAL—This, the first picture of Pamela Hollingsworth since she was found in a New Hampshire mountain wilderness, shows the 5-year-old child in a Conway hospital. After being lost eight days, she was found in "reasonable health"

By the Associated Press

Conway, N. H., Oct. 8.—As Pamela Hollingworth, 5, gained strength in a hospital today after her ordeal of being lost in a forest for eight days, County Solicitor Burnham Davis ruled out any possibility that she had been kidnaped.

So incredulous were many persons—including some veteran woodsmen—at the child's stamina that they freely expressed belief that she had been abducted, held in a cabin or some such place and then released on a mountain trail.

Taking recognition of the skepticism, which appeared to be widespread, Davis called newsmen to his office and told them:

"I have found absolutely no evidence to support a theory of kidnaping."

Medical men, who examined the girl shortly after she was found by a searching party late Monday, said her condition was consistent with having been outdoors for the entire period.

She lost eight pounds from lack of food, and her toes suffered frostbite when the temperature dropped to the low 20's about midway between the time she wandered from a family picnic and the time she was found.

Missing Boy Found

Iron Mountain, Mich., Oct. 8 (AP).—Dennis Ludlow, 2½-year-old boy missing since late yesterday, was found today, alive and well, wandering in a marsh about a mile from his home.

The baby was found asleep on a grassy knoll in the marsh by Alfred Hinckley, one of 1200 students who had been dismissed from school to aid in the search.

Clad in a snug snow suit, cap and muffler, the child appeared in good health, despite his night in the marsh with the temperature in the thirties. Hinckley took the baby to the Ludlow home where the parents, tears streaming down their cheeks, hugged him and put him to bed.

Syracuse Housewives Fight Milk Price Rise

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Oct. 8.—A group of housewives, proclaiming "this is milk, not fur coats," organized today to halt an impending milk price rise they feared would deprive their children of the product.

The movement was touched off by a mother of four children, attractive 33-year-old Mrs. Carol Nye. She became aroused at a three-day-old A. F. of L. drivers and dairy plant workers' strike for higher wages which, if successful, the city's largest dairy said, would force higher prices.

Tonight, however, the dairy workers voted to accept mediation of their demands and in return resume deliveries to homes and stores tomorrow morning.

Describing herself as "just an ordinary housewife," Mrs. Nye took over as temporary chairman of "organized housewives," dispatched volunteer workers in a block by block enrollment campaign, and at the end of the first day's kitchen canvass reported results "very encouraging."

"Our husbands tell us we can't do this and we can't do that," asserted Mrs. Nye. "We can. There is no more powerful group than the housewives if they act together."

The campaign opened with a newspaper advertisement calling housewives attention to another possible rise in milk prices and asking:

"What are you going to do about it?"

"Let's organize," Mrs. Nye's notice urged. "Farmers, producers and drivers are organized. Why not housewives?"

This type of "sales talk," Mrs. Nye said, brought encouraging results in a canvass of 30 city blocks in the city of 205,000 residents. "Organized housewives," she added, hopes to enlist aid of women's clubs and obtain 10,000 members to protest a milk price increase and possibly boycott dealers.

"We are not concerned with problems of the drivers, farmers or producers," observed Mrs. Nye. "We are only concerned with the welfare of the community. If the price of milk goes up we are forced to use less of it and the health of the community is undermined.

"This is milk, not fur coats."

Denied home deliveries since Monday because of the truck drivers' strike, the housewives have been saving four cents a quart by making purchases at dairy plants for 10 and 11 cents. Home deliveries are 14 and 15 cents.

Congressional Frank's Use Laid to Viereck

of unaddressed franked envelopes of members of the House and Senate. Later investigation uncovered the fact that a few hours after he was summoned, Dennett got rid of 20 mailbags full of similar franked envelopes, using a House truck sent by the office of Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York.

The grand jurors also accused Viereck of putting out propaganda through Flanders Hall, Inc., Scotch Plains, N. J., which, the indictment said, Viereck "financed, controlled and directed." Through this firm, said the indictment, Viereck published books which were translations or adaptions of books produced by Deutche Informationstelle Berlin.

Publications Listed

These productions, said the indictment, included "Lord Lothian vs. Lord Lotham," "The Hapless Boers," "Democracy on the Nile," "Misadventure in Scandinavia," "War Against Women and Children," "The Whipping Block," "Turkey Reborn," "Inhumanity Unlimited," "What About Africa" and "Doublecross in Palestine"

The Flanders Hall firm is the one which published a book called "We Must Save the Republic," over the signature of Representative Stephen A. Day (Republican), of Illinois, one of those whose franks were found in Dennett's office.

Mr. Day told The Post: "I wrote the book myself without aid or collaboration of anybody as an answer to 'Union Now.' I never got any royalties from Flanders Hall. As soon as I found out that those fellows were registered as foreign agents I bought my contract back at considerable cost and it is now being handled by an American house, Shaw Publishing Co., of Washington. I don't know Mr. Viereck at all. I have seen Mr. Dennett but I never sent any of my franks to any society except America First, the American Coalition and some women's groups."

Wrote Under Many Names

Beside establishing these instrumentalities, the grand jurors charged, Viereck handled propaganda himself, "and caused the same to be printed, published and distributed in magazines, periodicals and newspapers under false and fictitious names including, among others, James Burr Hamilton, George F. Corners, Donald Furtherman Wicketts, William L. Stidger and Dr. Claudius Murchison, for the purpose, among others, of concealing from the public of the United States the true name and identity of the writer."

Reached by the Associated Press in Boston, Dr. Claudius Murchison, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said he was "totally unable to explain" the use of his name.

"I didn't recall even seeing Viereck until I checked my files today and saw that he came to me about five years ago for information about Japanese textile imports into the United States," Murchison declared.

Federal agents with a bench warrant took Viereck in custody at his Riverside Drive apartment, adorned with pictures of Hitler and Dr. Goebbles, its bookshelves packed with the books and articles he has written to depict Kaiser Wilhelm as a wronged statesman and Hitler as a champion of peace.

Small, slender and graying, with the quiet dress, heavy spectacles and diffident manner of a "typical" college professor, the 57-year-old Viereck has been the acknowledged leader of pro-German thought in this country all his adult life. Born in Munich in 1885, he came to America 10 years later with his father, from whose naturalization the son claims American citizenship.

Shortly after the World War began, he wrote "The Fatherland," a passionate defense of Germany. In the years that followed he opposed American entry in the war. During the twenties Viereck wrote and edited poetry and essays. His novel "My First Two Thousand Years," an imaginative story of the "Wandering Jew," achieved celebrity. In this period also he sought to vindicate the German position in the war.

As Hitler came to power, Viereck again took up the battle for Germany, hailing Hitler in 1936 as an apostle of peace and the Axis in 1939 as "the backbone of the world." Later he registered himself as a German agent, reporting a salary of about $2500 a month.

Haled before United States Commissioner Isaac Platt yesterday, Viereck listened cheerfully while Attorney Daniel D. Cohalen, jr., and Emil Morosini, jr., pleaded for a low bond.

Viereck Issued Statement

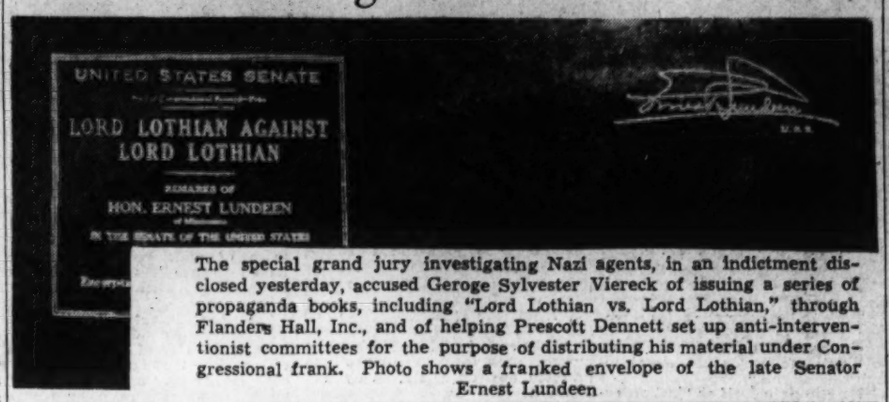
"Because of Viereck's connections with the German government," reported Special Prosecutor Maloney, there is a great possibility he will never be here for trial." Commissioner Platt set the bail at $20,000 and Viereck set himself to composing a long statement, in which he said:

"If I had worked for war as I have for peace I would not now stand indicted. My real crime, what ever the accusation against me may be, is twofold: I am an American of German blood and I oppose the desperate and despicable attempt to catapult our country into Europe's war . . .

"My indictment is only an incident in the perfidious plot to smother and smear all opposition to the arbitrary forces cunningly at work to destroy the America we know and love."

Viereck's attorneys appealed to Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum, who permitted a $15,000 bail after Viereck agreed not to resist removal to Washington.

Under Congressional Frank . . .



The special grand jury investigating Nazi agents, in an indictment disclosed yesterday, accused Geroge Sylvester Viereck of issuing a series of propaganda books, including "Lord Lothian vs. Lord Lothian," through Flanders Hall, Inc., and of helping Prescott Dennett set up anti-interventionist committees for the purpose of distributing his material under Congressional frank. Photo shows a franked envelope of the late Senator Ernest Lundeen

Fish's Secretary To Testify Today

George Hill, a secretary of Representative Hamilton Fish, will have a chance today to tell what he knows about the mailbags full of franked speeches to the special grand jury investigating German agents.

Hill was summoned earlier this week.

Hill gave the order for an official truck of the House of Representatives which called at the headquarters of Prescott Dennett, 1430 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, early on September 19, a few hours after Dennett was summoned in the Nazi agent inquiry.

Dennett is secretary-treasurer of the Make Europe Pay and Island for War Debts Committees, which the grand jury charged Tuesday were financed by George Sylvester Viereck, indicted German agent, so Viereck could use them to get material in the mails under Congressional frank.

Twenty Mail Bags

Into the House truck, Dennett loaded 20 mailbags crammed with unaddressed Congressional franked envelopes containing anti-interventionist speeches. The truck delivered 12 of the bags to the America First Committee and eight more to the House Office Building, where Hill ordered them placed in a storeroom on the sixth floor, which contained a bin used by Representative Fish.

When the transaction was revealed by The Post a week afterward, Mr. Fish said he knew nothing about the mailbags, later saying that the truck was sent to get 500 copies of one of his speeches which Dennett had. Representative Fish said his secretary refused to accept the mailbags when they arrived.

On Saturday, September 27, Representative Fish's office announced some mailbags had been "found" in the storeroom on the sixth floor. These were discovered to contain unaddressed franked envelopes.

The grand jury before which Hill will be questioned began its Nazi agent inquiry on September 16, hearing Special Assistant Attorneys General George A. McNulty, Edward J. Hickey and William Power Maloney, of the propaganda squad of the Department of Justice.

The first witness, Frank B. Burch, Akron, Ohio, lawyer and nonintervention ist, was indicted a week later as an unregistered agent of the German government. Then two weeks later the grand jury indicted Viereck.

The inquiry is expected to last several weeks more, the jury having been continued in authority until January.

Bridges Case Witness Guilty Of Perjury

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Oct. 8.—James O'Neil, former C. I. O. publicity man, was convicted of perjury today for his testimony in Harry Bridges' deportation hearing.

Federal Judge Martin I. Welsh sentenced O'Neil to three years imprisonment and fined him $100.

At his own trial and at Bridges' hearing, O'Neil denied he ever had seen the California C. I. O. director paste dues stamps in a Communist Party membership book.

FBI agents testified at both hearings that he had told of seeing Bridges' paste in the stamps but had refused to sign the statement and said he wouldn't give such testimony from the witness stand.

Trial Examiner Charles B. Sears has recommended that Bridges be deported to Australia as a Communist and an undesirable alien.

Biddle Vows Prompt Action on Bridges

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Biddle said yesterday that the Justice Department would "act as promptly as we can" in disposing of the deportation proceedings pending against Harry Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader.

Biddle told his press conference that "I do not propose to cut any corners, however, and Bridges is not going to be treated any differently from any other case."

He expressed the belief that the case, which now is pending before the Imigration Board of Appeals, would reach him in two months or less. He declared that "the ultimate responsibility is on me and I intend to take it."

Bus Strike Leader Seized on U. S. Charge

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—A few minutes after John Santo, 33, an organizer of the Transport Workers Union (C. I. O.) and a leader in a recent New York City bus strike, was released from Ellis Island today in $1000 bail on charges of having entered the country illegally, he was taken into custody by Federal agents.

He was taken to the Federal Building to answer a charge of falsely representing himself as a citizen to Selective Service officials.

The Immigration charges against Santo will be heard before a special board of inquiry at Ellis Island on October 25.

Labor Chief Fears British Might Revolt

By the United Press

London, Oct. 8.—Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, conceding to critics that at least one phase of Britain's classification of manpower should be changed, hinted in Commons today of the possibility of a revolt if the government adopted extreme measures concerning labor.

"I would be stupid, with all of my long association with working people and having been engaged in the wage problem so long, if I ignored the possible repercussions of taking an unwise step," he said in answering critics of the government's use of manpower. "The Germans tried leveling wages and ordering overtime. This led to revolt even in Germany."

This statement was regarded in parliamentary circles as reflecting Bevin's fears of repercussions if the government adopted overdrastic measures in its efforts to mobilize Britain's full strength for the war effort.

Double-Purpose Army

"As minister of labor and national service," he said, "I would have liked to have had the country trained and manned for a double-purpose army such as Germany has. I would have liked to have seen an army where the whole nation was trained for war both in fighting and production.

"But," he added, "you have to begin that before, not in war."

He said, "Everybody says I must not have skilled men out of munitions industries, but fighting is not a question of what trade you are in."

"Fighting," he said, "means you have to have regard for the temperament of fighting as well. The proportion taken from professions and trades for fighting for what will be the front line is far too high."

Disparity in Numbers

One critic of Government policy said that "our enemy today has some 310 million people, of which 182 million are available for war work." We have between 44 million and 45 million of which not more than 18 million are available for work of any kind."

In reply, Bevin said that he did not want "to lead the people into the defeatist attitude that because of the greater population of Germany we are overwhelmed."

"That is not so," he said, "but there is no use in ignoring what we are up against."

Kansas Tornado Leaves Irony In Its Wake

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 8 (U.P.).—A farmer found a letter addressed to Mrs. Dorothy Lucas in his pasture 90 miles from Kansas City today, where it had been blown by a tornado that ripped through the city Monday night.

The letter read:

"Dear Dorothy:

"We are so glad to hear that you are in your new home. We can hardly wait to see it. It must be nice and such a satisfaction to feel it is your own. It will be so nice for Diane to have a place where she can have her feet on the ground."

Mrs. Lucas and her 18-month-old daughter, Diane, were killed when the tornado demolished their new home.

WAS DEAF and NOW HEARS CLOCK TICK

A. M. Beekhouse, Newark, N. J., writes: "Before using Orotone Ear Drops, I was so deafened that I could not hear the clock tick. After using Orotone, I can now hear the clock tick with both ears." Thousands now hard-of-hearing would hear clearly and distinctly again, and gain relief from buzzing, ringing head noises, clogged up feeling in ears, if inspected wax that blocks ear canals and presses on sensitive eardrums was removed. Try Orotone Ear Drops as directed. They are safe and contain an ingredient especially recommended for this purpose.

29th Shifts Sides In Midst of 'War'

Not Being Disloyal; Transfer Is Just Part of the Game

By Marshall Andrews
By a Staff Correspondent

Chesterfield, S. C., Oct. 8.—Under a pall of dust which clouded acres of cotton fields south of here, the Twenty-ninth Division late today moved into position for battle the next two days against Pennsylvania's Twenty-eighth.

At the same time, the Twenty-ninth changed colors, becoming part of the Red force which theoretically crushed the right flank of the Blue Second Corps last night with an armored column and was thrusting an infantry division through the gap. It also will be a grudge fight when Twenty-ninth and Twenty-eighth meet in the cotton rows and briar patches of Chesterfield County. Last year at Ogdensburg the Twenty-ninth defeated the Twenty-eighth by an ancient ruse.

As a matter of fact, the battle to come in the next two days would not have happened at all had this been a shooting war instead of a maneuver. Instead of crushing the Blue right flank yesterday, the Red mechanized force was halted at every point by Blue antitank gunners who climaxed their counter-blitz last night by surrounding and capturing 23 Red tanks in the town of Chesterfield.

Forty-fourth Moved North

Since this maneuver is for training and since the present phase of training includes rapid troop movements, the Forty-fourth was pulled out of the line this morning as scheduled and sent North to join the Sixth Corps. The Twenty-eighth was moved across the old front to the position it would have occupied had the maneuver gone according to schedule. And the Twenty-ninth made a leisurely march to a new line extending from North to South and facing westward, where it rested tonight.

In theory the tanks have thrust a spearhead through the right of the Blue line and the Twenty-ninth must follow through, turn right and fight its way northward and back eastward to the Pee Dee River, encircling the Blue left. The Red command is not supposed to know the Twenty-ninth stands across the path of this infantry division.

For the maneuver the Twenty-ninth has been given the 187th Field Artillery Regiment, making a total of two regiments of 155-millimeter howitzers and an antiaircraft battalion. The 109th Infantry has been detached from the Twenty-eighth, but that division has been reinforced by the 244th Coast Artillery, whose 155-millimeter guns outrange and outshoot anything possessed by the Twenty-ninth.

Joker in Game

This Infantry regiment, detached from the Twenty-eighth and placed under corps control, is the wild card in the game. It may be added at any time to either side to influence the course of the battle, and neither division will know, until it is thrown into the fight, where it will go.

Eleven men of the 108th Field Artillery, Twenty-eighth Division, were injured today, two seriously, when a 155 howitzer and its prime mover crashed through a bridge between Chesterfield and Mount Croghan. It was the Twenty-eighth's third serious motor accident since arriving in the maneuver area.

The 121st Engineers, from the District of Columbia, today announced promotions of four officers. Capt. William B. Eubank, of Richmond, was advanced to major, and Second Lieuts. James Stephen Caples, of Washington; Arnold W. Ellis, of Richmond, and Thomas P. Love, of Norfolk, to first lieutenants.

The Dead Past

Sisters Live 16 Years With Corpses

By Leigh Culley
Copyright, International News Service

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 8.—Deep in the pine woods 20 miles south of Jacksonville I have found to be true a weird, fantastic story of two old-maid sisters who for more than 16 years have lived with, and guarded, the bodies of three unburied dead.

Mrs. William P. Bacheller, of Newport, R. I., a younger adopted sister of the two eccentrics, told me the story. It is a strange tale of women who could not permit anyone they loved or cared for ever to be put into the ground.

Mrs. Bacheller said she had placed her sister, Gertrude Anhorn, 74, in a rest home in St. Augustine. She said she would have the long-dead bodies of her father, her sister and the old Negro servant buried as quickly as she could get them away from her 68-year-old sister, Minnie.

Mrs. Bacheller said the bodies of her father, Elbert Anhorn, dead since 1931 and her sister, Fannie, dead since 1925 are in a one-room shanty which her sister, Minnie, never leaves. Both bodies are in hermetrically sealed steel caskets. The Negro servant's body is in a barnlike structure a little distance from the one containing those of father and daughter. It has been there since 1923.

Saw Negro's Face

It is in a cloth-covered wood coffin. Resting on two boxes under the coffin are two buckets of lime. The cover of the coffin is split. There is no doubt the Negro is in the coffin, for I saw his face. The features still are clear. The skin of the face is like saddle leather.

Standing in the shade of a rotten old building which once was the exclusive Pinehurst Seminary, run by Gertrude and Fannie Anhorn, Mrs. Bacheller told me the complete story. From 1890 to 1918, Pinehurst Seminary flourished.

The widowed Elbert Anhorn, with three of his young daughters came to Florida in 1882 and bought 40 acres of land.

Anhorn was 87 when he died in 1921. By then the school was on the decline, probably because of its inaccessibility. The last student left the following year.

Fannie Anhorn, the teacher, died in 1925. The Negro servant had preceded her in death by two years.

Visitors Discouraged

From the time of their father's death, Gertrude and Minnie Anhorn went nowhere and discouraged visitors. As time passed the property of the Anhorn sisters dwindled away and the buildings fell into disrepair.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Bacheller received a wire sent by a neighbor of her sisters. Mrs. Bacheller left for Florida immediately.

The neighbor had found Gertrude lying unconscious across a wheelbarrow. She was near death from starvation.

In a small, tree-hidden hut was the other sister, Minnie. She was near starvation herself, but she would not let the neighbor into her house.

Mrs. Bacheller said she wanted to sell the estate's antiques to have money enough to keep her sisters comfortable the rest of their days.

Biddle Upholds Wire Tapping

Hoover "certainly will stay" and that there was no intention of Arnold leaving.

Biddle said that as a matter of policy the Justice Department would study "with the greatest care" cases involving freedom of expression. He said that a line would be drawn between the mere expression of opinion and incitement to action.

"I think the situation today is very different from the war of 20 years ago," he said, "because the new technique is infiltration of government. I think that everybody is alive to the infiltration by fifth columns abroad and I don't think that we ought to ignore it."

Further Facts Show Britain Is Winning Battle of Atlantic

By William R. Spear
Associated Press Staff Writer

Indications multiplied yesterday that Britain is winning the upper hand in the vital "Battle of the Atlantic" while Adolf Hitler concentrates on the war in Russia.

Secrecy shrouds whatever naval measures have been taken against the German submarines and airplanes athwart the Atlantic supply routes between the United States and the British Isles, but the result is apparent from recent developments.

In fact, Lord Woolton, British minister of food, told the House of Lords in London yesterday in so many words that "we have been getting the better of the enemy in the Atlantic—a task in which we are now receiving most valuable American aid." This was demonstrated, he said, by the fact that the British now hold reserves of bulky commodities such as wheat and sugar which make the heaviest demands on shipping.

Likewise Harry L. Hopkins, lend-lease coordinator, was reported to have told the conference of Congressional leaders at the White House considering revision of the Neutrality Act that on the whole supplies from this country now were reaching Britain safely.

And hearings on the new lend-lease appropriation made public yesterday disclosed that Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission had testified that Germany would fail to block delivery of lend-lease supplies unless sinkings were increased to a point "greater than they have ever been before in the history of the world."

Although Land said that 25 per cent of the world's 1939 shipping "now is in Davy Jones' locker," he declared that the United States could build 12 to 14 million tons of ships in 1942 and 1943 "and there is no record of continuous losses greater than that, with the possible exception of the submarine sinkings for a month or two during the last war."

Significance was seen also in the reduction of war-risk insurance rates on British and Allied cargoes from the Western Hemisphere to Portugal and Gibraltar, ordered yesterday by the American Marine Insurance Underwriters, and Secretary of Interior Ickes' announcement that "due to greatly diminished sinkings," Britain soon might release 10 or 15 American tankers which had been diverted to her service.

But while the Atlantic situation appeared more favorable for Britain at present, Hopkins and other officials have warned that it is impossible to foresee what the future situation may be. The Administration's plans for arming American merchant ships obviously reflect a determination to clinch whatever advantage has been gained so far.

Gibson Denied Release From Prison on Writ

James E. Gibson, sentenced in Arlington County Circuit Court in March, 1940, to serve 30 years for felonious assault, yesterday was denied his release in habeas corpus proceedings before the Virginia Supreme Court at Richmond.

Gibson was one of five prisoners whose petitions were denied, the Associated Press reported.

Soviet System Not for Us, Says Mark Sullivan

American style competition is far to be preferred to Soviet collectivism, Mark Sullivan told the Advertising Club of Washington yesterday.

Interspersing his luncheon talk at the Raleigh Hotel with dashes of humor, the noted author-columnist said the Russian system of state ownership and employership is not for the United States, whatever its proponents may claim.

In this country, he asserted, working for the Government is all right because employes have their freedom and the Government is dependent upon taxation of private wealth. Transplanted to Russia, they would find themselves stunted and bound.

Moscow's vaunted freedom of religion is a delusion because preachers in the pulpits cannot speak as they please, said Sullivan. Free religion is impossible without freedom of press and speech, he asserted.

Sullivan was introduced by Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post. Reid Wallace, president of the Advertising Club, presided.

Shots Menace Children As Man Is Slain

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Two gunmen firing at an automobile driver in Brooklyn late today scattered several hundred children as they left school. Their victim, identified as Peter Mancuso, 22, was killed with bullets through the heart and head.

At least 10 shots were fired while the children were strolling by. They fled into hallways or ducked behind parked cars. The gunmen escaped. Police began a search for them in the belief that Mancuso, described as a smalltime dice game operator, had split with one or both of them in a dice game partnership.

3 Nations Act to Stop All Oil to Japan

By the Associated Press

The United States, Great Britain and the refugee government of the Netherlands, it was learned authoritatively yesterday, have agreed to stop all oil shipments to Japan.

Whatever oil Japan may be getting, responsible officials said, is coming from places other than the territories controlled by the three governments.

The agreement was made shortly after the three governments on July 26 froze all Japanese assets in their territories.

Before that, the United States, the Dutch East Indies and various British possessions were the principal sources for oil for Japan.

The only oil that has left the United States for Japan since July 26 was about $25,000 worth alloted to the Japanese passenger liner Tatuta Maru, to enable her to return to Japan. The Tatuta Maru was permitted to come into port after the freezing order so that it could disembark its American passengers, and cargo, including silk. While trade between the United States and Japan has been theoretically possible since July 26, officials said there had been virtually none, since the United States Treasury must give permission for the Japanese either to bring in or take out any property or money.

Inflation Ban On Pay, Farm Prices Asked

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Spokesmen for the National Association of Manufacturers yesterday told the House Banking Committee that there can be no effective legislative control of inflation unless Congress is willing to restrain both wages and farm prices.

What the association wants, "in substance," declared Noel Sargent, its secretary, is the "Baruch plan or the Gore plan."

Inflation-control principles advocated by Bernard M. Baruch, World War Industries Board chairman, are embodied in a bill submitted to the committee by Representative Gore (Democrat), of Tennessee. The measure would establish price levels in effect this week on wages, rent and all wholesale prices except those on agricultural commodities, which would be restrained at parity.

Assail Proposed Bill

Sargent and C. Donald Dallas, president of the Revere Copper and Brass Co., called "ineffective" and "unworkable" the Administration's price bill which would make price-control permissive and specially exempt wage restrictions.

"There can be no effective or fair control of finished goods prices unless all principal elements of cost are included," said Dallas. This should specifically include either prior or simultaneous control of rents, interest rates, farm prices and wages."

But, he added, no price control measure stands "even a fair chance of helping to prevent inflation," unless restraining steps are taken in other sectors of the national economy.

"What we will need should include a defense financing method which will not stimulate inflation; a tax program which will curb inflation; restrictions on installment selling which will curb runaway buying."

Dallas told the committee that price-control legislation might be considered "unsound, unbalanced, or detrimentally administered," unless it provides:

1. For administration through a board or commission in preference to a single administrator as proposed in the Administration bill.

2. For the inclusion of "specific safeguards."

3. For control of "recalcitrant employers" through the priorities power or by civil penalties rather than by means of licensing provisions.

"Wages constitute a very large percentage of the final cost of any article," Dallas said, "and in any short period, on the average, higher wages will inevitably mean higher costs and higher prices."

"It is unfair and unrealistic," he continued, "to control 10 per cent of all prices and leave 90 per cent alone, especially when the 90 per cent enters into the costs of the 10 per cent."

Sargent told the committee he could see no obstacle to fixing wages as of a certain date, subject to adjustment for "hardship cases," and that the same principle might be applied to prices and rents.

"If all other segments of the Nation's economic life are to be regulated, I think it might be proper to put a ceiling on profits, as well," he declared.

In response to a question from Representative Williams (Democrat), of Missouri, acting committee chairman, Sargent said he thought average industrial earnings over "a period of years" might be made the basis of "rasonable profit."

He stated a belief that the workingman will assent to wage restrictions "if Congress should declare wage control to be in the public interest."

Georgetown U. Law School Confers Degrees On Class of 19 at Fall Convocation

JUSTICE LAWS SPEAKS—The Georgetown University School of Law yesterday staged its fall convocation and formal opening of the academic year. Justice Bolitha Laws, of United States District Court, addressed the students. Left to right—George E. Hamilton, dean of the law school; the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, university president; Justice Laws; Thomas Morton Gachet, of Clio, Ala., and Dee Clark Blythe, of Clovis, N. Mex., both of whom were awarded bachelor of laws degrees

At the fall convocation of the Georgetown University School of Law yesterday degrees of bachelor of law were conferred by the Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of the university, upon 19 students.

The exercises also marked the formal opening of the new academic year and prizes for standing in the morning and afternoon courses were presented to undergraduates.

Associate Justice Bolitha James Laws of the United States District Court, who was graduated from Georgetown in 1913, delivered the principal address. Other charges were made by Dr. O'Leary and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the law school. The candidates had completed their work towards degrees at the summer sessions.

The candidates for degrees presented by Dean George E. Hamilton were as follows: Clark D. Anderson, Dee C. Blythe, John F. Doyle, Thomas M. Gachet, Harry B. Garfield, William J. Gibbons, Samuel T. Giunta, William E. Jenkinson, jr., Gerard P. Kavenaugh, Harold P. Kehoe, George L. Keller, Albert C. Lazure, Samuel Z. Montoya, Charles J. Peters, Kermith F. Ross, Edward J. Stanton, Thomas A. Steele, Burton R. Thorman and Irwin McG. Warder.

Prizes in the two morning classes were presented as follows: Second year class—Timothy P. Ansberry, first prize; Charles L. Decker, second prize. First-year class—Albert C. Burrows, first, and Eugene E. Klecan, second.

In the three afternoon classes: Third-year class—Walter Gutmann, first; James A. McKenna, second. Second year—Philip J. Curtis, first; Jay Julien, second. First year—John S. Bulman, first, and James C. McKay, second.

Speed Machine Tool Output, Knudsen Urges

Warning that the defense demand for machine tools will grow ever greater, OPM Director General William S. Knudsen yesterday formally requested the machine tool industry to work its critical tools seven days a week and to increase wherever possible the man hours on night shifts.

Knudsen's appeal was in a letter to Frederick V. Geier, president of the National Machine Tool Builders Association, now in convention.

The defense chief declared that the addition of a relatively small quantity of critical tools "would materially help to balance and increase the general output of all tools." The major difficulties, Knudsen noted, were encountered in the scarcity of large tools. He promised that the OPM would make every effort to secure any idle tools now available in non-defense industries.

Darden Already Sends Out Bids To Inauguration

By the Associated Press

Representative Anderson (Republican), of California, read to the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday a letter he had received from former Representative Darden, of Virginia, inviting his former committee colleagues to his inauguration as Governor of Virginia in January.

Representative Hess (Republican), of Ohio, laughingly protested that Darden "hadn't been elected yet."

"For heaven's sake," Anderson retorted, "what more do you want than the Democratic nomination in Virginia?"

Drop Charges In LangerCase, Prober's Ask

By the Associated Press

The Senate Elections Committee recommended yesterday that charges of irregularities in the election of Senator William Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, be dropped, but it ordered public hearings on the question of his fitness to hold office.

Chairman Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said the committee would investigate charges of moral turpitude lodged against the North Dakota Senator. This will be at hearings at which he said Langer would be given an opportunity to testify personally and to produce supporting witnesses.

The full committee unanimously approved a subcommittee report, made after a two-months inquiry in North Dakota by special investigators.

The subcommittee recommended the dismissal of fraud charges growing out of last November's election, as well as allegations concerning fees and "kick-backs" Langer was charged with having received when he was Governor of North Dakota. The subcommittee, headed by Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, reported it found evidence insufficient to support these charges.

In a voluminous printed report, the subcommittee held that Langer should answer before the full committee charges involving moral turpitude.

U. S. Judge Clears Alcoa on Charge Of Conspiracy

New York, Oct. 9 (AP)—Federal Judge Francis G. Caffey ruled today that there was no ground for conspiracy charges against the Aluminum Co. of America, Aluminum, Ltd., or any of the 48 codefendants as charged by the Government in an antitrust suit.

The conspiracy ruling, following a ruling that the Government had failed to prove monopoly charges, leaves only one issue, that of alleged misconduct by the defendants to be passed on by the court before a final ruling is made on the Government's demand for injunctions, dissolution of the alleged trust and the appointment of receivers and trustees.

Judge Caffey, who is in the eighth day of reading his opinion, said he would take up the misconduct issue tomorrow.

BUICK BUILDS FOR DEFENSE
Our assignment: Building Pratt & Whitney valve-in-head aircraft engines for defense use.
A word about the calibre of the distinguished new automobiles that Buick now brings to market for 1942
Two thoughts stood solemn sentinel throughout all the planning of our 1942 cars.
The first was: – in their materials these cars must not trespass on the current needs of national defense.
The second was: – in their quality and performance they must not be an "ersatz" product.
If you think this leaves only a cramped and stifling byway for engineering to advance in, remember that difficulties are sometimes the spur that real ability needs.
Our new cars, it seems to us, superbly prove this. But we neither expect nor ask you to take our word for it.
Indeed, we hope instead that you're skeptical – that you will require these sleek and powerful Buicks to demonstrate their merit under your own hands.
The real way to know what they are, and how marvelously they perform, is to breeze them down a country road or tool them through clotted traffic.
The sure way to gauge their mettle and their inmost goodness is to plump them squarely into the stiffest task your imagination can supply.
There are great gifts undefeatedly at work in the industry of this nation and not the least of them is good old-fashioned American ingenuity.
We have of course no corner on that here at Buick. But the first mile you drive one of these magnificent automobiles will make you say that we certainly have our share.
So come try the gorgeous new cars that we not only say pace the pack for 1942 but are bold enough to believe set an all-time high in all-round automotive excellence.
They will make you glad – nay, proud – all over again that you're living in America – and now!

Heart Attack Fatal to Kahn, Noted Lyricist

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Beverly Hills, Calif., Oct. 8.—Gus Kahn, one of America's best known song writers, died of a heart attack today. He was 54.

With Walter Donaldson, Kahn turned out some of Tin Pan Alley's best known popular compositions before he came to Hollywood eight years ago to compose for the movies. The Kahn-Donaldson combination contributed such hits as "Mammy," which Al Jolson introduced; "My Buddy," which was Kahn's favorite; "My Blue Heaven," and many others.

Surviving are his wife, Grace; a daughter, Irene, and a son, Donald.

Kahn, dean of Hollywood's lyric writers, had produced an average of six hits annually for 20 years, according to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, of which he was formerly a director. He preferred to do most of his work away from New York, asserting that he couldn't write songs unless he mixed with the people who sang them, "and that doesn't mean the Broadway crowd."

He was born in Germany, the son of Isaac Kahn, a cattle dealer, who brought him to Chicago when he was 5 years old.

He started writing songs while he was still in school and when he was 20 his "Gee, I Wish I Had a Girl," was published. He worked for a mail order concern for sometime, writing songs "on the side," but soon began to devote all his time to writing lyrics.

He collaborated with many famous composers, including Sigmund Romberg, Rudolph Friml, Brinislaw Kaper and Walter Jurmann. He first came to Hollywood to write the lyrics for "Whoopee," with Eddie Cantor. Other pictures for which he wrote songs were "Flying Down to Rio," "Bottoms Up," "Hollywood Party," "Stingaree," "One Night of Love," "The Merry Widow," "Kid Millions," "Caravan," "The Great Ziegfeld," "The Prizefighter and the Lady," "Operator 13," "Naughty Marietta," "Rose-Marie," "San Francisco," "The Firefly" and "Girl of the Golden West."

Among the many song hits for which he wrote the lyrics were "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby," "Sleepy Head," "Your Eyes Have Told Me So," "You Stepped Out of a Dream," "Ain't We Got Fun," "Memories," "Pretty Baby," "No, No, Nora," "Carioca," "Beside a Babbling Brook," "I Never Knew," "Love Me or Leave Me," "I'm Through With Love," "It Had to Be You," "Waitin' at the Gate for Katy," "You've Got Everything," "There Goes the Girl for Me," "Toot Toot Tootsie, Goodby," "Chloe," "Ready for the River," "Blue Lovebird," "A Little Church in the Valley," "Where the Shy Little Violets Grow," "Liza," "Memories," "She's Wonderful," "If You See Sally," "There Ain't No Maybe in My Baby's Eyes" and "Let's Call It a Day."

Death Ends Debut Of Ice Bicyclist

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Ten minutes after Sam Barton, 46, had exhibited his trick bicycle riding on ice for the first time, he died of a heart attack in his dressing room in the Center Theater.

Death Takes Helen Morgan, Torch Singer

HELEN MORGAN

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Helen Morgan, the torch singer who rose to fame during the Ziegfeld era, died tonight in Henrotin Hospital after an illness of three weeks.

Miss Morgan, who was 41, had been in critical condition for the past several days following an operation for removal of her spleen.

She was stricken last month upon coming here to appear in a loop theater, and was forced to cancel the engagement and enter the hospital.

Her second husband, Lloyd Johnson, whom she married last July 27, and her mother, Mrs. Lulu Morgan, of High Falls, N. Y., had been at her bedside constantly for the past several days when physicians gave up hope for her recovery.

Second only to the late Texas Guinan, Helen Morgan used her sad eyes and tearful voice to make her one of the top flight queens of Broadway night life during that bombastic era when speakeasies were flourishing in the prohibition years in New York.

Born in Danville, Ill., in 1900 she went to the Crane High School in Chicago and from there to the Metropolitan Opera School to study singing. Her voice did not develop strongly, but it had a lachrymose quality that made her audiences weep sentimentally when she sang torch songs. Too, she usually sat atop a piano or on the edge of the stage with her graceful legs hanging across the footlights when she sang.

Despite her success as a singer, she long had the ambition to be a serious dramatic actress and sometimes attempted such roles in obscure experimental theaters where she always played under the name of Neleh Nagrom, her own name spelled backward.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

The Theater Guild Spins Its Production Wheels

WHEN THE THEATER GUILD declared that this would be its busiest season in years, it evidently meant it. Tangible evidence of its early activity, of course, is available in Maxwell Anderson's new play of "Candle in the Wind," starring Helen Hayes, at the National Theater this week and next. That, however, was only the beginning. Out of this week's conclave of the Guild executives has come the announcement by Lawrence Langner and Theresa Helburn of the acquisition of two new plays, the opening dates of two additional productions and the casting of roles for two forthcoming works.

FREDRIC MARCH

The two new plays are "Throng O'Scarlett," by Vivian Connell, and "Set My People Free," by Dorothy Heyward, who, in 1927, was co-author with her husband, DuBose Heyward, of "Porgy," one of the Theater Guild's most memorable productions.

"Throng O'Scarlett" deals with the Irish aristocracy immediately preceding World War II.

Sophie Treadwell's "Hope for a Harvest"—which Washington was fortunate enough to see last season, with Fredric March and Florence Eldridge costarred—will launch its new season in Philadelphia on November 10, with Mr. March and Miss Eldridge again heading the cast. Pittsburgh will see the premiere of "Papa Is All" on November 3, with a week at the National in this city following on November 10.

As for the casting, Mr. Langner and Miss Helburn have articled Celeste Holm, remembered from Saroyan's "The Time of Your Life," and Carl Benton Reid, the Oscaar Hubbard in both the stage and screen versions of "The Little Foxes," for "Papa Is All," and Haila Stoddard for the role of Lydia Languish in Sheridan's "The Rivals."

And that reminds me—that mention of Fredric March, I mean. Instead of either "International Squadron" or "Great Guns," the first feature comedy made by Laurel and Hardy in a year or two, both announced in turn, the next attraction actually to be shown at the Metropolitan Theater will be "One Foot in Heaven," costarring Mr. March and Martha Scott. It will move directly from the Earle around into F Street, opening Friday.

Hollywood Visitors Here Friday

That item arriving at the desk too late Tuesday to squeeze into yesterday's type was to the effect that tomorrow Ilona Massey and her husband, Alan Curtis, will be in Washington for one of those dizzy 24-hour whirls through the main streets and a round of those cocktail parties that must constitute the screen star's most vivid recollection of the National Capital—at least the first time around. Miss Massey, one of the Cinema's most arresting soprano stars, will discover herself more or less prevalent on the local screen. Through the day of her presence here, both she and Mr. Curtis will find themselves on view in "New Wine," at the new Pix Theater. But almost in sight is "International Lady," in which Miss Massey will play Loew's Capitol within a week of her visit.

Dots and Dashes

It is being bruited about, as the saying goes, that in the interest of greater decisiveness the inconclusive last scene of "Candle in the Wind" is being revised by Maxwell Anderson . . . Sounds like a sizable job, but we are told Mr. Anderson hopes to accomplish it in two lines . . . That makes it bigger . . . Also it is hinted that there may be a cast change before the Helen Hayes play leaves E Street . . . So we are going again next week—if we can get in . . . The Pierce Hall Players will break out their new season next Wednesday and Thursday nights with Thurber's "The Male Animal" . . . At Pierce Hall, needless to say, Fifteenth and Harvard Streets Northwest . . . It's a potent strip of gelatin the Warner boys unspooled for the ladies and gentlemen (sic) of the drama desks yesterday . . . Told in a novel way, with Charles Boyer, Olivia de Havilland and Paulette Goddard at approximately the top of their forms . . . Love is wonderful!

Voice-from-the-back-of-the-Hall Note

Some Lucky Dogs Are Much Luckier Than Others!

GREER GARSON,
who abandoned her prim and staid ladies to appear so charmingly as a sophisticated urbanite in "When Ladies Meet," poses on the terrace of her Hollywood home with the two tyrants of her household. They are a couple of pure white poodles named Coco and Toto.

RKO-Keith's

Samuel Goldwyn's notable screen adaptation of "The Little Foxes," with Bette Davis in the leading role, begins its third week this morning at RKO-Keith's Theater. Rarely indeed does a film version of a play result in so stirring a transcription as this. Miss Hellman herself did the adaptation of her stage hit and six of the original players repeat their roles with such success that the screen will be employing them frequently: Patricia Collinge, Teresa Wright, Charles Dingle, Carl Benton Reid and Dan Duryea. The story of the grasping woman and her efforts to found a fortune through the death of her husband has been effectively directed by William Wyler. A Walt Disney cartoon, "Canine Caddy," and the Pathe News complete the bill.

Punch on Jaw Part of Proposal

Humphrey Bogart's proposal to Kaaren Verne in Warner Brothers' "All Through the Night" ranks as one of the strangest in film history.

Bogart and Miss Verne were in a speeding automobile, trying to dodge pursuing Gestapo with whom she had been innocently associated. Then, in an attempt to save him from what she though was certain death, she interrupted his marriage proposal by screaming for help.

Bogart calmly finished his hard-boiled proposal and, before she could scream again, knocked her cold with a sock on the jaw.

"Sorry babe," he muttered, and added to Frank McHugh, the driver. "My proposal didn't knock her cold, so I had to."

Goes Stubborn

Versatile stage and screen actor, Philip Reed essays a new type of role as the boisterous and immovable house guest in "Weekend for Three," featuring Dennis O'Keefe and Jane Wyatt, Reed and Edward Everett Horton.

Columbia

Rachel Crothers conceivably didn't realize how frequently her story of two women's marital discussion would be told when first she wrote "When Ladies Meet." The second screen version of the popular play returns to F street this morning at the Columbia Theater after an extended run at the Palace. Joan Crawford and Greer Garson are the ladies in question, the first playing an author in love with the husban dof the latter. Their meeting brings about a purely tentative discussion and finally a revelation of an emotional tangle involving Herbert Marshall. Robert Taylor and Spring Byington are prominent in the merrier roles of the piece and both do much to brighten the conversational stretches of the plot.

Walt's South American Way

Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 8.—We've talked and read so much about South American good-will—and much of it's the bunk—but Walt Disney's gone about it the right way. When he went down there he took his own recording crew with him, therefore has all the native music from the different countries.

WALT DISNEY

When he returns will make 12 pictures for the South American trade, with their own rhythm and stories to go with it instead of doing it the round-about way, which has been our method for so long.

During the filming of Garbo's new comedy, which George Cukor directs, several people have crashed the set, which is always "closed." Joan Crawford got on the set the day the picture began. A couple of extras in evening clothes who had been working in "The Female of the Species" strolled on Garbo's set with a group of extras also in evening clothes who were working in the picture.

But the only person who was actually invited to visit was Melvyn Douglas' young son, who spent the afternoon watching his father and Garbo do scenes together.

'No Acres' Key To the Landless

The Lee Bowmans have a station wagon but no farm, and they've been worried because they didn't have a name to paint on the station wagon. Finally, Bowman hit upon an idea. He drove up to the set of "Married Bachelor" and proudly pointed to the door of his station wagon. There in black letters, 3 inches high, were the words:

"No Acres."

EQUITY: Marshall Field will be one of the principal backers of the new $1 Top Theater . . . ED WYNN: Your son, Keenan, is being screen-tested by one of the four companies seeking his services. His wife, the former Eve Abbott, will do the test with him—a scene from "No Time for Comedy." Although Eve is young and pretty and a talented actress, she'll play the scene with her back to the camera. She's too happy with her husband and new baby to bother about pursuing her own career.

MARLENE DIETRICH

LEO DUROCHER: One of the strongest Dodgers' rooters, P. S. P. "Tiny" Fell—son of Mrs. Ogden Mills—is negotiating for the purchase of the Phillies. The tentative offer is $600,000 . . . NELSON ROCKEFELLER: Your brother, David, whose new job is a Civil Service one, has a pension-deduction taken from his salary. The Government wants to assure his future financial security . . . HENRY MORGENTHU, JR.: Your son, Robert, asked Click's cameramen for duplicate prints of the photos they took aboard the Navy's training ship, "Prairie State." Then he scooped them—by using 38 of those photos in the ship's magazine, which he edits—two weeks before they were scheduled to appear in Click.

HENRY WALLACE: Jerome Frank, former chairman of the SEC and now a Circuit Court of Appeals judge, will be Milo Perkins' part-time adviser to your Economic Warfare Bureau . . . COL BERT McCORMICK: Chicago newspapermen are wagering that Rex Smith, editor of Newsweek, will be editor of the new Field-Evans Chicago paper . . . CHARLES A. LINDBERGH: The column which Elsa Maxwell wrote about you—and which was yanked from the Hearst newspapers—will appear in Time magazine . . . JOE LOUIS: Lou Nova took to the floor at Leon & Eddie's, and announced that Referee Arthur Donovan had been unfair to him. "Donovan," said Nova, "shouldn't have permitted Louis to enter the ring carrying those hand-grenades in his right glove."

GRACIE FIELDS: Your husband, Monte Banks—who is arranging a Metropolitan Opera House benefit for British War Relief—has been consorting with the local representative of Mussolini's newspaper . . . LORD HLIFAX: Haile Selassie has written to friends here, disclosing that he's asked the British government not to consider the request made by the Union of South Africa for a protectorate over Ethiopia. Selassie wants complete independence . . . MARLENE DIETRICH: You won't have to worry about silk stockings. Two Patterson silk manufacturers just returned from Japan, where they arranged for resumption of silk shipments . . . AMBASSADOR HU SHIH: Before Dan Arnstein issued that blast against the British tax on material moved over the Burma Road, he first cabled Harry Hopkins, for approval.

LANA TURNER: Tony Martin was a sad young man yesterday. "I lost a triple parlay," he sighed. "In one day, I lost my girl, I lost on the Dodgers—and the draft board classified me 1-A" . . . PEGGY JOYCE: When Mabel Boll, the Diamond Queen, announced at El Morocco that she was divorcing her fifth husband, she was congratulated by Tommy Manville, himself a four-time loser. Manville, incidentally, is taking a trip to Reno, for the first time. He said: "The place has cost me so much already, I'm curious to see what it's like . . . DISTRICT ATTORNEY O'DWYER: Michael Quill, head of the Transport Workers Union, will not support LaGuardia.

DRAMA CRITICS CIRCLE: "Watch on the Rhine," the play you selected as the year's best, will be the first one employed in a direct attempt to hit Nazi morale. It will be brodcast to Germany on October 17. Fredinand Bruckner, the German playwright, did the translation. And Mady Christians, German born, who is featured in the Broadway production, will participate . . . BERT WHEELER: Frank Fay, now at La Martinique, says it's wonderful to be working again. "Imagine," he confessed, "to be able to look at your wrists—and know what time it is again" . . . JOHN DIES: Your Republican primary petitions for the mayoralty are the subject of a grand jury investigation. J. H. Livingston, Republican representative on the board of elections, was questioned last week.

GEORGE S. KAUFMAN: Alexander Woolcott, the Man Who Was Going to England, still is stranded in Bermuda, after these many weeks . . . MACKENZIE KING: Last night, Gen. Duch, chief of the Polish army in Canada, appeared here on a Polish Day broadcast with Mayor LaGuardia. When it was over, Fiorello descended with him in the elevator, and asked: "Have you a car—or may I drop you in mine?" . . . Gen. Duch replied: "I have no car" . . . "Very well, then," said the Mayor, "you may use mine." Downstairs, two motorcycles were waiting. Fiorello deposited the General in the side-car of one motorcycle, leaped into the side-car of the other, and with sirens blowing they whizzed down Broadway.

Vocal Record Set By Deanna Durbin

By singing more than 150 words per minute in Spanish, Deanna Durbin has just added another musical achievement to the amazing vocal record of her five years in pictures.

Miss Durbin set that speed mark in singing Valverde's "Clavelitos" for her new film, "It Started With Adam," in which she costars with Charles Laughton.

The song runs 70 seconds, of which ten seconds are devoted to piano introduction. During the 60 seconds of the song, Miss Durbin sang exactly 157 words.

The star's achievement is particularly remarkable because the lyrics of the number are in Spanish, a language she does not speak.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Gabriel Gets Ginger for George!

Hollywood, Oct. 8 (INS).—The dynamic and always interesting Gabriel Pascal is back in town with an RKO contract in his waistcoat pocket—and plans galore. Pascal, the lad who first persuaded the reluctant George Bernard Shaw to permit his stage plays to be filmed, has now sold Ginger Rogers on the idea of starring in "Arms and the Man," the first Shaw play he will produce and direct in Hollywood.

GINGER ROGERS

According to Pascal, whose "Pygmalion" with Wendy Hiller won G. B. S. an Academy award, Ginger has consented to do two movies for him—one next year, and one the year following.

Gracie Allen, already on the M.-G.-M. lot was joined today by William Post, jr., who plays the Mr. to her Mrs. in "Mr. and Mrs. North." Young Post was just married last month to Jean Castle and he brings his bride with him to Hollywood. He was signed by a Metro talent scout who saw him on the Broadway stage in "My Sister Eileen" and this is his first motion picture. But don't think for a minute that Gracie has lost George Burns, who comes out to the lot with her, and she wouldn't have it otherwise, for she is always influenced by what he thinks and that is as it should be and one reason why their marriage has lasted for 17 years.

From Lana Turner to the Tulip Festival in Holland, Mich., is quite a production jump—but this is the schedule lined up by M.-G.-M. for Joe Pasternak, the wonder boy. As we told you last week, Joe's first at Metro is "They Live by Night" and his second is this very unusual story with the festival background, "Tulip Time in Michigan." If Walter Reich, who wrote the original, will pardon me, that title sounds too much like a Technicolor travelogue but perhaps it will be changed. The story itself concerns a tulip grower with seven daughters and the publicity value of the background is a natural with every newspaper, magazine and newsreel featuring it. So far four of the seven daughters have been selected.

Donna Reed Gets First Major Role

The "Thin Man" pictures, which have brought opportunity to many young players, now give Donna Reed her first important dramatic role as the feminine romantic interest in "The Shadow of the Thin Man," film starring William Powell and Myrna Loy.

"I'm Emmy in 'HOLD BACK THE DAWN'—a simple, little school teacher, who for the first time has her heart and imagination awakened by a man of many loves—Georges (Charles Boyer). Honestly, I have never been so thrilled with a role in my life. Modest Hero of Coventry Hasn't Been in One Spot Long Enough to Get Medal

New York, Oct. 8.—Lieut. Stanley E. Jenner is a tall, slightly built young man who looks for all the world as though he belongs behind a draughtsman's table in a quiet and orderly architect's office. But today he told New York newspapermen one of the most vivid tales of personal war experience that has come from England since the start of the Second World War. It was the story of his job as a land-mine expert.

In civil life he is an electrical engineer with a penchant for training youngsters in naval lore. Today he is a lieutenant in the Royal Navy Volunteer Reserve, and one of the few living experts on land-mine removal.

"Land mines are quite like the mines that sink boats at sea, but they're vastly different from regular aerial bombs," he explained. "When the war broke out no one thought the enemy would be so audacious as to fly these ton-and-a-half mines across the Channel and parachute them on land. For this reason, the Royal Engineers were not prepared to cope with this menace, and a select group of Naval and reserve officers were called in to solve the problem."

"Bomb removal and land-mine removal are two entirely different tasks," he continued. "When a land-mine has been dropped, the entire area for a mile around is cleared of all people, for these mines will level every structure for a quarter of a mile around the point at which they explode.

RUINS left in Coventry after air raid November 15, 1940

"Only two persons are permitted within this danger area; the officer attempting to render the mine safe, and an enlisted sailor who is his assistant, and the assistant is not permitted to approach within several hundred yards of the actual bomb until the more dangerous portion of the task is completed."

Lieut. Jenner pointed out that communications are quickly erected between the mine-rescue squad and police and other officials outside the danger zone. Usually the officer is equipped with a portable microphone, and his notes are recorded at a point perhaps as far as a mile away. For, as he unscrews bolts and seeks to safely remove the wires which operate the delicate detonation mechanism, he must make a report of his every action.

Should something go wrong in the officer's calculations, the mine is liable to explode immediately, and keeping notes in a notebook on such a job would be useless. Jenner points out that the effectiveness of these explosives in destroying such notes along with the observer is "almost unbelievable."

"I arrived at Coventry just a few hours after the German bombers, and picked my way among debris that had once been a busy city. I had a mine there that was really tricky. I was all alone in nearly a mile of gutted buildings. My assistant was perhaps 100 yards off, out of sight. I walked back to report to him every action I took. Suddenly I heard the mine begin ticking and I got out of the spot in a hurry and dove for an underground bomb shelter I'd spotted in advance."

Jenner said that men working with these tricky landmines must always plan their escape, if any, in advance. He said that when this particular mine went off he was completely buried, and rescue squads—whom he had notified in advance where he would seek protection—came and dug him out. His assistant, who was more than 400 yards away from the actual explosion, was blown to the ground and painfully injured.

Jenner has been awarded the George Medal for his heroism in Britain's fight against Hitlerism, but he hasn't been in one spot long enough to receive the award in person.

The incident which probably was directly responsible for his being named for this award was in the removal of a land-mine from a vital flour mill in Birmingham. "When I got to the mill I found the bomb in a small and crowded room on the sixth floor. It had crashed through the upper two floors without going off. In this instance there was no chance for me to escape if the mine went off, and I had to be pretty chary about moving it. However, the going was not too tough that afternoon and I rendered the mine safe in about three hours."

Mannequins of Hedy and Marlene Are Similar From the Neck Down

INCIDENT IN A MANNEQUIN WORKS—Miss Stubergh carries a likeness of La Dietrich and Lamarr past a row of wax mannequins

By Hubbard Keavy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Los Angeles, Oct. 8.—(The Special News Service) There is one place here where the Hedys and Viviens and Myrnas and Lorettas are 5 feet 9 inches tall.

Although these girls are not exact likenesses of the stars for whom they are named, the resemblance is startling. Perhaps you've seen some of them in store windows.

They are mannequins. From the neck down, however, these girls look so much alike that no one can tell them apart, not even the Katherine Stuberghs, whose business is manufacturing mannequins. From the neck down, they are from the same mold.

The Stuberghs are making their mannequins 5 feet 9 this year, but as dresses get shorter (and they are getting shorter), they will shorten the girls' bodies. This the Stuberghs will do by making a mold of the body of a model who measures about 5 feet 7. Five years ago, when gowns were longer, the Stuberghs were turning 'em out at 6 feet even.

Katherine Stubergh, who has been making store mannequins since the '90s, and her daughter, Katherine, who has been doing it for a dozen years, work in a rambling two-story building which was the Charles Ray studio years ago.

The Stuberghs have quite a bit of movie trade, making likenesses at $350 per, of stars to be used in scenes too dangerous even for stunt men.

The Stuberghs now are working on exact duplicates, from eye coloring to bust measurements, of Mary Pickford and the dressy Lady Mendl. They don't consider this a very strange order. These wax figures will be sent to a New York dressmaker who designs clothes for Mary and Lady Mendl. Thus will tedious fitting time be saved. All the girls have to do is decide what kind and color material they want, and the style and the gown or coat or wrap or slip will be fitted, to every last hook and eye, on the form.

Lillian Gish is paying for these figures. The price is $350, but real hair wigs will cost as much more. Lillian wanted to give her friends some unusual gift, something neither had. Well, so far as the Stuberghs know, no one else in the whole world has an exact likeness of herself, even to complexion and hair.

WAX WORK—Katherine Stubergh leans on the shoulder of "Marlene Dietrich" and curls the eye-lashes of "Hedy Lamarr"

Pickford in Wax

Mary said, when she started posing some weeks ago for the head young Katherine is modeling in clay, that she wished she had had herself done in wax years ago when she was making pictures. She'd have saved time and she'd have been able to see how her clothes looked before they got on the screen. Katherine carts her model up to Pickfair whenever Mary has a free hour, which isn't often. When Lady Mendl, who comes to the Stuberghs, saw her head taking shape she exclaimed, "Am I that homely!"

The Stuberghs' favorites, this year as well as last, are Hedy Lamarr and Vivien Leigh. This is because there is a greater demand for mannequins resembling Hedy and Vivien than for any of the others. The Myrna Loy and Loretta Young models rate next.

Defense Value Of NYA, CCC Is Upheld

The American Youth Commission and the Educational Policies Commission of the National Education Association both yesterday recommended continuance of the NYA and CCC during the defense period although the latter organization advocated their discontinuance as separate agencies once they have completed the emergency training of workers for defense.

The youth commission emphasized the value of the public youth programs in preparing young persons for defense jobs and as a means of easing postwar depression.

See Problems from Boom

"Full employment in the postwar period of both youths and adults will be necessary to avoid an intensification of the problems of youth resulting from the present boom," the commission's statement said.

The National Education Association report urged continuance of the most important NYA and CCC functions but said they should be transferred to other agencies after the emergency.

Vocational training and other forms of education should be transferred to State and local agencies, employment on public works to general public works agencies, and NYA student work to appropriate education institutions, it was stated.

Federal leadership in education should be centered in the United States Office of Education, the statement said.

Fear Competition

The educators warned against a Federal schooling system paralleling public school systems and competing with them for funds, staff and students. The CCC and NYA were originally set up as emergency agencies only, it was pointed out.

The report called for a Nation-wide reconstruction of the educational program in an effort more adequately to meet the needs of all youth.

With the depression past there is an opportunity for long-range planning to be placed in operation for times of unemployment which will provide work for jobless youths as well as older people, the report said.

The Youth Commission backed NYA and CCC activities on the ground they provided training for defense workers and mainly affected youths below military age.

Home Building Is Woman's Defense Duty, First Lady Says

GREET CAMP FIRE GIRLS—Margaret Monteith, 17, of McLean, Va., joined Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt here last night in a radio broadcast to the Camp Fire Girls' National Council, convening in Detroit. Margaret presented the First Lady with a Camp Fire Girls' insignia inscribed, "Give Service"

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt called on American womanhood last night to strengthen the Nation by making better homes.

"Our contribution to our country is first and foremost in the kind of home we make," she told women of the Nation in a broadcast from the National Broadcasting Studios here.

"When times like the present come, and we find many of our young men ineligible to defend their country because they have been fed improperly, we know we have fallen down on our job as homemakers."

The First Lady spoke in her capacity as honorary chairman of the National Advisory Council of Campfire Girls, directing her remarks to all American women and specifically to members of the Campfire Girls National Council, convening in Detroit, and to the 307,000 Campfire Girls of the Nation.

In the studio she was surrounded by 50 Campfire Girls of Washington and vicinity, dressed in their red, white and blue service costumes. One of them, 17-year-old Margaret Monteith, of McLean, Va., joined Mrs. Roosevelt on the program and presented her with a Campfire Girls insignia inscribed, "Give Service."

Army May Use Nazi Scare Films To Train Troops

Bloomfield, N. J., Oct. 8 (AP).—German propaganda films depicting blitzkrieg tactics in Poland, France and the Low Countries may become classroom studies for American soldiers, Col. M. E. Gillette, commanding officer of the United States Signal Corps at Fort Monmouth, said today.

Col. Gillette told a Westinghouse photographic conference that "movies showing panzerx, dive bombers and tanks in action, intended as fear propaganda, actually can give selectees and enlisted men a first-hand opportunity to analyze and discuss with their instructors Nazi operations in the field."

Gillette said in all 375,000 feet of film would be produced for the Army curriculum this year, equal to the total output of any of the top Hollywood studios.

Calgary Roars Adieu to Windsors

Calgary, Oct. 8 (AP).—Nearly 3000 Calgarians, singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," "Home On the Range" and "There'll Always Be an England," saw the Duke and Duchess of Windsor start their homeward journey tonight after a ten-day stay at the duke's "Ep" ranch, 65 miles southwest of Calgary.

Smiling and waving, the duke and duchess appeared on the platform of their private car attached to the rear of the regular Canadian Pacific railway train as it pulled out for the East on the first leg of their trip to Nassau.

Virginia Alumni Meets Tomorrow

University of Virginia alumni in the Army and Navy will be honored guets at the fall meeting of the Washington chapter of the Virginia Alumni Association at the Mayflower tomorrow at 8 p. m.

The District group, which already lists more than 1100 on its rolls, is also seeking to contact other former Virginia students who have recently come here.

Motion pictures of Virginia's football victories over Hampden-Sydney and Lafayette will be shown, and Dick Fletcher, director of first-year athletics, will speak.

Refreshments will be served in the Chinese room of the Mayflower. There will be no business meeting.

14 Hurt as Train, Trolley Collide

Indiana City 'A Test' on Idle Over Priorities

Evansville, Ind., refrigerator and auto manufacturing city which was studied by the OPM among the first half dozen "test cases" on priorities unemployment, was certified to the War Department yesterday as facing severe job retailment. Concurrently the OPM Contract Distribution Division recommended to the Army a detailed remedial program, designed to increase defense contracts in the area.

In the certification, the OPM Labor Division reported that 1200 workers had already been laid off due to shortages of materials, and that of about 11,000 workers now employed in 23 factories whose material deliveries would be adversely affected by priorities, 3000 would lose their jobs by January unless additional defense work is placed in the community.

The OPM declared that at present defense contracts in Evansville factories are negligible, occupying the time of only 427 employes.

Four companies, two in the auto industries and two making refrigerators, account for 2300 of the 3000 workers threatened with displacement, the survey showed. For the latter, the Contracts Distribution Division recommended that new defense orders be placed in the plants, specifying the items which the plant equipment appears capable of fabricating.

The OPM also urged that the home offices of the two auto companies, Briggs Industrial Corporation and Chrysler Corporation, should "inject work into their Evansville, plants rather than extending manufacturing activities in the Detroit area.

Ralph A. Collins, Limb Convention Guest, Breaks Leg

Cincinnati, Oct. 8 (AP).—Ralph A. Collins, member of the New York Sun's Washington Bureau, introduced Mayor James G. Stewart as speaker before a convention of the Association of Limb Manufacturers of America last night, stepped backward off the platform—and fractured his leg.

Egg Just Misses Wheeler During Tucson Address

Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 8 (AP).—An egg spattered at the feet of Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, as he delivered an address tonight in the Tucson High School auditorium.

Near the end of his speech some booing was heard as he urged opposition to President Roosevelt's foreign policy. The egg, thrown from the balcony, struck a curtain above Wheeler's head and fell beside him.

He spoke of "men who are afraid to stand up themselves but hire some boy to try to break up a meeting" and quickly ended his talk.

The doctrine of freedom of the seas is "a warmonger's slogan" and "not a traditional American doctrine," Wheeler asserted.

"The American Navy has not been used at any time in our history against any nation at war with another to deliver or to insure delivery of contraband of war to a belligerent," he said.

College Girls Hear Do's, Don'ts On How to Wear Clothes

The Post fashion editor, Jane Driscoll, in a talk yesterday before the student body of Chevy Chase Junior College, Chevy Chase, Md., pointed out the "do's" and "don'ts" girls who are either short, tall or plump must observe to be well-dressed.

However, before applying the rules a girl must get a true mental picture of herself, Miss Driscoll said. "It is an old game," she declared, "this business of trying to make believe we are somebody else."

Do wear "tubular styels," she told short girls, "they make you look thin as a rail." But don't wear "peplum dresses and tunics.' She suggested tall girls wear "hip drapery that cuts them in two," but "don't wear long skirts that emphasize height."

Plump girls should "wear vertical unbroken lines to make them look tall," she said, but not wide-brimmed hats. "It cuts down the height and makes you look more plump."

Miss Driscoll stressed daily planning as necessary to good grooming. "I don't mean at the last minute in the morning, but the night before," she said. "Some girls I know even plan a whole week in advance."

Also included in the talk was advice on care of the clothes, nails and hair. Too many clothes can be a burden, she said, "and a complciated wardrobe is just as difficult to mnaage as an elaborate hair-do."

He's a She, Bride Learns From Police

By the Associated Press

Culver City, Calif., Oct. 8.—An 18-year-old bride of five weeks told police she didn't know her husband—a film studio carpenter—was a woman until they informed her last night.

In jail for investigation was Frances Orlando, 31, who, under the name of Richard Orlando, married Elizabeth Nunes, of Sacramento, Calif., in Minden, Nev.

Detective E. A. Maier said Frances admitted to him she had posed as a man for 14 years, because—

"Well, it was a lot easier to find jobs. I was eating when a lot of girls I know were going hungry."

Maier arrested the woman at a studio where she has been employed as a carpenter for seven months.

Miss Nunes, a slight brunette, said:

"A friend has been telling me that Richard was a woman, but I just couldn't believe it. He said, 'Don't you believe that honey; I'm a man.'"

Miss Nunes said her parents were very strict, had forbidden her to go with boys and once locked her in a basement for two days without food because she kept a date with a boy.

"How am I going to take care of Elizabeth, now that I have lost my job at the studio?" the husky-voiced, mannishly-dressed Frances asked Detective Maier.

Revolta's Sister Found Slain With Husband

Oshkosh, Wis., Oct. 8 (AP).—The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Earl E. Morgan were found today in their apartment above the restaurant they operated here.

Police Capt. Fred Felda said that Morgan, 50, apparently shot his wife, Marie, 35, and then committed suicide by shooting himself. Mrs. Morgan was the former Marie Revolta, a sister of Johnny Revolta, nationally known golf professional, of Evanston, Ill.

Fire Hazards

The fire marshal's report on fire hazards in the public schools comes at a time when these buildings are more crowded than usual. This means that safeguards and drills for proper emergency exit are more than ever necessary. In line with civilian defense measures, school officials might consider means for emphasizing to students the elementary points of fire prevention and fire fighting. But the fire marshal's report that 150 buildings lack proper safeguards for protecting students and the building properties shows that more than this is necessary. Certain structures are reported to need more doors, alarm systems, fire extinguishers, and it is said that funds are not available to provide all these improvements. It is to be hoped they will be made available. Meanwhile teachers and custodial forces should be reminded that new methods of fireproofing modern buildings are not absolute insurances against menace by fire. (Indeed, some of the District's newer schools are among those most lacking in safeguards.) They should realize that certain precautions must be taken at all times and they should know what these precautions are. Too often reform needs are not known until after a catastrophe has happened, a catastrophe which might have been prevented had officials and citizens been alert to potential dangers.

Limiting Profits

Representative Vinson is proposing to restore in a more sweeping form the discredited Vinson-Trammell Act limiting profits on ships and aircraft construction for national defense. That act was suspended a year ago for the express purpose of speeding up the defense program. This, according to expert testimony, had been seriously hampered by severe restrictions upon profits. For instance, Mr. Knudsen, testifying before the Truman committee, pointed out that the act had interfered with placement of subcontracts for planes, because the subcontractor might have other work on hand that would pay a higher profit than the 8 per cent allowed by the Government. Furthermore, the contractor had to keep a special set of books for the Government—another deterrent to acceptance of Government orders.

Representative Vinson's proposal to revive the suspended act in more drastic form by setting a 7 per cent limit on profits of defense and lend-lease contracts is the outgrowth of a preliminary investigation of defense profits. This inquiry has shown that excessive profits are going to some concerns. However, the Vinson plan, like Secretary Morgenthau's suggestion to tax away all profits in excess of 6 per cent of invested capital, would penalize incentive, as already shown, and give rise to many administrative complexities.

If profits are excessive, the Government should seek another method of recapturing them—one that would produce revenue without slowing down the defense program and encouraging wasteful practices on the part of business. The excess-profits tax has been designed for that very purpose. If it proves to be inadequate in its present form, it can always be modified. For example, the Treasury favors dropping the optional method of computing excess profits on the basis of average earnings received over a period of years. The result of that method of computation has been to permit many concerns that earned very high returns in prewar years to escape payment of excess-profits taxes. By basing graduated excess-profits taxes entirely on invested capital—that is, taxing all profits in excess of a fixed percentage of invested capital—such companies would be forced to pay. The percentage allowance and the scale of taxation should, of course, be adjusted to what industry could reasonably be expected to bear without a slackening of effort.

In this emergency all classes are called upon to make sacrifices. There is no excuse, therefore, for permitting undue profits to be enjoyed by any group of concerns, whether employed on defense or civilian work. Moreover, since the effects of defense spending are spread throughout the economy, it would be inequitable as well as unwise to impose a fixed-profits ceiling solely upon defense contracts, leaving firms free to obtain higher profits from nondefense work. Such a plan would likewise afford no assurance that the cost of the defense program would be reduced. On the contrary, it would be exceptionally hard to detect and prevent cost padding under a system which would deprive contractors at times of the incentive to economize.

If certain contracts yield "unconscionable" rates of profits, as alleged by Mr. Vinson, the remedy for that situation would appear to lie in more careful placement of orders by the Government's contracting agencies, not in punitive taxation of all to catch the excess earnings of a minority.

Drive On Moscow

After having been held up on the central front for well over two months, and even after having been driven back some distance, the green-gray tide of Hitler's legions is again on the move. Fighting is now taking place at Viazma, 125 miles from Moscow and east of the farthest point reached by the Germans in their earlier drive on the Soviet capital. It is evident that Hitler is making a tremendous effort to win that smashing victory which, about a week ago, he announced had already been won. All reports agree that the struggle in Russia is now at a climactic stage, with more men, tanks and planes involved than in any other engagement of that titanic conflict. The violence of the German assault is admitted by the Russians. The Germans, say the latter, are striking "with the fury of a mad beast," thus returning the compliment Hitler paid them when, in his latest speech, he declared that the enemy "does not consist of human beings, but of animals or beasts." It is denied in Moscow, however, that any major breakthrough has occurred. Instead, the claim is made that the Red army troops have been holding on grimly against the assault of Nazi tanks and dive bombers.

The next few days and weeks will tell the story. A German victory on the central front would go a long way toward easing Hitler's position. This has become increasingly difficult because of the failure of the German army to win a decision after more than 15 weeks of the fighting. And the odds in this great battle raging west of Moscow would seem to be in favor of the Nazis. Yet it is too early to take too gloomy a view of the situation on the central front. By their own admission the Russians face a situation fraught with peril. The army of Marshal Timoshenko, which has distinguished itself during the past few months, is in peril of being surrounded. It is by no means certain that the Russians can hold off the Germans till winter intervenes to slow down the German drive. Nonetheless, the fact is that the Russians have surprised their enemies and the world during this campaign and may do so again.

In the meantime a new and no less ominous threat to the Russians than that embodied in the German drive toward Moscow is making its appearance in the south. There the Nazis claim the capture of two important points on the Sea of Azov. This would bring them, if they are to be believed, within striking distance of Rostov on the Don and in a position to flank the Don Basin. Even should the Russian lines west of Moscow hold, the loss of Rostov would in itself be a major calamity to the Russians. For it would mean the cutting off of the Caucasus from the rest of Russia, and with it the loss of indispensable oil resources needed by Soviet industry and the Red army. So, in the sixteenth week of the fighting the Russians face their severest test. If they survive, the whole aspect of the war will be altered in favor of the Allies. If they succumb, or even if their armies are driven back, the way will be open for Hitler to divert much of his forces to the Mediterranean and West African areas, with enough left, perhaps, for a new assault on Great Britain. It is up to us to do everything possible to prevent such a catastrophe by keeping the Russian armies in the field. This is the President's intention, as shown in the pledge from him which Mr. W. Averell Harriman handed to Josef Stalin.

Halfway Carmody

Federal Works Administrator Carmody has done a good job of highlighting the labor monopoly of the A. F. of L. in defense construction. By his testimony before the Senate Committee Investigating Defense he has dragged into the limelight the dubious agreement which Sidney Hillman, acting for the OPM, signed with the union last July. The agreement in effect excluded all except A. F. of L. men from defense construction jobs. Presumably Mr. Hillman was primarily concerned with stopping strikes, eliminating jurisdictional strife, and with getting jobs done in a hurry. But, if this was his intention, he must now be sorely disillusioned, for strikes are still occurring in violation of the agreement. And of course there is the larger issue of labor monopoly which is indefensible on any score.

But if Mr. Carmody is to be complimented for revealing that the low bidder on a prefabricated housing project was turned down merely because he employed C. I. O. labor, he also is to be taken to task for doing nothing about it. The Federal Works Administrator possesses very large powers. And in this particular instance, where the bid was competitive and not negotiated, he had unquestioned authority to award the contract to the low bidder. It should not be forgotten that on this job the wage scale was predetermined, so that it made no difference who did the work, the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. Moreover, since the low bid of $979,000 was about $400,000 under the next lowest bid—an extraordinary disparity—he might have saved the Government a sizable wad of money.

Why he did not make the award to the Currier Lumber Co. is apparently to be charged solely to an excess of administrative caution. In his testimony Mr. Carmody pointed out that the Currier prefabrication methods were opposed by the A. F. of L. and would "cause a revolution in the building industry." But since when has it been customary to levy a penalty against the manufacturer who can produce more cheaply and more efficiently than his competitors?

Actually the injection of the prefabrication issue into the testimony merely obscured, first, the question of monopoly, and, second, Mr. Carmody's failure to take advantage of the powers vested in his office. Excess administrative caution and reluctance to accept responsibility have been consistent production bogeys. The Currier case is a prime example of this. And it makes painfully clear the fact that, even assuming a much needed revision of the OPM's labor policy in defense construction, production will continue to lag unless officials who possess authority are willing to exercise it.

Food For Britain

A fortnight ago The Post, taking note of conflicting rumors about Britain's food position, called for a comprehensive statement that would make clear this country's role in supplying vital foodstuffs. Such a statement has now been made by Lord Woolton, the British Minister of Food. Compared with the prewar period, food distribution is still tragically low. The meat ration per person this fall will be 7 ounces a week. The fat ration will include only 2 ounces of butter. The weekly ration of bacon will be 4 ounces and in October, at least, each person will have no more than two eggs. This is hardly a luxury diet.

Yet Lord Woolton optimistically says that Britain is entering the third year of the war with better reserves of staples such as wheat and sugar than at any time since the war began. Neither of these staples comes from the United States. But Lord Woolton expresses his obligation to this country for other foodstuffs. Indeed, he says that lend-lease supplies have been vital in restoring a balanced diet without which working and fighting efficiency would be seriously impaired. And with understanding of the necessary shift in American food production, he praises the special efforts of American farmers.

Most encouraging, perhaps, in Lord Woolton's statement is the revelation that supplies are getting through to the British with increasing regularity. This indicates, of course, that receipts are going up. And it is testimony to the fact that British and American patrols in the Atlantic are keeping the enemy away from the convoys. Neverthelss the Germans are expected to step up their attacks on shipping. In anticipation the British have been building up reserve food stocks, but the Battle of the Atlantic remains as always the decisive factor in the supply situation.

A Soldier's Fitness

The lack of medical coordination between Selective Service and the Army has been overcome by the decision, effective January 1, to limit the examination of draftees to the Army doctors. At present a draftee is subjected to two medical examinations. One he gets from a physician at the local draft board, the other from the doctors attached to the Army induction board just before entry into the Army. It is said that there have been almost a hundred thousand instances of rejections at the final examinations after draftees have been passed locally. The result is to create much inconvenience and embarrassment which might have been avoided if there had been an adequate examination locally.

This inconvenience and embarrassment will only be palliated by the new order. For a draftee would still not know his fate between the time he is drafted and the time he is accepted by the doctors at the induction board. It might have been better, therefore, to make the local examination definitive. There is ample medical service available. Col. Leonard G. Rowntree, who heads the Medical Division of Selective Service, says there are 27,000 physicians now working with the 6,000 local boards. They have far more opportunity of making a thorough examination than have Army doctors who may be seeing from 50 to 200 draftees daily. Surely the Army could pass along the criteria of fitness to the local boards—the stricter the better—and leave the local doctors with the job.

Propaganda Definition

Some part of the confusion of thought in this country today is due, I believe, to an unfortunate looseness in the use of the word propaganda. Propaganda, it appears, can mean two entirely different things—namely, the fair presentation of actual facts which by their very nature arouse sympathy for those injured and oppressed, and the deliberate distortion of truth in order to instill false beliefs as advocated in "Mein Kampf," and openly practiced by the Nazis.

The farcical "investigation" of the film industry is, of course, a case to prove this point. Not one of the isolationist Senators responsible has so far had the temerity to question the truth of the films named. They have merely said, in effect, "We do not think it advisable for the American people to see the truth on the screen, since we fear this may have too exciting an effect."

I could wish that Hollywood's answer to this vicious attempt at establishing a Nazi-like censorship would be a full-length film giving the cold facts of Norway's martyrdom. The film would begin with a short sequence depicting the happy, hardy free life of a typical family in a peaceful Norwegian village; then—all in the experience of this one family—the horrors of the lightning blow of unprovoked invasion, the desperate defense, the devastation of villages, the looting of homes, the rape and killing of women, yes these are facts. And, when the hopelessly uneven struggle is over, the executions for sabotage, the agonies of the concentration camps where, in order to force confessions, prisoners are whipped into unconsciousness, then revived only to be whipped again, the bitterness of the enforced accommodation of not only 400,000 German soldiers but also of 40,000 German civilian families on vacation whom the Norwegians must witness daily devouring the food needed so desperately to keep themselves and their children from starving outright. And, finally, the heroism, the dangers and hardships of a young son of the family making his escape, traveling half over the world, to arrive at last at Little Norway in Canada, where by training as air pilot he hopes to aid in the freeing of his enslaved land. Then, once this film is made, I would have Hollywood dare the Wheelers and Nyes, who hold that the American people should be kept blindfolded in a shameful and dangerous ignorance, to prevent them from showing it!

Fixing Farm Prices And Wages

As a basis for fixing farm prices and wages the following two principles are generally accepted as fair: (1) When farmers must pay 5 per cent more for the things they buy, they are entitled to 5 per cent more for the things they produce (the parity principle); and (2) When the cost of living of workers goes up 5 per cent, they are entitled to an increase of 5 per cent in hourly wages. Yet if these principles are accepted in fixing farm prices and wages during the coming months when production for defense will necessarily limit production for civilian needs, inflation will follow as the night the day.

The theory underlying the two fair-play principles is, of course, that farmers and workers should maintain their standards of living, should be able to buy as much during this emergency as previously. However, since a less amount of civilian goods can be produced, all of us cannot possibly buy as much. As Keynes puts it, when the civilian cake is decreased in size, the average slice is decreased. No group can obtain the same amount as before unless the remaining groups average less than before.

Unfortunately, the need for sacrifice is not generally understood. When the farmers insist on parity prices and when the workers insist on wage rate increases, they do not realize that they are insisting that their groups shall receive more than their share of the civilian emergency cake. Moreover they do not realize that the price increases they demand will inevitably cause an inflation which will force less well organized groups such as the unemployed, old age pensioners, and Government workers, to bear more than their share of the necessary civilian sacrifice.

We have an abundance of most of the basic foods and also of some basic raw materials including cotton, coal, oil and iron ore. With the cooperation of the farm and labor groups, the prices of these abundant goods and also of materials rationed by meanas of priorities and allotments can be kept close to current values. However, these groups naturally will not cooperate in such a price control program unless the other groups also cooperate; in particular, business men would have to agree to share the sacrifice by giving up most of their excess profits and also more of their personal incomes. Yet inflation can be prevented only if all groups are willing to subordinate their private interests to the common good.

In order to determine whether a price-control program acceptable to all groups cannot be worked out, it is suggested that Vice President Wallace call a conference of leaders of all groups to meet with Government leaders, including Congressional leaders; for an effective program would require the enactment of several laws, probably including the following::

1. A Price-Control Act to give authority to an administrator, in cooperation with other Government agencies, to fix the prices of all abundant goods and of all rationed goods as near the average prices for some recent period as practicable; and to police all other prices, so as to prevent any unwarranted rise due to speculation, hoarding, or monopoly control.

2. An act freezing all rents as of a certain date, with provisions for revision by local boards to prevent profiteering.

3. An act increasing excess profits tax rates, graduating them up to a maximum of at least 6 per cent for profits in excess both of average profits during recent years and of 6 per cent return on invested capital (including invested profits); also requiring that the remainder of the excess profits be deferred by being invested in defense bonds, half to be held in trust for the stockholders and half in trust for the employes.

4. An act to increase individual income tax rates, especially in the middle brackets, to approach those of Britain.

The conference might also consider means for selling the program to the people, particularly to the groups they represent, for the cooperation of all local groups can be obtained only if they realize the need for the sacrifice involved.

American Policy

The findings of the latest Gallup public opinion poll, published in Sunday's Post, are indeed startling. According to this survey, 70 per cent of the American people feel that the defeat of Germany is more important than our staying out of war; and yet 80 per cent are still opposed to our entry into the war! By "entry into the war," the poll explains, the average citizen means sending an AEF abroad.

Can it be that the American people want war, but do not want the means of war? What is more likely is that, while favoring the defeat of Germany, they believe, or hope, that it can be accomplished without an AEF. So far as that goes, of course, no responsible official has told them to the contrary.

In the column adjoining the Gallup article in the Sunday paper, however, appeared an interview with the two ranking British field generals, Wavell and Auchinleck, who certainly ought to know something about the military exigencies of this war. Both were emphatic in declaring that Britain could never win the war without an AEF.

Expert opinion, in other words, belies the hope and belief of the majority of the American people. In spite of their obvious sympathies, the American people are not really committed to everything that a policy of total "destruction of the Nazi tyranny" would involve. They hesitate to support the very key to that destruction.

And of course, in committing ourselves unqualifiedly to the defeat of Germany we should be committing ourselves not only to an AEF (and very likely a very large one, too), but to a great deal more in the way of European committments and collaboration. Most of us don't realize this yet, just as we haven't yet appreciated the necessity of an AEF, for the case has never been put to us squarely. But unless the American people are prepared to support such a long-range policy of military and civic responsibility in Europe, their participation in the present World War would be as futile and senseless as their participation in the last.

What an opportunity now for our leaders and representatives to come out frankly against another AEF! The effect of such a move would be tremendous not only in uniting the people solidly behind the President's present foreign policy, but in clearing the way for a program of national action in this hemisphere that would come to be unmistakably an American policy.

Government Ownership

Secretary Morgenthau, as tax collector, may believe he is doing his country a service by advising an all-out tax on the income of American industry, but thinking citizens know that is not so. In its last analysis the proposal of Mr. Morgenthau virtually divides all the income of industry between wages and taxes. That is socialism or communism, whichever you choose to call it. It certainly is not Americanism—even in times of a so-called emergency, as we are said to face at this time. With the profit motive abolished, industry becomes the property of the state. In brief, Mr. Morgenthau would give us Government ownership—not control but ownership—of industry. He says it would be for the duration of the war. But every person who knows his politics knows that once we have Government ownership it is here to stay.

The Post Impressionist

Day At The Races

The night before the day we had chosen to attend the races we bought a late evening paper, and looked over the entries. Sort of a preview, you might say.

The program called for eight races—six claiming races, one allowance race and a stake race. It appeared to be a well-balanced card.

As we sat over a bottle of beer near her home, I asked Auntie Lore what she thought of the list in general. "Oh!" she exclaimed, "there's Cabdriver . . . that's the horse I'm going to play in the big race."

I had my own ideas about Cabdriver. The horse I fancied in that race was Bartender, and I said so. But Auntie Lore was adamant; that is, she had a fixation on the other horse. As a matter of fact, when Auntie Lore makes her decision on a bet, one of Hitler's blitzkriegs wouldn't budge her . . . and, I might add, she gets results; and how, sometimes.

A race train offers a fertile field for the study of homo sapiens. You find everything, from the flotsam to the jetsam, including just plain Sam. A boisterous card game over here; chap named Conservative, with his prim spouse, over there. Owner of a delicatessen store and his fat wife and their offspring, holding down the entire one end of the car; and at the other end, a group of playboys, in shirt sleeves and collars open at the throat, in hilarious argument concerning the capabilities of the horses and jockeys about to perform. And, last but not least, Auntie Lore and your Uncle Dudley, sitting there, enjoying the conditioned air (which, by now, had developed symptoms of ill-conditioning), and a highball, and reviewing the prospects of an afternoon of fun and thrill.

The sandwich-and-coffee boy came along, and we did some bartering with him. Jim seemed to be the only person on the premises not interested in the business in hand, i. e., the picking of a winner.

Arrived inside the inclosure, we bought programs, and walked over to the Daily Double odds board to see the odds.

Now, my own approach to this Daily Double problem is simply this, and it is simple: I never buy more than one ticket. And I usually take a long shot in one race, a short-priced horse in the other. The thing, of course, does not always work. If it did, we would all be rich. But it does sometimes. It did today.

We were now in the center of a hustling, bustling throng. People rushed hither, thither and yon, or talked in groups, or drank beer at the bar, or munched on sandwiches, with a coffee chaser, at the food counter. The social echelon in its entirety was there. Butcher, baker, banker, bootblack, bootmaker, bookmaker, barber, botanist and all the rest. And all imbued with the one problem, i. e., which one is the winner?

Auntie Lore thought we should get our seats in the grandstand. So we climbed the stairs, sat down, and there, in front of us, spread the oval-shaped racing strip, with the odds board looking up as if to say, "Well, see what you can do this time." Even at this early moment, before the show has actually started, the heart takes on an extra beat or two. It's like watching the old alma mater, backed up on its own 1-yard-line, fourth down and 1 yard to go. Then tension increases as the square of the odds on the fourth favorite.

As we said before, it was a beautiful afternoon. Sun shining, track fast, birdies singing, gay crowd in festive mood. The whole situation, even the atmosphere, reeked with the lusty flavor of a Roman holiday. And Auntie Lore and your cousin Ed, right in the midst of it all. It was interesting, exhilarating . . .

We'll skip the first race, except to remark that Auntie Lore's horse decided to call it a day at the far turn. As for mine, he'd evidently made a similar decision when he left the starting gate. An inauspicious beginning.

In the second effort, however, we improved our collective financial position. In short, we collected. Auntie Lore played a long shot for place, and the horse should have won. But he probably realized how the little woman would feel, so he came in second. Which was fortunate for me, for the winner, Vitascope, was in the first half of my Daily Double, and I had also played him to win. To celebrate this favorable turn in events, I brought up two bottles of cold beer, and we drank the health of the whole world and a few planets thrown in.

The third heat was a sizzler, and as far as I was concerned the apex of the afternoon. The tactical sequences, in this connection, were as follows: Before I had made my now famous final decision on the selection for the second half of the Daily Double, I teetered between the favorite, M. J. Brennan, and a stout little (at that time) half-miler named Little Argo, at 15 to 1. I kept teetering, until finally the DD windows threatened to close, when I lost balance and fell over on the long shot. And now the fireworks were about to begin.

This third race was at 6 furlongs (which is three-quarters of a mile), and when they headed into the home stretch, there were three horses nostril to nostril and I don't mean maybe. They came up the track like a trio of oldtime fire horses on the way to the Windsor Hotel fire, which happened somewheres around 1902. Little Argo on the inside, a horse I cannot remember in the middle, and M. J. Brennan on the outside. When they shot by us, it looked like M. J. Brennan, by half an electron. Auntie Lore, besides being beside me, was beside herself. I turned to her and said . . . "By George, isn't that too bad?" Before I could wheel around again, she shrieked . . . "Look, you've got the winner!" Sure enough, there was number seven on the scoreboard. And then, in the immediate vicinity of Auntie Lore & Co., pandemonium broke loose. The Roman holiday was on in full swing. And just to mention one of the lesser lights of the occasion, the Daily Double paid $98.40. Not bad for a $2 investment.

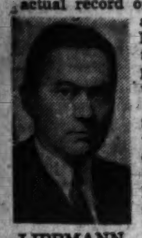
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Real View Of Congress

DURING the coming debate on American foreign policy, it is important to keep clearly in mind the actual record of Congress. Since actions speak louder than words, that record expresses the real view of Congress.



LIPPMANN

The record throws a strong white light on two contentions of which we shall probably hear a good deal. One is that the President's policy of aiding the Allies has conjured up a danger which, had we remained strictly neutral, would not exist. The other is that the Neutrality Act is still an effective insulation against America's being involved in war.

THE RECORD shows that before the policy of aiding the Allies was put into effect and more than a year before there was any talk whatever of repealing the Neutrality Act, Congress recognized the danger of Hitler by adopting the most far-reaching measures of national defense in the whole history of the nation.

Hitler invaded Holland on May 10. On May 16, the President asked for the first emergency appropriation. On May 31, he asked for the second, and also for authority to call the National Guard and Army reserves to active duty. Congress acted with considerable speed. On June 11 it had completed a naval supply bill; on June 13, a military supply bill; on June 14, a naval expansion bill; on June 26, the first emergency appropriation. On July 10, the President asked for a third emergency appropriation. On July 19, Congress had authorized a two-ocean navy. On Aug. 27, Congress had authorized the calling of the National Guard and it was debating conscription, which was adopted by September 16.

The record shows clearly that Hitler's invasion and conquest of France convinced Congress that America must have a two-ocean navy, immense air force, and compulsory military service. None of these measures was taken to carry out a policy of aiding the Allies. And almost no one in Congress thought the Neutrality Act made it unnecessary to take these extraordinary measures.

FROM JUNE to September 1940 the country was committed by repeated and conclusive votes of Congress to the position that a victory by Hitler and his allies would be an extreme danger to America. Congress made this record after France had fallen, while Britain was threatened with invasion, and before the Balkans or Russia had been drawn into the war. Congress did not take these extraordinary measures in order to help the British; it took them at the very time when it seemed most probable that there might soon be no British to help. With the exception of conscription which was carried by majorities of about two to one in both houses, almost all of these measures were adopted without a division, that is virtually by unanimous consent.

Surely the record is an obsolute refutation of the whole isolationist argument that but for the interventionists the country would not be in peril. For the record shows that Congress was never so unanimously aroused as in the months of June to September 1940 when the United States was threatened with the actuality of complete isolation.

THE TRUTH of the matter is that the interventionist policy of aiding the Allies was put into effect after the Congress had recognized the danger of Hitler, and as a means of supplementing and reinforcing the emergency national defense program. Congress already had two great emergency appropriations under consideration before the President made his first vague verbal commitments on June 10 to give material aid to the victims of aggression. As a matter of fact, apart from the sale of some surplus stocks of weapons, he did not give Britain any real aid until September 3 when he traded bases for the fifty destroyers. By that time Congress had already called for the two-ocean navy, the great air force, and was in the last stages of the debate on conscription.

It was not the interventionist argument but Hitler's victories which moved Congress. It was not until five months after Congress had authorized a two-ocean Navy, not until three months after it had adopted conscription, that the interventionist policy of lease-lend was even proposed (December 17). And the lease-lend policy was not actually adopted until March 11, 1941, nearly ten months after Congress had begun consideration of the gigantic emergency defense program. How then can anyone continue to argue that the danger which Congress has repeatedly recognized in its votes arises, not from Hitler but from Mr. Roosevelt?

THIS SAME record throws light on what Congress really thinks of the effectiveness of the Neutrality Act. Before Hitler broke through the French army and reached the Atlantic Ocean, the Neutrality Act did in fact prevent Americans from becoming involved in incidents which might have led to a popular demand for war. But once Hitler was on the shores of the Atlantic, it was evident to Congress and to most of the nation that superior force, and not the prohibitions of the Neutrality Act, was the only defense. After May 1940, no one dreamed of regarding the Neutrality Act as useful to American defense, as providing any kind of guaranty that the Americas could by its provisions any longer be insulated against war.

The question then was no longer whether the Neutrality Act protects America against its enemies. The votes of Congress on the Navy, the air force, and the Army had answered that question once and for all. The question had become whether this act, which no one relied on to restrain Hitler, was not seriously restraining America from helping itself.

THAT is the real issue which now goes to Congress; since it is evident that Congress does not rely on the Neutrality Act to stop Hitler, since Hitler is obviously not being stopped by it, what does the act now do, what purpose does it serve, except to stop America from doing what it needs to do and means to do in defense of its own vital interests?

2-Ocean War Threat Seen

Japan Crisis Looms

By Rear Adm. Yates Stirling Jr.
(U. S. Navy Retired)
United Press Naval Expert

THE POSSIBILITY that the United States Navy may find itself engaged in a two-ocean "shooting" war again is increasing.

Our relations with Japan appear to be drifting to a new period of acute tension, British military leaders in the Far East are demanding more and more United States naval "cooperation," the problem of lease-lend munitioning of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's "Free China" armies in effective volume is up for immediate consideration, and leaders of the imperial Japanese navy—who have long kept an effective brake on the ambitions of the more ardent Nipponese army leaders—seem to be drifting towards the opinion that Japan must fight soon to escape British-American "encirclement."

Russia is likely to prove the key to the situation. If the present German drive on Moscow succeeds, and Soviet military power in Europe is crushed, Japan will be sorely tempted to move against Vladivostok in the north and might move into Thailand at the south end of her "defense zone," at the same time. Such moves would put the question of war squarely up to the United States.

MOST OF our Naval leaders, already committed to a virtual "shooting" war against Germany in the Atlantic, probably are opposed to taking on Japan at the same time but it always is possible that the decision will not lie in our hands.

President Roosevelt's anti-Japanese oil embargo—which he himself admitted might lead to war with Nippon—now appears to be 100 per cent effective, Britain and the Netherlands Indies also have stopped all oil supplies to Nippon, and Japanese-American conversations looking to a general understanding with regard to the Far East appear to be in a stalemate. All signs point towards a crisis, possibly within the next few months, if Russia collapses in Europe.

One of the most significant developments is the changing attitude of Japanese naval leaders. Traditionally conservative, highly respectful of British and American naval strength, and more keenly aware of Nippon's economic vulnerability than leaders of the army, the imperial navy always has sought to avoid war with the English-speaking powers.

THE VERY fact that Nipponese naval leaders are so keenly aware of their country's economic weaknesses, however, now appears to be making them war-minded. The Japanese navy, like all others, must have oil to exist. Cut off from adequate oil supplies it must be ready to fight to restore its sources of supply. Equally the imperial navy is keenly interested in Nippon's formerly large overseas trade. It needs a big and active merchant marine to maintain its position. But that merchant marine now is endangered, not only by a lack of fuel oil, but also because of diminishing trade.—Nippon's markets in British and American-controlled areas and in Latin America have practically disappeared, routes to Europe are closed by the British blockade, and foreign exchange which international shipping must have—is impossible to obtain because of British-American financial pressure. All this the Japanese navy well knows and its leaders are beginning to say so.

And if the imperial navy decides to throw its support to the imperial army for war—war is very likely to come whether Britain and the United States want it or not.

Japan Expects Every Man To Defy Fire And Bombs

Tokyo, Oct. 8 (AP).—Every able-bodied Japanese will be expected to stay at his post if an enemy bombs these islands.

They are fully aware of the vulnerability of their industrial cities, built of wooden structures, to destruction by fire.

They reason, too, that enemy bombers would be more apt to carry fire bombs because the fuel load required to reach Japan and return to any enemy base would probably limit the load of explosive bombs to perhaps ten 100-kilo (220-pound) bombs per plane.

Such bombs might frighten the people, the board of information says, but the toll of human lives would be small.

To Fight Fires

So the emphasis now has veered away from planning civilian shelters to instructing each man and woman to stick to his post, at home or at work, in readiness to douse fires.

There has been no effort to convince the public (as was done in Germany) that enemy planes never would be able to reach Japan.

Rather, an official bulletin warned Japanese that "it is possible about 20 or 30 bombers would appear over big cities during the daytime, around 15 planes at night and probably several planes in formation over small cities."

The board said these might "attack large cities from 5 to 15 times in one day, several times for small cities."

Maneuvers Due

And so defense authorities, about to conduct the annual air-raid defense maneuvers, are concentrating as never before on the problem of fighting flames.

The annual ten-day maneuvers will begin October 12. In Tokyo they will be extended an additional four days.

Never since the drills began four years ago have they borne such a stern air of reality for the Japanese, who have been reading much in recent weeks about "Anglo-American encirclement" of Japan and the democracies' tie-up with Soviet Russia since the German attack last June.

Wealthy Venezuela

By Carlos C. Nagel

Rich In Resources And Freedom

GEN. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, head of the Venezuelan army and former President of that country, a recent caller at the White House, has been very emphatic regarding Pan-American policies. His plans have been put in words by the ambassador of his country here when this diplomat, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, declared that we in the Americas "should not consider our present close cooperation as of a provisory, but of a permanent character." The "Good-Neighbor Policy" should not be considered as a war measure and any entity working toward developing such ideals should not labor under the heading of "emergency."

It is obvious that the people of Venezuela have inherited something more than the glory of being able to call their country the birthplace of Simon Bolivar, the liberator of, either indirectly or through personal effort, lands seven times larger than those freed by George Washington. The present policy of that country as a leading member of the concert of American nations entitles it perhaps more to a preponderant position than the distinction of being "the only country in the Americas without internal or external debts." Venezuela's political future is as healthy as its economical present. It is essentially American in a broad sense.

During the last Pan-American conference in Havana the most important declaration, known among diplomats as "Declaration 15," was proposed and was accepted by all American nations. This all-important declaration contemplates the basic rules under which today the Americas are working for a safe future: "Reciprocal assistance and defensive cooperation."

DECLARATION 15 was proposed by Dr. Diogenes Escalante, present ambassador of Venezuela to this country and delegate of his country to the Havana conference.

For both the economical as well as the splendid political situation of Venezuela there are good reasons. The country owns perhaps the richest oil fields in the world and is the second largest producer of the fuel. There are important gold mines in the regions to the southeast of Ciudad Bolivar. Coffee, cocoa, sugarcane and maize are abundant. Coffee plantations alone amount to over 30,000 throughout the country. When it comes to the political organization of Venezuela and its dependability as a member of the democratic bloc of American nations, we have to remember only that Bolivar's home country was also the birthplace of Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, an absolute dictator whose regime still remains very vividly in the mind of liberty-loving Venezuelans.

Much has been said and written about "El Caudillo," who will have in history the distinction of being within this century the first absolute ruler before Hitler. During 27 years of domination of Venezuela and until December of 1935, Juan Vicente Gomez gave the people of Venezuela a taste of what dictatorship is like and how dear liberty can be. It was a costly but thorough apprenticeship for constitutional and lawful political life, and a period which has made the Venezuelans of today certainly the most peremptory and trenchant defenders of our democratic systems within the Americas.

CONSIDERING the recent existence of Dictator Gomez and again considering that Gen. Lopez Contreras, at present the right-hand man of President Isais Medina, was at one time and until death of Gomez a member of his last cabinet, it is necessary to mention in a few words not his government, since he was the law, but the person of Caudillo Juan Vicente Gomez. He, after all and in spite of his ruthlessness, left Venezuela with a money that was the soundest in existence then. He left furthermore in the treasury of the debt-free country 96-million bolivars, a booming oil-industry and many other benefits.

Gomez was utterly ruthless with his enemies or the enemies of his camarillas with which he surrounded himself during his long years of dictatorship. Born of an Indian woman, he grew into an illiterate man with an unerring instinct for business and finance and with a certain sense of loyalty toward those who surrounded him when he acquired power. It is said that Gomez himself was not cruel but left free reign to his camarilla to proceed as they wished. At his death one of the richest men in the world, he gained his enormous fortune through shrewd dealings, but, it is claimed and recognized by leaders of the country today, never by using autocratic power over the nation. Today some Venezuelans even claim that Gomez himself was completely ignorant of the hundreds of political enemies that were dying in the famous "Rotunda," the now-abolished political prison of Caracas.

It is strange but true that Gomez, contrary to every other despot known in history, kept his armed forces completely divorced from politics. The Venezuelan army was during his regime an isolated national institution which he developed conscious that no armed force can carry the name of National Army with dignity if influenced by politics.

IT is only so that it is possible to associate a man like Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras and other distinguished officers of that country with the late dictator. Lopez Contreras was minister of war of Venezuela in the last cabinet and a trusted assistant he must have been since the dictator appointed him his successor on his death-bed. That is, he named him provisional President since Gomez never considered himself a dictator. This, considering the abysmal difference in background and mentality, is as astonishing as if Adolf Hitler should appoint a man of President Roosevelt's ideals as his successor.

The true democratic spirit and respect for the law which always characterized Lopez Contreras became crystallized during those days of utter confusion and unrest which followed Dictator Gomez's death. The former refused to take over the leadership of the country as provisional President until the cabinet and the Congress nominated him. The people of Caracas hesitated and feared giving executive power to a man who only so recently had been closely identified with the dead tyrant.

It was not long before the people of Venezuela came to realize that their new President was fanatically loyal to the constitution and indeed had no intention of using the first post of the land as a permanent position. Gen. Lopez Contreras' first act as President reduced the presidental term from seven to five years without immediate reelection.

Aware of the absolute need for foreign capital to further develop the natural resources of the country, Venezuela's foreign policy includes today an intensive drive to invite capital from the outside, the safety of which is guaranteed by a long record of profitable relations and close cooperation with foreign investors.

The country has adopted most advanced social laws. The laws protecting workers have been inspired by those of Chile and Mexico, with additional provisions that contemplate participation of labor in the profits. Drastic measures like these can be compared only to those related with the education of the people, which is being promoted very strongly. Considering the enormous distance between settlements in the Sierra, it has proved both impractical and costly to build school houses. Hence a staff of teachers, together with a social worker, doctor and dentist, travel periodically through the country-side on special buses, calling on all homes with children. Lessons are delivered and assignments left for the pupil to work on, and environment and health are constantly checked.

LIVING conditions are high in Venezeula, in fact they top the scale in the Americas, but the government is doing everything possible to remedy the situation, although wages, too, are among the highest. While an inexperienced oil worker makes between $3 and $4 a day, a linotypist in the city receives 32 bolivars a day which amounts to over 10 American dollars. The high cost of living can be traced back to the mass migration of farming hands to the well-paid jobs in the oil fields and industries. The neglect of land exploitation for farming is being remedied by the government through the new agriculture bank which is lending the small farmers 50 million bolivars in order to develop native farming products.

Of much concern and interest to us is the attitude of the Venezuelan government facing the totalitarian, or more precisely, the Nazi propaganda which has been so very active in other countries of South America.

Already in 1936 Venezuela showed itself as one of the leaders in the movement of rapprochement between the American nations by suggesting in the Pan-American Conference of Buenos Aires a policy of consultation between American governments.

Two years ago the same country was the first one to pass a law that killed in the root all focuses of disturbances which have given other South American countries so much trouble. Foreigners were prohibited from organizing clubs with political character or in which doctrines of a foreign ideology were discussed. Uniforms reflecting political tendencies were banned. Printed propaganda by foreigners was made unlawful. The result has been that Venezuela has had no disturbances of an Axis origin and fifth columnists have been non-existent.

American-Venezuelan relations have been consequently very close ones and of mutual aid in the present times. Only very recently enormous iron deposits have been discovered south of the Orinoco, but there are many other products which the United States will need more and more from that country. Venezuela has today an American naval mission active in modernizing the country's sea strength, the nation's proximity to the Panama Canal being of importance to the States. In this country itself there are at present 15 officers of the Army and aviation corps of Venezuela distributed and serving actively in different army posts for training. Outside of a small Dutch-owned air line serving certain routes between Curacao, La Guiara and Maracaibo, the only foreign air line is Pan American Airways which has accomplished miracles of "good will" not only in Venezuela but all over South America. The country's own national lines, incidentally, have a marvelous record of safety unequalled perhaps in the Americas; since the service was inaugurated in 1927 there has been not one single accident.

As an observer for the government of Venezuela, Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras' stay in the United States is not only a gesture of good will. Not in the best of health, the general claims to be here for a rest but a dynamic person's recuperation often is accomplished by useful and constructive activity in which undoubtedly Lopez Contreras is indulging for the benefit of Pan-Americanism.

Britons Chalk Red Emblems On Tank Plant

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in England, Oct. 8.—Britain is turning out tanks from a factory on whose walls are hammer and sickle signs and on whose floors stand Cincinnati and Milwaukee machinery.

The hammer and sickle were scrawled on the walls by British laborers.

The machinery from Cincinnati and Milwaukee was originally used to manufacture locomotives.

Two years ago the plant was idle, its windows broken and its chimneys smokeless.

Then came war—and tanks.

The factory was converted quickly, with 80 per cent of its original locomotive-making machinery retained for tank-making.

The place now is a scene of feverish activity.

Below these words a hammer and sickle has been drawn with chalk.

"Speed the Tanks for Russia," read signs on tanks in manufacture.

"Russia's entry in the war has made some difference in output," an official said.

"Who put these signs around?" the official was asked.

"The men did," he said. "You can't stop them—not that we want to."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

A Theater Trend

"Before I go to any new play from now on I am going to call up and get two good seats on the stage," declared Elmer Twitchell, veteran first-nighter, man-about-town and haddock fisherman today, "I don't want to be too close to the actors!"

Elmer had just been to another new Broadway opening in which most of the action took place in the audience. He was quite upset.

"Time was when a playgoer could safely accept seats in the body of the theater," he went on, "but the place to be these days if you come to see the show and not to get into the cast is right up behind the footlights. Very little action goes on up there—and what there is of it don't amount to much. Most of the acting—and all the important stuff—goes on among the cash customers.

"It all started when a couple of obscure comics put on a crazy combination burlesque show, vaudeville outing, indoor rodeo and men's smoker in which the performers romped all over the theater. It was a novelty and it went over big. But once is plenty. And this trend in all lines of the drama to fuse the performers with the spectators has gotta be curbed before I go nuts.

"I want to know who's in the cast and who's in the orchestra circle. This business of getting two seats to a play and suddenly discovering me and the wife are in the supporting company is getting on my nerves.

"George Kaufman, the one fellow I trusted not to do that to me, did it in a new show 'Mr. Big' last week and it left me with a feeling I'd been to a double-header of "Hellz-a-poppin.' It was like seeing Olsen and Johnson in multiple mirrors.

"I never felt sure that the feller on my left wasn't in the cast and there was moments when I felt out of place as if I'd spent $8 to spend a night at a rally of the Actors' Equity.

"Once I even asked my wife if she had an Equity card just to make sure she didn't cross me by suddenly swinging into action as a feature player in the show.

"An audience is entitled to a little privacy. It likes to feel that it is watching the play, not trying to fix its exact part in a riot.

"I like to think I can get up and walk out on any play if I don't like it. But in these new shows if I get up and do any walking I am apt to be regarded as an essential character in the plot.

"The next time I go to a new show I'm going to sit in the pit with the musicians. There's an outside chance this will be neutral territory, safe for noncombatants."

Jeffries Renominated As Detroit Mayor

Detroit, Oct. 8 (AP).—Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, given a more than 2-to-1 lead over his closest rival, was nominated for a second term in Detroit's nonpartisan municipal primary election yesterday.

Virtually complete returns today from a light vote gave Mayor Jeffries 109,179 votes to 49,793 for the veteran recorder's court judge, Joseph A. Gillis. Half a dozen other candidates were strung out behind with returns missing from only 15 of 1015 precincts.

Mayor Jeffries and Judge Gillis, the two leaders, will be rivals in the final election November 4.

Freedom Of Contract Of Employment

IN CONTINUING this discussion of the crooked government of a local of the Movie Operators' Union in Newark I want to emphasize the fact that William Green, the president of the A.F.L., and other high officers of the organization which is now holding its annual convention in Seattle, simply could not have been ignorant of the facts of the case as presented in the Chancery Court of New Jersey. It was a shocking case and yet they subsequently permitted George Browne, the Chicago gangster, who is president of the national organization of the movie employes, to become a vice president of the A. F. L. and a member of its supreme governing body, the executive council. And Louis Kauffman, the racketeer, who was denounced by the court for keeping American workmen in the status of serfs and compelling them to perform work for which he drew the pay, was permitted to remain in power as business agent of the Newark local until this very day.

PEGLER

Here is what Vice Chancellor Berry said:

"This complaint (of extortion) is based on the contention of many of the junior members (non-voters or serfs of the union officials) that they were required to pay certain officers sums ranging from $100 to $600 as the price of being awarded certain motion picture operator jobs and that they were also required to kick back to the officers from $5 to $25 a week. This charge is vigorously denied but the evidence supporting it is overwhelming and justifies the conclusion that it is well founded.

"IT IS admitted that the local has a virtual monopoly of operators' positions within its jurisdiction. In actual practice the business agent (Kauffman) is the dictator and controls every such job. His word is law. The theater managers know from experience that they have to request the business manager to assign operators to their theaters. They are not permitted to deal directly. The testimony discloses that men who were paying graft usually had steady employment. It is too plain for argument that nominal control of jobs was in the local and actual control in the business manager and that the members who have acquiesced in this practice have surrendered to the local and its officers their right of freedom of contract of employment.

"The Constitution of this State provides that 'all men are by nature free and independent and have certain natural and unalienable rights among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, acquiring, possessing and protecting property and of pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness.' It is against public policy that the individual should surrender his right of contract of employment, the right to the sale of his own labor, to any other individual or organization 'except to the extent necessary to subserve the public interest.'

"THE INSTANT CASES present but new examples of that spirit of revolt by the rank and file of labor against autocracy and dictatorship within the union. It is unfortunate not only for labor but for society in general that such conditions as disclosed in these cases can exist. Union autocracy, whether applied internally or externally, is equally reprehensible. Iabor unions had their origin in the ancient guilds of foreign countries. In this country they were born of necessity arising from the unconscionable conduct of capital, of employers making virtual slaves of their employes. But the cure which was sought for these ills via the union has, in many instances of which the instant cases present a fair example, proved much worse than the disease itself. The ills have been increased manyfold by the unconscionable conduct of union officials and racketeering business agents. It is such conduct persisted in by so-called labor leaders, business agents, etc., in their lust for power and their greed for wealth which they vociferously condemn, that at times brings unions into disrepute. When union leaders learn that enslavement of laborers to their autocratic whims is no less pernicious than the much decried enslavement of labor by capital, there will be less necessity for intervention of the courts in labor disputes of this kind.

"The issue here is much deeper than appears on the surface. It is whether the inherent right of the individual to work out his own destiny shall be preserved; whether individuals are to be compelled to surrender to collectivism and collectivism in turn to dictatorship."

Kauffman, now indicted in the Federal court in New York for racketeering through his union, was not challenged by any authority in the A. F. L. after his denunciation and the proof of his grafting practices in 1934, and he remains the boss of the local whose men he reduced to the status of serfs, by authority of a charter from the A. F. L.

Italy's 'Little Gibraltar' Once Was Way Station For Ancients

Almost in the middle of the Mediterranean Sea's 100-mile bottleneck between Sicily and Tunisia juts the rugged, volcanic island of Pantelleria, which a bulletin from the National Geographic Society describes as Italy's "Little Gibraltar."

The British announced they had bombarded the island in an effort to destroy its value as an Axis base.

"Pantelleria's location is as strategic as when the ancient Romans and Carthaginians fought for its possession," says the bulletin. "Mediterranean shipping between Gibraltar and Egypt must pass close to it, through the narrowest passageway along that route.

"The island, roughly twice the size of Manhattan Island in New York City, was heavily fortified by the Italians in 1937 as a counterweight to British Malta, about 150 miles to the southeast. Pantelleria is little more than 60 miles from southwestern Sicily and only 44 miles from the African coast.

"The 2700-foot volcano which forms the island's central feature is quiet, but simmering volcano fires make their underground presence known through hot mineral springs and steaming fissures in the rocks. The irregular coast is steep, with only one good harbor at the island's principal settlement.

"Raising figs, olives, grapes, and vegetables in the fertile soil provides a livelihood for many of Pantelleria's 10,000 residents, who find that lack of fresh water is the island's chief disadvantage."

House Opens Debate on Second Lend-Lease Bill

preliminary to an attempt to specifically bar lend-lease supplies to Moscow.

No amendments can be offered until Friday, when the House will be held late for a vote, but managers of the measure predicted the full amount will be approved without any hamstringing limitations.

Notice of an effort to trim 300 million dollars from the $1,875,000,000 earmarked for agricultural and industrial supplies was served by Representative Taber, of New York, ranking Republican member of the committee.

Representative Ditter (Republican), of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, announced he will ask the House to set aside 10 per cent of the total appropriation "for those small business organizations now facing shutdowns for want of basic materials."

From House noninterventionists meanwhile came a floor attack on the committee's refusal to make confidential data submitted by Administration officials available to all House members.

Representative Keefe (Republican), of Wisconsin, complained two Republican House members vainly sought access to the secret data and it was denied them. He said the members were Representatives O'Hara (Republican), of Minnesota and Representative Bradley (Republican) of Michigan.

Chairman Cannon replied that much information in the committee's confidential record would be invaluable to Hitler if publicized and for that reason he will make none of its available unless the committee votes to do so.

O'Hara said House members should be trusted with the same information as the subcommittee and needed more information to guide them in their vote. He was particularly concerned, he said, with a shortage of tractors in his district, and wanted figures on exports of these to England.

Supplementing the initial seven-billion-dollar lend-lease appropriation, the $5,985,000,000 asked by the President to maintain the flow of aid through June 30, 1943, was approved virtually without change.

In addition the committee reported $174,416,229 in other deficiency items, including $120,996,000 for naval ordnance (embracing funds to arm merchantmen) and for construction or acquisition of 212 small Coast Guard vessels for harbor patrol work.

Distribution of the lend-lease fund, to provide planes, tanks, guns, ships, ammunition and food supplies to nations fighting Hitler assigned $2,255,575,667 to the War Department, $1,498,129,333 to the Navy Department, one billion dollars to the Agriculture Department, $374,225,000 to the Maritime Commission, $562,070,000 to the Treasury, $285,000,000 for necessary services and 10 million dollars for administrative expenses.

Approved 26 to 5

The bill was approved 26 to 5 by the committee. The report submitted by Cannon implied additional funds will be needed next March if production is to increase sufficiently to "overwhelm the productive efforts of the Axis."

Highlights included:

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, testified that anything done to help Russia helps contribute "to an early termination of the war by the destruction of the German war machine, through attrition or dispersion, through defeat or by the collapse of the German government."

OPM Director William S. Knusen testified that between 15 and 20 per cent of this country's factory capacity is now devoted to war materials, but by June 30, 1943, "the United States will be devoting approximately one-half of its factory production to war materials."

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard testified that domestic and lend-lease requirements will raise American farm production to an "all-time high" in 1942.

Secretary of War Stimson said "West Africa is becoming more and more, from what we hear, a danger spot, where supplies would be necessary; North Africa the same way."

Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission, said the Nation's intercoastal shipping has been reduced by almost 50 per cent since the war began and "all ports have to suffer," but the "acute shortage" of merchantmen in this hemisphere should be eased as the construction program progresses.

Ohio Man Denies He's Nazi Agent

Cleveland, Oct. 8 (AP).—Karl Zanzinger, 47, German-born Clevelander, today pleaded innocent before Federal Judge Robert N. Wilkin to four counts of an indictment charging him with having acted as an unregistered foreign agent.

The indictment accused Zanzinger of failing to register as agent for the German government, the German Labor Front, the Strength through Joy of Germany and German heavy industries. Following his arrest June 30, FBI agents said he had recruited Cleveland skilled workers for German industries.

Hankin For PUC Post Wins Backing

"The President of the United States selected me for the post without my having any political affiliations. What sort of a being—I cannot say a human being—do you think I would be if I revoked these democratic principles which made me what I am and embraced the principles which would undermine democracy.

Senator Austin asked, "Do you believe in collectivist economy?"

Hankin—"I definitely do not. I believe in free enterprise."

Senator Austin—"Do you believe in the totalitarian system of government?"

Hankin—"I definitely do not. If you take any kind of government in which there is no economic freedom, you will find no freedom of the press or religion or public expression. Conversely, if you find a country which permits freedom in one of these fields, it's borne out in other fields, including the economic."

Cites Faith in United States Way

Senator Austin—"I know you have taken the oath of citizen, but may I ask, Do you believe in the form of government of the United States?"

Hankin: "Yes, I certainly do."

Senator Austin: "Do you believe in its economic system?"

Hankin: "Yes. That form of economy is what has brought me to my present position."

Hankin described in detail his background. He was born in the Ukraine; came to this country at the age of 13 with his parents; was graduated from New York public schools and the College of the City of New York; studied philosophy and law at Harvard.

While at Harvard he helped support himself by inspecting shoes in a Brockton, Mass., factory for export to the Russian army, he explained. Once he delivered a lecture on the philosophical background of Bolshevism in which "I did not approve of the Soviet regime," he declared. He said he was never a Communist agent.

From 1920 to 1924 he taught philosophy and mathematics at George Washington University here while he was studying law. In 1924 he became a special assistant to the Attorney General, remaining in that position until 1926 when he served for one year as a special assistant at the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

Conducted Law Practice

For 10 years—from 1927 to 1937—Hankin and his wife conducted a joint law practice here. He went to the Federal Power Commission in 1937. He is a member of the bar of the Supreme Court and the author of several books and articles on its work.

When a "whispering campaign" started against him following his nomination by the President, Hankin said, friends traced it to J. B. Matthews, a Dies Committee agent. He told the subcommittee he had met Matthews once at a meeting under Quaker auspices and had merely said "hello" to him.

Senator Austin asked if he told Matthews he was in sympathy with the Soviet government.

"No," replied Hankin. "Quite the contrary, he told me there were many who were in sympathy with it."

Matthews, asked by The Post if he cared to comment on Hankin's testimony, said he preferred not to make a statement.

When Hankin had completed his testimony, Senator Austin declared, "You'll receive my recommendation."

"And mine, too," said Idaho's Senator Clark.

"Gentlemen," said Senator Reynolds, "you know what my position is on communism. I've been against it ever since I entered Congress. I've also been against immigration because so many come here and take advantage of our country.

"But I am inspired by your testimony. I'm glad to find a man, foreign born, who cames and shows appreciation and approval of the way of life of this country. I wish many, many American citizens could have heard your statement here today."

In announcing the subcommittee's unanimous approval, Senator Reynolds said he had received many anonymous letters against Hankin, but that no one would come and testify in person against him.

Full District Committee action on the appointment cannot be taken until after October 15, when Chairman McCarran returns to Washington from public grazing hearings in the West.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Youth Enters Naval Academy With Mixed Emotions; Should He Have Left Mother Supporting Family? And Will His Sweetheart Wait for Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several months ago I realized my life's ambition—namely, an appointment to the United States Naval Academy. However, at the time, I was in doubt as to whether I should enter the Academy or stay home and help with family problems. And now, although I have entered the Academy, and like the life here tremendously, I am still in doubt as to whether I made a correct decision.

Since April of 1940 my step-father has been out of a job. Up to now he has been unable to find new employment. This places a tremendous responsibility on my mother's shoulders. She is a nurse and is now working at that profession in order to support the family. She wants me to graduate from the Academy, but I wonder if this is a selfish thing for me to do, in the circumstances.

Besides this I am deeply in love with a girl in my home town, and I am sure the devotion is mutual. We have often talked of marriage and had tentatively set a wedding date, when I received this appointment—which makes marriage out of the question for me for at least 5 years. And 5 years is a long time to ask any girl to wait, even if she does love you deeply. I would appreciate your help in getting my bearings in this perplexing situation. WORRIED PLEBE.

Tackle Assignment Without Regret

DEAR W. P.: In view of the fact that your mother is wholly in accord with your life's ambition to be graduate of the United States Naval Academy, it would seem to me that, by diligently applying yourself to your current educational assignment, you have better opportunity to honor her sacrificial devotion, than you could lay claim to, in going back home to become a wage-earner in a dead-end job, or one in which you would feel only a perfunctory interest.

Whatever the hardships and trials of her daily routine, I dare-say she feels herself rich', compensated in the knowledge that her efforts are making possible, for her son, apprenticeship to an honored profession, wherein he may forge ahead to a distinguished career. Had you stayed home to help support the family, she probably would have been obliged to continue wage-earning, even so—and without the high incentive, the significant future purpose, that sustains and continuously rewards her labors in the present arrangements.

Furthermore, the fact that she has gallantly shouldered the burden of supporting the family, in the existing emergency, does not necessarily make her a legitimate object of worried filial concern. So long as she seems adequate to the undertaking, one may consider that, purely as a demonstration of hardy self sufficiency, it is an invaluable experience for her, at this period in her life. As a mature-age woman, whose children are arriving at a suitable age to become self-governing, it is distinctly to her psychological advantage to discover that she is competent to go outside the home and render a marketable service to society.

It is a means of re-discovering her essential social worth as an individual, so that when the day comes that her children are eagerly breaking home ties, in order to find their individual niche in the world scheme, she will not feel outgrown and discarded and no longer needed; but rather, content that her job with them is done; and qualified—if called upon, or if she so desires—to be of further service to the community at large, in a skilled professional (and self-sustaining) capacity.

In brief, then, your mother has everything to gain and nothing to lose, in holding to her present course to get you through school, providing you address yourself wholeheartedly to the proposition of making the most of the opportunity she is giving you. And this means having done with remorseful backward looking, concerning your decision to enter the Academy, and letting nothing distract you from giving her the best possible return on her investment of labor and hope.

About the girl: Five years' postponement of marriage is a harsh prospect to contemplate, I concede. However, in view of your tender age, that period of enforced waiting should prove to be "all to the good." You may be sure that if genuine mutual love exists, delayed marriage will not destroy it. Unity of purpose and understanding are love's concomitants—and if the girl loves you as much as she says, she will steadfastly champion and support your determination to claim an ensign's rank before marrying her. If she is unwilling to share your life on terms which allow you to be most fully yourself—as you hope to become—then you may know that she is not a well chosen life partner for you. M.H.

Mary Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

'Dream Wardrobe' of Business Girl Is Realized; Prize Winner Gives Views on Clothes Planning

Office Needs, Basis Of Selections by Myra Nancy Coco

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

EVERY business girl may not be fortunate enough to be a contest winner, but she can certainly dress like one. Myra Nancy Coco, grand prize winner of a recent business girl's essay contest sponsored by a local specialty store, tells how it may be done on a limited budget.

The theme of the essay contest was: "An Ideal Wardrobe for the Business Woman."

In an interview, Miss Coco, still wide-eyed from the news of having won, explained that she has had no special training along lines of women's fashions. Her B. S. from West Virginia University last year was in education and business administration — rather than clothing and textiles or designing, but she admits that clothes have always been her main interest. A native of West Virginia, she comes from Italian and Spanish parents.

Practical Clothes

It was the practicality of Miss Coco's selections that won her the prize. The costumes chosen were the ones she had planned to have herself. Fortunately she had not gone far in completing her outfits, since a wardrobe of selection (part of which is shown on this page) was the grand prize.

In planning her own wardrobe Miss Coco gave first thought to the question, "What clothes will I need, for what occasions?" "Being in the office six days a week," she said, "I planned first for proper office clothes and then on outfits suitable for the other places I would be going."

After she decided what clothes she needed, Miss Coco did not rush right out and buy them. Oh no! She figured next what the needed wardrobe would cost and what she had to spend. "Then I started cutting down on non-essentials," she said.

This point of figuring out your wardrobe mathematically is deemed by Miss Coco most important. "The greatest mistake a girl can make," she says, is to plan a certain outfit and then while buying be swayed by a costume that's more expensive and too unusual for her needs." Miss Coco thinks that half the battle of selecting a good wardrobe is having the courage to stick to your clothes convictions. She believes many girls lose enthusiasm because they spend too much for a certain costume and there goes the budget!

Outline of Wardrobe

Here is a outline of the items Miss Coco included in her ideal wardrobe:

A three-piece green herringbone tweed suit with two blouses, as well as matching hat, gloves, shoes and handbag.

Basic black velveteen long torso dress with matching accessories.

Gold taffeta jacketed evening dress.

Hose—cotton and silk.

From glancing at these items, which totaled $109, it is apparent that Miss Coco also considered the versatility of her clothes. She selected costumes that would not be too dressy to be worn to work if she were going out for dinner right from the office. Most important, she did not overlook the business girl's uniform—the suit. (As evidence of the importance of the suit, about 70 per cent of girls entering the essay contest included a suit in their wardrobe.)

The Basic Dress

As for the remainder of the costumes selected, Miss Coco said she chose black for her basic dress "because it can be worn over and over again." The plaid dress was her choice since it would pep her up, as well as everyone around her. But the coat dress was selected because it would be a change from bright plaids and every color imaginable. The jacket to the evening dress is a very important accessory because, as Miss Coco pointed out, "It makes the dress appropriate for formal and informal occasions."

Anyone meeting petite Miss Coco with her jet black hair and smiling eyes would realize that she took into consideration two other important factors—personality and coloring—in the selection of her wardrobe. Miss Coco, who is now attending Corcoran art school, would be a shining light to point to in defense of constructive use of leisure time. She decided to put her wardrobe down in writing because she wanted to do something creative after being in an office all day. "It was a lot of fun," she said—and it's a wager she will go right on planning wardrobes in the future.

Myra Nancy Coco, grand winner in a recent essay contest, sponsored by a local store, wears (above) one of the outfits she selected for her prize wardrobe. The full-skirted dirndl type plaid dress in brown and rust is suitable to wear with the brown and rust three-piece tweed suit also selected. Note the three-fourths-length sleeves and heart-trimmed leather belt. Cotton pique cuffs and collar are changeable. Miss Coco not only receives the dress above, but every costume that she stipulated in her prize-winning wardrobe

Learn to Dance Viennese Waltz

A FAVORITE everywhere—the glamorous, graceful Viennese waltz! What a chance it gives you to shine on the dance floor.

And you can easily shine—now that photographs and footprint diagrams have been combined to show you how you should look as you waltz and how you should take each step.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Learn to Dance the Photo-Footprint Way," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Dentist's Art Provides Rich Smile for Model

By Ida Jean Kain

PROOF of the genius of modern dentistry is a New York model's smile. It used to be that she scarcely ever smiled because of two sharp peg teeth on either side of her front ones—and now she poses for toothpaste ads.

Looking further into this subject of today's dental miracles, I find that her case is not unusual. I had wondered whether all the movie stars were born with beautiful teeth. They are the only kind that are ever flashed on the screen! But I learn the perfection is often due to porcelain jacket crowns.

Individual Design

I asked one of the leading New York dentists and cosmetologists to tell us more about the crowns and the type of dentistry involved. He says that your own tooth is painlessly prepared for the crown and remains vital wherever possible. The jacket crown is constructed of a thin veneer of porcelain which is fitted over the defective teeth. Of course, the jacket must be designed and processed for each individual tooth. It isn't a "store tooth" job.

It seems there is almost no dental condition which cannot be improved. The jacket crowns for the two front teeth can cleverly conceal a gap and it is very easy to conceal a dark tooth. Missing front teeth can be replaced and uneven teeth can be straightened.

Incredible as it may seem, your third set of teeth can be so skilfully designed that they alleviate the parenthetical nose-to-mouth lines, correct a sagging jawline and give the facial muscles a lift. Instead of being easily detected as a sign of age, the third set can actually make you look younger. The too perfect regularity of bought teeth has been replaced by an artistic unevenness which makes them pass for the real thing.

Plastic Seems Natural

Moreover, these sets are so efficient that they are equal to tackling corn-on-the-cob. You don't whistle when you talk and you are not discomfited by having your teeth slip around. If you are unhappy about your current set of false teeth and can afford to do so, you might visit a modern dentist and have them brought up-to-date. There is a new plastic material which so closely matches the tissues that you will forget it isn't natural.

Personally, I intend to make sure of keeping my teeth as long as possible and shall get daily: One pint of milk for my calcium, citrus fruits for vitamin C, greens and dairy products for vitamin A, and vitamin D in capsule form in winter.

But it would pay anyone with bothersome defects to investigate this new form of cosmetology. Our authority stressed this more than anything else: The people with nice teeth smile more often because they are happier, hence more popular. They do a better job of living!

Not Afraid to Smile

These are the kind of teeth any Hollywood star would be proud to own. Though natural with smiling Jane Wyman (shown above), many actresses and models obtain the same look of perfection by using porcelain jacket crowns over irregular or defective teeth

Tools of Beauty Should Be Clean

Hollywood, Calif.—Keeping the instruments of beauty scrupulously clean is one of the important secrets of loveliness according to Alexis Smith, whose skin hasn't a blemish and whose hair is always clean and shining.

After a comb or brush has been used, she suggests swishing it through a bowl of warm water containing a little ammonia or borax. Powder puffs should either be discarded after two days' use or washed in sudsy warm water, half-dried by being pressed in a towel, fluffed up and set in the sun to dry. Lipstick brushes should be wiped off with cleansing tissue before and after using, while brow and lash brushes can be cleaned if held under the full force of the hot water faucet a minute or two.

Business Girl Needs Simple Coiffure

By Carolyn Abbott.

IT'S NO longer smart for the business girl to attempt an elaborate coiffure. What with working "overtime," and the increased cost of living, she has neither time nor money to keep up a fancy hair-do. Nor does she feel like rolling up her hair before going to bed. Yet, her hair must be modish and well groomed at all times.

"The business girl's first concern should be a becoming, easy to arrange and easy to keep arrangement," said Carl Hicknell, hair stylist, who is connected with a salon that caters to the problems of the working girl.

Putting his theory into practice, Mr. Carl has just created the "Victorie" coiffure. Cut in layers, the hair-do is fluffy and youthful. Also, it is in keeping with the short, short hair trend. One of its chief feautres is that you can comb it into a daytime or evening coiffure. Too, it can be adapted to bangs, waves, rolls or soft curls. The secret of the coiffure is in the cutting, according to Mr. Carl.

"If the business girl has a simple and easily arranged hairdress," said Mr. Carl, "she will have more time for brushing and reconditioning dry, lifeless locks. Too many women are inclined to give all their attention to stylish coiffures and neglect the condition of the scalp. The hair-do would be much lovelier, if the hair had a natural sheen.

Mr. Carl has a special treatment for reviving limp, dull and scanty hair. He teaches those who prefer home remedies, how to apply them.

This same salon that specializes in the business coiffure has experts for make-up, corrective and reducing diets and exercises. Countess Rene de Pourtales, nutrition expert at this salon, has some interesting theories on weight reduction. She maintains that she can work out a diet to keep you at the age you would like to stay . . . that is, in appearance. "After 30," she says, "it is more difficult but can be done."

"Before you can lose weight," she explained, "you must determine the cause of the excess poundage. And it isn't always overeating, contrary to popular opinion."

Brazilian Envoy's Wife To Show Her Sculpture

Invitations Sent Out for Exhibition On Tuesday; 'At Home' Scheduled At Embassy Later That Same Day

By Hope Ridings Miller

Long recognized as her country's leading woman sculptor, Mme. Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, soon will have her first full-fledged American exhibition—right here in Washington.

Yesterday, hundreds of her friends in town and elsewhere received invitations from the president and trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery for "the opening of an exhibition of sculpture by Maria Martins on Tuesday afternoon, October 14, from 3 to 6 o'clock." In the same mails were cards for an "at home" to be given at the Brazilian Embassy from 6 to 8 p. m. that same day. That evening, there will be quite a round of dinners for out-of-towers who will be here especially to attend the exhibition, the tea later, and numerous other festivities the following two days.

MME. MARTINS

The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins will entertain at a dinner for some of their friends from New York, and Stewart MacDonald is also planning to fete some of the visitors at a dinner. Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones will have some of Mme. Martins' out-of-town friends with them when they attend the military ball at the Mayflower on Wednesday evening.

The exhibition—to go back to that for a bit—will feature 18 pieces, including examples of Mme. Martins' work in bronze, plaster, terra-cotta and Brazilian wood. Her forte is the creation of vital, impressive sculptures, streamlined enough to give them a modern accent yet portraying emotions as primitive as you please. The show will present three interpretations of Salome, a huge statue of St. Francis, and a sculpture of Christ done in Brazilian wood, and a number of other interesting subjects.

Studio Is Her 'Montparnasse'

Ever since she arrived in Washington, in February, 1939, Mme. Martins has been working hours on end, trying to get her work ready for an exhibition. Time and time again plans have been afoot for having her show in New York, but friends repeatedly have urged her to have her initial exhibition here. And so she will.

A privileged few have had the opportunity of seeing Maria Martins at work in her "Montparnasse," as she calls her studio on the top floor of the Brazilian Embassy. There she is busy shortly after 8 each morning and on until 1 o'clock; and from 2 until 4 o'clock every afternoon. Her greatest difficulty, she once told me, is finding as much time as she needs for her work. "The days just aren't long enough," she said, with a sigh.

I remember the one time I saw some of her sculptures I was amazed to learn she had never taken a sculpture lesson in her life. She said she used to spend all her spare time painting; then, just for a lark, she decided one day seven years ago in Brussels to try her hand at sculpture. "I loved it," she said. "I knew at once that I had found my true medium of expression. I've been at it ever since."

Washington will see the results on Tuesday.

Air Force Commander to Be Feted

The Netherlands Military Attache, Col. F. G. L. Weijerman, and Mme. Weijerman have cards out for a cocktail party on Wednesday, October 15, in honor of Maj. Gen. L. H. Van Oyen, aide-de-camp to her majesty, Queen Wilhelmina, and commander of the air force of the Royal Netherlands Indies army. The party will take place at the Shoreham Hotel, from 5:30 to 7:30 p. m., and there's a chance—just a chance, mind you—that Gen. Van Oyen may show some motion pictures he made not long ago in the Netherlands Indies . . . Mr. and Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, who have been in Washington since Monday, will return to their home in Milford, Pa., today. They expect to reopen their Rhode Island Avenue home later in the season . . . Lieut. and Mrs. Henry S. Morgan, who are living here at 2861 Woodland Drive, commute to New York for weekends. They have a home there at 34 East Thirty-sixth Street. Mrs. Adams is the daughter of the former Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Francis Adams. Her husband is in the Naval Reserve.

Ex-Chief Justice Returns to City

McCotter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. McCotter, of Bellevue, Mich. The Rev. Robert J. Plumb officiated at the eight o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white duchess satin made with a basque waist, a pearl-embroidered sweetheart neckline, and a full skirt falling into a circular train. Her full-length veil of illusion fell from a tiara of seed-pearls and she carried a shower of white orchids, roses and stephanotis. Her only ornament was a single strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom.

Miss Miriam Lonergan, maid of honor, and Mrs. John Donovan, matron of honor, sorority sisters of the bride, wore bouffant dresses of rose taffeta with sweetheart necklines and basque bodices. Their bonnets were of matching rose velvet and they carried bouquets of Johanna Hill roses tied with rose satin streamers.

The bridesmaids, Miss Frances Gardner, Miss Kitty Bullough and Mrs. Leonard Bastian, wore heather blue taffeta dresses fashioned like those of the honor attendants. The junior bridesmaid, Miss Patricia Whitaker, was costumed in the same heather blue, and like the bridesmaids carried a bouquet of talisman roses.

Leonard Bastain, of Arlington, Va., served as best man and the ushers were Edward Frazier, a brother of the bride; Allan McCotter, of Bellevue, Mich., a brother of the bridegroom; John Donovan, Raymond Mulvany, Michael Bresnahan and George Korink.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Her mother had chosen a frock of blue metallic material with which she wore a headdress of orchids and a matching corsage. The mother of the bridegroom pinned a corsage or orchids to her wine velvet and taffeta dress and Mrs. George H. Copes, the grandmother of the bride, wore a plum-colored velvet gown, a matching headdress of flowers and an orchid corsage.

After the reception, the newlyweds left for a honeymoon at Niagara Falls, Chicago and the Great Lakes. The bride's traveling ensemble was a sheer ice blue crepe dress trimmed in pleating under a fox-trimmed beige coat. With it she wore a matching blue feather hat, black accessories and a corsage of white orchids.

Brief and to the Point

Carolina Maneuver Area.—Private Irving Blackwell wanted to be a writer. He begged the Ninth Infantry Division for a chance to display his talents. He was assigned to a story about the 4000 bales of straw which the soldiers were to use for bedding. Three hours later his typewriter contained a sheet of paper, reading: "Four thousand bales of straw—that ain't hay."

Service for Southpaws

Memphis, Tenn.—A Memphis bank has introduced lefthanded checkbooks to its southpaw patrons. The stub is on the right side of the check, so the harried lefthander won't have to cross hands in order to hold other stubs out of the way while he fills in one. Officials said two or three other banks in the United States use the lefthanded books.

The Federal Diary

Plan A Is Tossed Back to Roosevelt

The House Appropriations Committee has tossed Plan A back into the President's lap. You'll recall perhaps that Plan A is that device proposed by Justice Frankfurter and others for the recruiting of Government attorneys. As expected, the committee flatly refused to recommend a cent for administration of the plan. It's reported that the committee vote was nearly unanimous on the point. The Board of Legal Examiners, an agency set up by executive order to administer Plan A, had asked for $54,225. Attorney General Biddle, board chairman, probably will ask the Senate to make the appropriation. If he fails, Plan A will be dead.

The controversy over how lawyers were to be selected tied the Reed Committee on Civil Service Reform into knots for months. The committee was equally divided. Four members—Justices Frankfurter, Reed and Jackson and Gano Dunn—proposed Plan A. Four other members—Justice Murphy, William H. McReynolds, Leonard White and Gen. Robert Wood—wanted lawyers recruited under existing Civil Service methods. President Roosevelt sided with Frankfurter and Plan A.

An 11-man board of examiners was established and Herbert Wechsler, Columbia law professor, was appointed executive secretary. Able men comprise the board and it probably would work out but it can't be denied that many people consider it a slick plan to get Government jobs for Harvard law grads. The best answer to that argument, it seems, is that no such plan is needed to get Federal jobs for those boys; they're getting them now. Most legal jobs are technically under Civil Service now. If Congress refuses money for Plan A it's a good guess that the President will exempt all attorney jobs from Civil Service rather than make them subject to Civil Service rules and regulations.

Committee Cracks Down

The committee also cracked down on another of its favorite victims—the personnel division of the Justice Department. Every single major department and agency in the Federal service has a personnel division headed by a personnel director. The sole exception is Justice. Why? Only committee members can answer that question. Justice did have a personnel division but Congress had it abolished by refusing to give it funds. Several months ago Clive Palmer was brought over from HOLC to head up a proposed personnel division. Justice last year made 10,427 new appointments and there were 4464 separations, enough work for several personnel divisions. But again the House committee has placed Justice in an excepted class by refusing to provide it with modern personnel equipment.

The committee recommended that the Navy Department be allowed to have 12,000 civilian employes in the District. The maximum number now permitted is 10,500 and the department has almost that number now on the rolls. New employes are being hired at the rate of 500 a month and Personnel Director Charles Piozet estimated that Navy would have 12,881 employes here on June 30, 1942. The department asked for an employe ceiling of 13,000.

Robert S. Hars is chief of the new field survey section in Civil Service's classification division. He'll work on extension of the classification act to the field . . . Fred McMillen is personnel director of Surplus Marketing Administration. He succeeds David Vaughan who transferred to the economic war board . . . FBI set another record last month. Fingerprints received in September totaled 607,621 sets, more than in any other single month; an average of 24,418 sets a day . . .

A run-off election will be held today for an employe representative on the State Department Board of Review on efficiency ratings. The three candidates are Rosemary S. Davenport, who led the first balloting with 320 votes; Bryton Barron, who polled 157 votes, and Joseph B. Matre, who received 126 votes.

6 Hurt in Fairfax Auto Crash; Motorman in Crash Gets Fine

Judge Levies $25 Assessment for Running Red Light

Russell C. Buddington, 26-year-old street car motorman, was fined $25 in Traffic Court yesterday on a charge of passing a red light growing out of a collision with a bus which injured nine persons Tuesday.

The trainman, who lives at 641 Morris Place Northwest, pleaded guilty to the charge.

Policeman Lawrence Hartnett, of the accident prevention unit, told Judge Hobart Newman that the trolley "ran a full red light" at Fourteenth and P Streets, crashing into the bus.

"It's all in the family, isn't it?" Judge Newman asserted before Defense Attorney Sidney Johnson explained to the court that Buddington only had been a regular motorman for four days and that the brakes on the car apparently were defective.

"What has inexperience got to do with being color blind?" Judge Newman asked. When the lawyer attempted to answer, the judge remarked, "There's one consolation, he hit his own bus."

Turning to Policeman Hartnett again the jurist asked what, in the officer's opinion, caused the accident. Hartnett said he believed the streetcar was traveling too fast.

"Is there any rivalry between bus and streetcar operators?" Judge Newman asked of the lawyer and imposed the fine when the latter said there was none.

Earlier in the day, Louis Bryant, Negro, 24, of 11 Virginia Avenue Southwest, was held for the action of the grand jury by a coroner's jury after an investigation of the traffic death of Harry Zender, 87, of 804 Seventeenth Street Northwest. Zender was struck and fatally injured, September 16, while standing in a street car safety zone in front of Mount Alto Hospital, 2650 Wisconsin Avenue Northwest.

It was testified that Bryant was driving a delivery car for a liquor store south on Wisconsin Avenue and drove through the safety zone. Unable to stop, he carried Zender from the center of the street to the curb, where the automobile struck a tree.

Miss Ida Shenk, 44, of 1305 Fairlawn Avenue Southeast, also was injured by the machine. She is still confined in Mount Alto Hospital with serious head injuries.

D. C. Boy, 4, Badly Hurt Near Home; Driver Freed in Bond

A two-car collision on the Mount Vernon Boulevard last night sent six persons to Alexandria Hospital.

According to police, an auto driven by Richard Sullivan, 23, of Fredericksburg, Va., veered into the path of a second auto, operated by Walter H. Johnson, 29, of 2308 Ashmead Place Northwest, four miles south of Alexandria.

The injured: Johnson, cuts; Miss Georgia Jones, 24, Evangeline Hotel, severe head injuries; Rudolph Valore, 27, 3726 Veazey Street Northwest, minor head injuries; Miss Louise Hebert, 1900 H Street Northwest, cuts; Miss Jane Goodman, 16, Springfield, Va., cuts; Miss Audrey Beach, 16, 210 South Alfred Street, Alexandria, cuts. The latter two and Warren Harding, 20, of Fredericksburg, were passengers in Sullivan's auto; the others were with Johnson.

A 4-year-old Washington boy was seriously hurt last night when struck by an auto near his home. The youngster, William B. Searson, of 5338 Forty-second Street Northwest, was taken to Georgetown Hospital with a broken leg and possible skull fracture after being felled in the 4100 block Military Road Northwest. Andrew L. McIvor, 45, of 1810 Newton Street Northwest, was charged with operating a vehicle which had poor brakes and was released on $300 bond.

Crestwood Group Opposes Housing Plan

Plans to erect a $700,000, six-story apartment house on the southwest corner of Sixteenth and Shepherd Streets Northwest yesterday met strong opposition from citizens of the community at hearings before the District Zoning Commission.

The petition was presented by Harry Poretsky, the prospective builder, and was opposed by some 50 citizen witnesses representing the new Crestwood residential section.

He said he already had paid $10,000 in deposits for purchase of the land and had filed application for a building permit at a cost of $700.

Harold W. Breining, assistant administrator of the Veterans' Administration, leader of the opposition, told the Commission:

"An apartment on this site would be like placing a pig in a parlor. Pigs are all right—but not in a parlor."

Representing the builder was Louis Ottenberg, an attorney, who pointed out the area had been zoned for apartment buildings for nearly a decade and all legal aspects of the matter had been checked carefully before construction plans were made.

The case was taken under advisement by the Commission along with some 16 other zoning questions of less importance. Hearings on additional cases will continue at 10:30 a. m. today.

Takes Lend-Lease Plan Too Broadly, the Cad!

He was handsome. He was charming. He spoke with a delightful British accent. And he wore the striking blue-gray uniform of a branch of the Canadian armed service.

She was lonesome. A Government employe, 27 years old. She met him Sunday at a social, where she was a hostess.

He was unable to obtain lodging for the night. She took him home with her and let him sleep on the studio couch.

Oh, ingratitude, thou marble-hearted fiend.

Thus ran the lament through the report she made yesterday to police.

He was still asleep when she left for work the following morning. But when she returned, he was gone. So was a gold necklace with a topaz pendant, surrounded by diamonds, worth $500. So was a camera, worth $2.50.

'Enemy' Bombers To Raid D. C. Soon

Air Raid Warden Unit Is Planned To Protect D. C.

Formation of an air raid warden service here for the "duration" composed of responsible men and women of the city was begun last night with the District Commissioners asking and receiving the full support of the Federation of Citizens Associations and the Federation of Civic Associations.

Civilian Defense Coordinator John Russell Young, of the Metropolitan area proposed three specific steps enlisting the aid of the various citizens associations. They were:

1. To hold simultaneous mass meetings at some date in the near future in cooperation with all religious, patriotic, fraternal and similar organized groups.
2. At these meetings to make nominations to Commissioner Young for one deputy warden to be in charge of that area, and three assistant wardens.
3. Establish a permanent committee on civilian defense within each area to map zones and sectors, nominate senior precinct wardens and assistants and to locate warden posts.

Gen. Kutz Speaks

Brig. Gen. Kutz addressed the meeting in the place of Commissioner Young who had become ill earlier in the day. He declared that it was only "natural" for the Commissioners to turn to the two Federations at this time.

"The problems here are peculiar," Gen. Kutz said, "because in the District we have no subdivisions of Government coresponding to the ward or precinct organization in the normal city."

To meet this situation, the general asserted, the city had been divided according to the boundaries of the member bodies of the Federation of citizens associations.

The background of the reason for and the organization of the Civilian Defense Organization was sketched by Gen. Kutz. He reminded the delegates of President Roosevelt's declaration of an unlimited emergency and how he had established the Office of Civilian Defense with Mayor LaGuardia as director.

Cities Are Targets, Speaker Says

Later upon LaGuardia's suggestion he said the President established the metropolitan area of Washington as a unit with Commissioner Young as Civilian Defense coordinator. "In modern war," Gen. Kutz declared, "every center of population is an open target for attack. A formal declaration of war may no longer be counted upon as a warning to the people of any community that attack is imminent."

Col. Lemuel Bolles, assigned by the War Department as executive coordinator for civilian defense here urged the delegates that care be exercised in selecting the persons to be connected with the work. "The lives of your families may depend upon how they perform their duties," he said.

Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter and Police Chief Edward Kelly are both enrolling auxiliary officers, Col. Bolles said. Eventually both forces will be from three to five times larger with the additions than they are at present.

Mock Attack Sometime In Week to Test East's Alarm System

"Enemy" bombers are coming to Washington, sometime within the next seven days, and the District Defense Council has ordered an air-raid alert to begin at 6 a. m. today.

It's a part of the Nation's largest mock air raid ever attempted, designed to test the network of communications set up in the East from Boston to Norfolk as a precaution against bombing attacks.

It's a secret when the bombers will roar over the Nation's Capital, for that would defeat the purpose of the drill, but the city's alarm center in the Municipal Building will remain on the alert throughout the period of exercises, which end next Thursday.

Test of Coordination

When they do come, though, civilians need not bother to take cover, because there will be no antiaircraft activity. In Washington the raid will merely be a test of how quickly the communications system can get the word here that planes are approaching and how quickly the local alarm center can pass the warning along.

Elsewhere, however, the attack will be more realistic. In night exercises, New York City will be ringed by the beams of 50 antiaircraft searchlight batteries, and antiaircraft guns will be set up.

During the latter part of the maneuvers pursuit planes will attempt to intercept the bombers on being informed of their location.

Here's how it will work:

Suppose a squadron of three bombers swings in from the Atlantic, across Maryland's Eastern Shore. It is sighted by the observation post east of Snow Hill, manned by two men. They rapidly compute its height, speed and direction of flight. While one observer continues to man the post, the other picks up the telephone and says "Army flash." He is immediately connected with the Baltimore filter unit and relays his information.

Trail of Flashes

Shortly afterward another post to the northwest sights the raiding squadron and goes through the same procedure. Other posts pick up the trail for a succession of Army flashes.

The information is charted at the Baltimore nerve center, which concludes the squadron is headed toward Washington.

An operator at the Baltimore center presses a button, and a yellow light flashes in the Washington alarm center, which is under command of Herbert Friede, superintendent of the District fire alarm system.

The light will mean, "Prepare for a raid." Orders will go out immediately to local fire stations, police, hospitals and public utilities. A blue light, later, will warn "stand by with preparations," and a red light will mean "the raid is on."

Meanwhile, information on the bombers will have been transmitted from Baltimore to the Philadelphia information center and other key points. Orders for interceptor plane action will go out from Mitchel Field to fighters at Bolling Field.

At least eight squadrons of the newest type bombers, stationed at Langley, Va., will take the part of "enemy" bombers, crisscrossing the area from Massachusetts to North Carolina in a test of 40,000 civilian spotters at 1600 observation posts.

Levin, Once 'Hot Pianist' Here, Leads 'Pops' Tonight

LOOKING OVER MUSICAL SCORES for tonight's "Pop" concert is Sylvan Levin, well-known pianist, who will be guest conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra

Sylvan Levin, who used to play a "hot piano" with Washington dance bands 13 years ago, came back to the Capital yesterday to conduct the National Symphony Orchestra at tonight's "pop" concert and show how he intends to take opera to the man on the street throughout the Nation.

The musician who pounded out popular music at the Rialto Theater and the old Shoreham Hotel is now the leader of the young Philadelphia Opera Company, whose opera-in-English idea he conceived.

"Opera belongs to the man on the street, not just to the few," Levin said yesterday, telling of his orchestra's performances of classical European melodies with the librettoes translated "not into English but into American" slang if necessary.

Levin said his idea was to create a form of opera that could be played and sung by Americans. "Why should musicians have to go abroad and change ther names before they can be successful?" the diminutive conductor demanded. He added that all the members of his orchestra were American citizens and all were young, between 18 and 26.

More important, he said, was the creation of a "new kind of American audience" through the Americanized version of operas.

"In Italy," he said, "the workman, the man on the street, can go up into the balcony and enjoy his opera because he understands the language . . . Why shouldn't Americans be able to take their opera in the same way?"

But Levin cast no aspersions on the popular music of his Washington years. "Sure, I used to play a hot piano," he said. "Popular music is fine. It keeps you from being a musical snob."

A total of 139 selective service registrants from 10 Washington local boards will be inducted today at Richmond, leading off the Washington draft call of 809 selectees for October.

The remainder of the 809 are to be sworn in at the rate of approximately 150 a day, tomorrow, Saturday, Monday and Tuesday.

Meantime, the Council of Social Agencies, aroused by the high rejection rate among registrants at Army induction stations, has called a conference of its health officials for 3 p. m. tomorrow in the board room of the community building, 1101 M Street Northwest.

The conference was called to make plans for the "prehabilitation" of District youth. Methods of raising the health standard of Capital young people will be discussed.

Court Cuts Judy Canova's Nuptial Knot

JUDY CANOVA

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Oct. 8. — Movie Comedienne Judy Canova wept in court today, told a tale of shattered romance after a whirlwind courtship under a Honolulu moon and won annulment of her marriage to James H. Ripley, a former Army corporal.

All in black—black dress, black hat, black shoes, black stockings, black purse—the actress testified "he said he was doing accounting for the Government—that he had been sent to Hawaii on a difficult matter—a sort of secret service matter for the Government," she declared.

The actress said she did not know Ripley was in the Army—on the marriage license application he wrote that he was not in the service—and discovered he was A. W. O. L. only when an Army officer burst into their bridal suite, June 16, and removed him to Fort Ruger.

They became engaged June 10, married June 14.

She said she sought the annulment because Ripley "deceived me and told me lies; his being a soldier didn't have anything to do with it."

In swearing to an affidavit that Ripley no longer was in the military service, she said she believed he was in Montgomery, Ala., his home.

Auto Builders Confer Here Over Shiny Gadgets

Automobile manufacturers, faced with an imminent and drastic OPM order which would force the elimination of all the nonfunctional "bright work" on 1942 model cars, discussed with defense officials yesterday new plating processes designed to turn out the shiny decorative gadgets with a relatively slight amount of critical metals such as nickel, brass and chromium.

Although OPM Civilian Supply Director Leon Henderson declined to indicate how severe the eventual order would be, it was believed that present drafts may be modified to permit usage of minor amounts of the metals on automobile "gingerbread."

Present practice, however, which has decked the first of the 1942 models with more bright work than ever before, will be radically changed, it was indicated.

DeWitt to Help Edit Field's Chicago Paper

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—Selection of Rex Smith, managing editor of Newsweek, as editor of a morning newspaper to be established here by Marshall Field III was announced today by Publisher Silliman Evans.

George DeWitt, former managing editor of the Washington Times-Herald, was named to a similar position with the new paper. He and Smith will choose the city editor. Evans said other top executive positions had been filled but the personnel would not be announced until the men have sufficient time to resign from their present jobs.

Smith at 41 is a veteran of some 25 years in newspaper work, including seven years abroad. For two years he was with the New York Herald Tribune's Paris edition.

Evans said the new paper would be of standard size. The subscription price has not been announced and the name will be chosen in a $10,000 prize contest. No date for start of publication was announced, but Evans said the name contest would end some time between November 1 and November 15.

Agriculture Leaders See Cut in Farm Benefit Fund for 1942

By the Associated Press

With farm products bringing the highest prices since 1930 and still advancing, Agriculture Department officials said yesterday that the Administration should be in a position to make a sizable cut in its budget for 1942 crop benefit payments.

Indications were that the cut might exceed 200 million dollars, or more than one-fourth of the cost of the present benefit program.

Agricultural prices are nearly 45 per cent higher than a year ago. Departmental economists predict further advances this winter and next spring. Because of the higher prices and prospects for the largest food demand in history, the department forecasts that farm income may approach 13 billion dollars next year.

An income of this size would be the largest since 1920 and two billion dollars above the estimate for this year.

Figures For 1941

Congress appropriated about $760,000,000 for farm benefit payments for 1941 crops, including $500,000,000 for cooperation with soil conservation programs, $48,000,000 for cooperation with the sugar production and marke g control program, and $212,000,000 for parity payments.

Farm officials said the President's new budget to be placed before Congress in January probably would ask for the same amount for soil conservation, but a reduction of at least $100,000,000 in parity payments and possibly the elimination of appropriations for sugar programs.

Greatly improved prices for cotton may make it possible, officials said, to drop parity payments for this crop. The department has set aside $88,300,000 for such payments on the 1941 crop at a rate of 2.75 cents a pound. Cotton now is bringing slightly more than parity prices.

(Parity prices are the goals of the Administration's farm programs. Such prices, officials explain, would give farm commodities purchasing power in terms of nonfarm goods and services equal to that of a base period, now set at 1910-1914. Parity payments are designed to make up the difference between the market price and parity goals when the former are below parity.)

Tobacco, like cotton, has been bringing parity or more and consequently would be ineligible for parity payments. Wheat and corn, on the other hand, are selling for less than parity. On the basis of present prices, these grain crops would be eligible for parity payments. Rice, the only other crop for which parity payments are authorized, has been selling for parity until recently.

Whether funds may be sought for sugar payments will depend, officials said, on Congressional action on sugar legislation. The present Sugar Control Act expires December 31. Unless the present law is extended or supplanted by new legislation, no payments could be made to growers.

The biggest advances in farm prices have been on commodities not directly affected by subsidy programs, such as hogs, cattle, dairy and poultry products and vegetables.

Philippines' Naval Chief Replaced

The Navy announced yesterday that Capt. Francis W. Rockwell had been designated as commandant of the Sixteenth Naval District at Cavite, the Philippines, relieving Rear Admiral Harold M. Bemis.

Bemis, who lives in Indianapolis, is returning to the United States on account of ill health.

WPA Workers To Get Pay Raise

Howard O. Hunter, Work Projects administrator, said after confering with President Roosevelt yesterday, that an increase in wages for the 1,030,000 persons now on WPA rolls would be announced in a few days.

He said the specific amount of the increase would be determined shortly and that it probably would take effect November 1.

Hunter said WPA workers now average about $60 a month, with many receiving $50 or less.

With Shirley Povich

Wouldst like to bend an ear to this department's quiz program starring Ray Flaherty, head coach of the Redskins?

Without further ado, then, Mr. Flaherty will begin to answer questions.

POVICH

Is this the worst Redskin team?

"No. You've been misinformed. This may be one of the best Redskin teams. I sort of like this Redskin team."

You lose to the Giants, 17-10, and then barely beat Brooklyn, 3-0, and you still like your football team?

"That's right. And I'm going to like it better as the season progresses. This is the team that's going to come on, if you get what I mean."

You mean it's going to improve?

"Exactly. It can't miss. By the middle of the season we'll be four touchdowns better than we were at the start, and tighter defensively."

Why?

"Because these young fellows on the squad are going to be better football players by mid-season."

Be a little more specific, please.

"Well, we're going to wind up with two fine young tackles, Fred Davis and Jim Stuart. They will be very tough by November. They will knock down a lot of ball carriers, not our own."

You may continue.

"We're making a wing back out of Al Kreuger who came to us as a great pass-catching end. He's going to be a great pass-catching wing back."

"We've got more and better blocking backs than we ever had. Cecil Hare and his brother Ray are beginning to look very good to me. We haven't used Jack Banta yet, but I know he's a good football player."

But blocking backs don't score touchdowns.

"Correct. But they help. We will score touchdowns. At least I have some plans for touchdowns that I like very much. We've got three tall backs and three full backs who please me very much."

The full backs, of course, are Baugh, Filchock and Zimmerman

"Thats right and those names sound pretty good to me. You know about Baugh and Filchock. They wouldn't weaken any team. Zimmerman is a strange character. He's as good a ball player as he feels like being. Some day he's going to feel like being a good ball carrier all afternoon and he's going to have a heluva day in somebody's ball yard."

You're willing to settle for Farkas, Todd and Seymour as your tail backs?

"They'd bring some pretty good men in a trade. Todd hasn't got started yet, incidentally."

So those Griffith Stadium fans have noticed.

"Maybe I ought to explain about Todd. He's the kind of a ball player who is stopped cold ten times and on the eleventh he breaks away and beats somebody. I like him very much."

And Farkas?

"If I am a ball player in this league, I don't want Farkas coming at me. He hits a tackler harder than the tackler hits him. That's how he gets away from what looks like a perfect tackle. He gives the tackler the hip and shoulder with that spin of his. Andy's always the last man to leave his feet. He fools his own teammates sometimes."

Exactly what do you mean by that?

"I mean that our fellows see Andy hit by a tackler and think he's stopped and so they slow up and pretty soon Andy's loose again and our guys aren't down in front to give him down-field blocking. I keep telling our boys that when Andy's got the ball the play isn't over until the ball is dead.

There is another game coming up with the Giants.

"You're telling me. But we're going to win that one. The Giants had six games under their belt when they beat us in the season's opener. We hadn't played one tough preseason game. Anyway, it should have been no worse than a tie."

Why?

"Well, because that last Giant touchdown was a cheap one. They don't score it unless Ed Justice and Sammy Baugh collide deep in our territory on the play. That won't happen again."

There is also a game coming up with the Bears in November.

"I knew you'd bring that up. We're going to put a better team on the field for the Bears than we had that day last year when we licked 'em, 7 to 3."

"Wasn't there another game with the Bears last year that added up to something like 73-0 in favor of the Bears?

"I seem to remember that one, too. There are a lot of things people didn't understand about that one. To stop the Bears you've got to have ends and tackles. We went into that game with two ends hurt, and in the second quarter Charley Malone cracked three ribs. Three of our blocking backs were hurt, too. You can't beat the Bears unless your ball club is in the best of health. Is that all?"

No, but . . .

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

THE STORY OF JARRIN' JAWN

New York, Oct. 8.—Listen to a long, sour growl about a football player who was going to make more dough than any player since Grange, but who wound up riding the range for 20th Century-Fox.

CONSIDINE

The plot of this story is as old as the traditionally hostile relationship between artist and agent. But the characters are interesting. The football player is Jarrin' Jawn Kimbrough, All-America fullback in 1939 aand 1940. His manager and agent is or was Doug Hertz, the English gentleman of kaleidoscopic callings who wanted to pay Kimbrough $37,500 during 1941. The man who came between them is Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and the biggest OPM spender in history, OPM in this case meaning other people's money.

Well, fellows, everything was lovey-dovey between Hertz and Kimbrough for a long time. Hertz had never seen a football game in his life, but he is human enough to want to turn a buck now and then, and became interested in football after reading about some of the crowds attracted by the football Giants and Dodgers. He gained control of the football Yankees, of the American League, by paying a few thousand dollars of their debts—and set out with some flourish, faithfully followed by a publicity man, to sign up a dream team. The team, Hertz hoped, would have an All-American in every position.

Tommy Harmon came on to talk with Hertz and turned down $17,500 to play with the Yankees this season. Then Hertz turned his attention to Kimbrough. He brought John on to New York, showed him the town and they became very chummy. He gave him $2500 for signing his contract and promised him $6500 before he ever got around to playing. Hertz was decent enough to suggest to Kimbrough that he submit all the contracts to any New York lawyer Kimbrough or his family might name, and that Hertz would bear all their fees for inspecting the documents.

There was a rash of father-son correspondence back and forth between the stalwart fullback and the promoter, polo player, British Army officer, fight manager, rodeo sponsor, lobbyist, dog-racing operator, oil man, night-club owner, Penn Military College trustee, etc. etc.

Hertz's publicity man went around the country in red and white folder-blurbs telling of his "charm . . . personality . . . packed stadiums . . . crowded tables when he is your master of ceremonies . . . a higher Crosley rating for your air program . . . a crowd and a riot of fun, when he speaks . . . 'box office' in the theater or anywhere."

Hertz revised his $37,500 about that time and wrote John that $75,000 would be about the sum he would make in 1941, with Hertz behind him. Hertz flew off to the coast to sign John as a film cowboy. Hertz engaged Everett Crosby, Bing's brother, to represent them on the coast.

He Blames It on Jesse Jones

But trouble was brewing. Hertz thinks it all came from the Secretary of Commerce, that big, bluff, hearty, multimillionaire Texan who took the Texas football hero under his wing. Hertz suggested that Kimbrough show his conracts to Jones and says that Jones turned them over to Department of Commerce lawyers.

On March 13 of this year, Jones wrote Kimbrough, "This (Yankee) contract appears to be unobjectionable," but he suggested that Hertz make certain changes in his personal contract with Kimbrough. Hertz wrote that he would be happy to rush to Washington to sit down with Jones and straighten this out, Hertz says. Jones apparently wouldn't see him.

"Nerz to Hertz," Kimbrough said suddenly one day in New York, after he had spent some time with Secretary Jones in Washington. The player and a lawyer (Jones's lawyer, says Hertz) appeared in Hertz's office and demanded that he give up his contract with the player. Herz was dumbfounded. There was a deal of "Yeah? Well you're another . . ." talk, and Hertz nertzed the whole demand, but said he would bow out if Kimbrough reimbursed him $10,500—the sum he spent in advances to the player and bills for the gaudy brochures, plane rides, phones, etc.

"The whole deal might stink—but not from my doing," Crosby wrote to his New York office. "Hertz told me he had a personal management contract with Kimbrough and that when he signed it he didn't know the boy would be offered a 7-year picture contract and that now that he had the offer he was going to change his contract with Kimbrough because he was taking too much money from the boy."

Anyway, mostly because of all this, Hertz bowed out as president of the Yankees. His team is now playing independent foes, its chief rooter being Hertz—who said after a recent 3-0 defeat, "It's an extro'd'n'ry thing. We lost, but led them all the way in points." He meant that his team won the statistics.

Hertz bears no malice toward Kimbrough, and wishes him seven prosperous years of gittin' that purty gal with the help 'a mah old six-shooter and Old Paint, the wonder hoss. Because he bears no malice, he is suing Jarrin' Jawn for only $500,000—just to get even with the distinguished Cabinet member to whom Hertz traces the change in his football team from a dream club to a nightmare.

Six Horses May Start in Pimlico Special

2-Year-Old Champ, Alsab, Is Invited

Market Wise, Haltal, Big Pebble, Fenelon, Whirlaway Probable Classic Starters

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—The Pimlico Special appeared headed today for billing as a "race of champions"—a sporting classic in which the glory outweighs the gold.

As it shapes up now. Alfred Vanderbilt, Maryland Jockey Club president, stands a chance of scooping the turf world with the leaders of horse racing's three main divisions in one big contest, October 30, for a $10,000 winner-take-all prize.

Rulers of the 3-year-old and handicap divisions already can be counted in and the special will be a real "dream" race of champions if Mrs. Albert Sabath, of Chicago, agrees to enter her 2-year-old colt Alsab, a $700 bargain that became a sensational winner.

Considered likely starters at this stage are Warren Wright's champion, Whirlaway, and Lou Tufano's Market Wise, both 3-year-olds, and Circle M Ranch's Big Pebble, William Woodward's Fenelon and Woodvale Farm's Haltal, big shots of the handicap division.

Possible starters are Samuel Riddle's War Relic, a 3-year-old, and Alsab, only 2-year-old ever invited to run in the special.

Alsab in Maryland

Alsab is at Pimlico now and the Sabaths and Trainer Gus (Sarge) Swanke are expected to decide Saturday whether to send the youngster against the older horses over a mile and three-sixteenths, a distance he never has covered in competition.

The Special is a weight-for-age event and, if Alsab goes, he will have to carry only 97 pounds, while the scale calls for 120 pounds for the 3-year-olds and 126 for the older horses.

In setting the conditions for this year's event, the Jockey Club named 24 of America's outstanding races, the winners of which would become automatically eligible for the special.

Whirlaway alone won seven of these races, including the "triple crown." Big Pebble took three; Fenelon and War Relic, two each, and Market Wise and Haltal, one each.

Others Eligible

Also eligible, but virtually counted out of the special, are Porter's Cap, Bay View, Dispose, Your Chance, Foxbrough, Attention and Staretor. Another candidate will be the winner of the Washington Handicap at Laurel October 25.

Although no races for 2-year-olds were on the list, the Jockey Club reserved the right to invite outstanding horses and Alsab, winner of nearly $100,000, got his invitation from Vanderbilt "by virtue of his remarkable achievements."

Lew Jenkins Again to Get Examination

By the Associated Press

New York, Oct. 8.—After having been told by his own physician that he is in no condition to fight, Lightweight Champion (New York variety) Lew Jenkins will appear before the New York State Athletic Commission tomorrow for another going-over. Purpose of the examination will be to discover whether the Sweetwater, Tex., swatter is in condition to go through with his 15-round title fight with Lightweight Champ (N. B. A. brand) Sammy Angott, booked for Madison Square Garden October 31.

Dr. Norman E. Titus, Jenkins' physician, reported tonight the Texan had a fractured left rib, dislocated neck vertebra and bursitis of the right shoulder—the first a result of his losing bout with Welterweight Champ Red Cochrane at Madison Square Garden Monday night, the other two the outcome of a motorcycle accident several weeks ago.

Should Jenkins be excused from the October date, he and his manager would have to put up a $1500 forfeit binding them to a December match with Angott. After posting that bond, Jenkins' $7200 purse from the Cochrane bout would be released by the commission.

Meanwhile Promoter Mike Jacobs was reported working on several possible replacements for the October 31 date—among them Angott against Ray Robinson, or a return welterweight title match between Cochrane and Fritzie Zivic.

Leahy's New Irish Combination Preps for Georgia Tech

Redskin Power Falls Short Of '40 Openers

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The current Redskin team is an impotent aggregation by comparison with last year's Eastern champions, that is, for the first two games of the season.

With a 10-17 loss to the Giants and a 3-0 victory over the Dodgers under their belts, the 'Skins can look back to last year's opening games, both here and with the same teams, and see a whale of a difference in the offense.

The 'Skins had scored 45 points this time last fall, compared with 13 this year, in a 24-17 victory over the Dodgers and a 21-7 triumph over the Giants.

Sammy Baugh had completed 19 passes out of 28, and the net yardage gained was over 600 yards.

In contrast to last Sunday's bare 3-0 decision over the Dodgers, last year the Redskins beat the same team in the opening game of the season on short touchdown gallops by Frank Filchock and Dick Todd and a touchdown pass, Baugh to Ed Justice. In addition Bo Russell booted a field goal and two conversions and Sandy Sanford, both since released, a conversion. The game was not as close as the score as all Dodger points were in the last half. The 'Skins rolled up 369 yards.

In their only opening-game victory over the Giants since coming to Washington, the Redskins won handily in 1940, although falling short in the statistics column. Dick Todd hung up a beautiful 76-yard run, Jimmy Johnson scored on a pass from Baugh and Wilber Moore dashed off a 12-yard scoring effort. Bo Russell kicked two extra-pointers and Bob Masterson one.

Defense Sharper

The combined Giant-Dodger point total of last year's September battles was 24 points, 7 more than this year, indicating the 'Skin defense is a bit sharper as both the New York aggregations are supposed to be stronger in the scoring column. Last Sunday's weather undoubtedly held both teams down in the scoring, although it was in the 80s for the Giant game of '40.

Frank Filchock, this year's outstanding individual performer, was just another back this time last year, as Baugh, who was passing and kicking to perfection and handling an occasional line buck, was the big hero with Dick Todd a close second.

Revamped Backfield Sparks Hoya Attack

Passing, Blocking Improve With Reiges At Wingback, Gyorgydeak at Fullback

By Jack Munhall

Georgetown's hopes of bouncing back from the V. P. I. upset to spoil Temple's fine record Friday night in Philadelphia were bolstered yesterday as a revamped backfield showed to advantage in a one-hour scrimmage against Frosh armed with Temple plays.

With Sophomores Benny Reiges at wingback and Joe Gyorgydeak at fullback, the Georgetown backfield protected its passers and blocked on reverses in a manner that won the praise of Coach Jack Hagerty.

Reiges, supplanting speedster Jack Doolan, and Frank Dornfeld and Benny Bulvin all were clicking with their passes, and Doolan, perhaps awakened by his demotion, was running harder and faster than at any time this season.

The scrimmage was devoted almost entirely to smoothing out pass plays and reverses, as far as the varsity was concerned, and at the end so much progress had been shown that Coach Hagerty actually was singing for the first time since his team upset Ole Miss.

Blocking Improved

Backfield blocking, so noticeably poor in both the Ole Miss and V. P. I. games, was considerably better with Reiges cooperating with his ends on boxing tackles in excellent form.

Reds Release Lloyd Waner for Jim Pendergast

Cincinnati, Oct. 8.—The Cincinnati Reds tonight gave Veteran Outfielder Lloyd Waner his unconditional release to make room on their roster for Jim Pendergrast, 25-year-old southpaw pitcher drafted from Little Rock of the Southern Association.

"Little Poison," who, with his brother, Paul, starred for the Pittsburgh Pirates for years on end, came to the Reds last spring from Boston in exchange for Pitcher Johnny Hutchings.

Lloyd batted .256, with 42 hits in 164 times at bat for the Reds.

Root, 1 Over 200-Game Mark, Is Given Release by Chicubs

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Charlie Root, for 16 years a star pitcher with the Chicago Cubs and a 201 game winner through that span, was given his unconditional release today.

Jim Gallagher, general manager of the Cubs, said the 42-year-old hurler had been offered a job as coach with the Los Angeles team of the Pacific Coast League. Root has indicated, Gallagher said, that he would accept the post.

Root, one of the most popular players the Cubs ever had, was told a week ago he was to be released. He was given permission to leave the team and negotiate with other Major League teams, but told Gallagher:

"I started my major league career here and I might as well end it here."

He was in uniform last night as the Cubs lost a fourth straight game to the Chicago White Sox in the decisive battle of the fall city series.

Eight victories this season—he lost seven—raised his major league win total to 201 games, one above the goal he had set for himself. His best winning season was in 1927, his second with the Cubs after coming to the team in 1926 from Los Angeles. In 1927 he won 26 games. In four World Series—1929, 1932, 1935 and 1938—He got into six games losing three and winning none.

Mrs. Meckley Wins on 20th In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Oct. 8.—Two Washington and two Baltimore women advanced to the semifinals today in the Middle Atlantic Golf Association championships at Five Farms as the 1939 title winner, Mrs. Walter R. Stokes of Washington was eliminated.

Mrs. Stokes was defeated one up in a blistering 20-hole battle with another former champion, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Washington, who also was last year's runner up.

In other quarter-final matches, Mrs. T. E. Schulderberg, of Baltimore, defeated Mrs. Maurice Glick, Baltimore, 2 and 1; Mrs. Myron Davy, Washington, eliminated Jeanette Myers, Baltimore, 5 and 3; and Mrs. Harry C. Trace, Baltimore, won from Miss Effie Bowes, Baltimore, 5 and 4.

Mrs. Stokes Falters

Mrs. Meckley, who is Maryland State champion, was two down on the sixteenth in her match with Mrs. Stokes, but the lead dwindled to one up on the seventeenth, when Mrs. Stokes three-putted.

On the eighteenth, Mrs. Meckley drove into a trap, barely got out on her second, then recovered by placing her No. 3 iron 2 feet from the pin to extend the match.

They halved the nineteenth, and on the 418-yard twentieth Mrs. Meckley got on the green in two, two-putted, and clinched the match with her birdie four.

Davy-Myers Even

Mrs. Davy closed the first nine one up on Miss Myers, and the Baltimore player holed a 25-foot chip shot to even the match with a bridie three on the tenth, but the Washington golfer took the next five holes to win.

Mrs. Meckley plays Mrs. Schulderberg, and Mrs. Davy and Mrs. Trace are paired tomorrow. The finals will be played Friday.

Other results today included:

Second flight—Mrs. J. T. Powell, Washington, defeated Mrs. William S. Lunger, Washington, 2 up; Mrs. J. W. Sheridan, Baltimore, defeated Mrs. L. H. Hedrick, Washington, 5 and 4.

Consolation, first flight—Mrs. L. G. Pray, Washington, defeated Mrs. Gerald P. Hopkins, Baltimore, 7 and 6; Mrs. Harry J. Beech, Washington, defeated Mrs. Cameron G. Barr, Baltimore, 4 and 3.

Noisy Reception Greets Ohio Team

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 8 (AP).—Coach Paul Brown brought his Ohio State University Bucks home from California tonight. Their reception was massive and delirious.

A crowd estimated at more than 20,000 jammed into Union Depot and its environs to say howdy to the boys who created a mild national sensation by drubbing the Trojans of Southern California, 33 to 0, last Saturday.

Brown sandwiched a very short speech between uproars.

"I never have seen so much ado about a football game, but I like it," he said, then, added: "Tomorrow we're going back to work in the mud up at the stadium."

Run-ins With Dodgers May Prove Costly

Arbiter Was Listed To Work Series But Was Replaced By Babe Pinelli

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 8.—The Daily News said today that George Magerkurth, husky National League umpire who had several runins with the Brooklyn Dodgers the past season, not only lost his World Series assignment but will not return as a major league arbiter next year.

John Carmichael, Daily News baseball writer, said it was learned from an authoritative source that Magerkurth had been designated to work with Larry Goetz in the Dodger-New York Yankee classic but was replaced by Babe Pinelli.

This step, Carmichael said, was traceable largely to a row between the arbiter and the Dodgers during a Dodger-Pittsburgh series last month. In one of the games, Pitcher Hugh Casey, of the Dodgers, threw three balls over the batter's head after the batter had stepped out of the box with the result that Magerkurth is reported to have told the hurler: "If you do that again you're out of the game."

Manager Leo Durocher, of Brooklyn, jumped into the argument, contending Magerkurth had no right to tell Casey what to pitch. Several other players also said their "piece" and at the end of the game, which Brooklyn lost, a near fight threatened under the Pirate stands. Durocher drew a $150 fine and several of his players drew fines of $25 each.

Magerkurth, the article said, didn't work another Dodger series, John (Beans) Reardon being shifted into the breach.

Skinker Beats McCarthy; Close Matches Mark Club Golf

Frizzell's Comeback Tops Webb

Wins on 19th After Being 4 Down, 4 to Go; Pickford Conquers Nee

Earle Skinker defeated defending champion Martin McCarthy in what was billed as the feature match in the Columbia Club Championship yesterday, but before the results were all in four matches had gone extra holes with Tommy Webb and Maury Nee among those on the sidelines.

Webb, champion in 1939 and runner-up last year, was considered a sure thing as he stood on the fifteenth tee, four up and four to play against Paul Frizzell. But the latter rallied to win four straight holes and square the match on the eighteenth, halve the nineteenth and take the match on the second extra hole.

Nee also lost on the twentieth, to Roy Pickford, while Billy Shannon, three down and four to play against E. J. Farrelly, squared his match on the eighteenth but lost on the nineteenth. Craig McKee, one of the tournament favorites, was taken 19 holes by C. A. Slater, jr., before winning, 1 up.

Skinker won the first three holes over McCarthy. The latter squared the match on the back nine but was two down again playing the seventeenth. Riley Tells Alumni Why and How

Washington and Lee Coach Writes Grads After Every Game

By Jack Guenther
United Press Sports Writer.

New York, Oct. 8.—You can come in out of the rain now, Diogenes, and blow out that lamp forever. For your age-old search has ended. We've got your honest man for you, pal, and just guess where we found him. In the ranks of the college football coaches, Mr. D., and aren't you surprised?

If you're a true gridiron fan, pal, you'll have no trouble placing him when you hear his name. It's Riley Smith—you know, the husky Southerner who quarterbacked Alabama in the Rose Bowl the day the Red Elephants, with Hutson and Howell on the prowl, whipped Stanford with such ease.

Well, Riley Smith is coaching at Washington and Lee now, and while he hasn't exactly set the world on fire, he has done pretty well. But it isn't what Smith has achieved on the field that interests us here, Mr. D., it's what he does when his games are over. Can you guess what he does, pally? We thought not. So we'll explain as simply as possible.

Each Saturday night Riley Smith sits down in his office and writes a letter. He only writes one letter, but he has several thousand copies turned out and one of these duplicates is mailed to each member of the alumni. The letters contain no waste space. Briefly and succintly they tell why the Washington and Lee varcity won—or why it lost.

We have one of the letters right here, and it's a pippin. It lists the score and all the statistics. Then it tells what Riley thought of his team and of his opponent.

RILEY SMITH

Lastly, it tips the alumni to what might be expected the following week. It pulls no punches, so just read on and see what the letter of October 2 has to say.

"Dear Friend: Our game with Sewanee was very disappointing from just about every angle. In some phases we did a good job; but I felt our failure to rush the passer not only cost us the winning touchdown, but the other touchdown and 90 per cent of Sewanee's yardage gained. We passed and ran for a touchdown in sl.: plays and a little later we scored again on a pass to lead, 13-0. This was short lived.

"The visitors came through with two long passes for a touchdown, but a few minutes afterward in the second half Teddy Chiesa broke off tackle and ran 35 yards for a touchdown. We again had a 12-point lead and it seemed enough to win the ball game. But Sewanee fought back and made it 19-13 and then with only ten seconds to play completed a 35-yard pass for a touchdown and kicked the extra point to beat us, 20-19.

"We made a great many mistakes, but the turning point of the ball game was when a bounding punt from behind Sewanee's goal line hit Eddie Marx on the leg and they recovered near midfield from where they went on for the final touchdown."

After this critique, Smith noted the bright spots of play and then gave off with the statistics, including even yards lost on penalties, before striding right ahead into the coming game with Kentucky.

"We play Kentucky here Saturday. It seems that Kentucky has a great team and very fast. Our chances of doing much good with them are very slim, but we are hoping for a more alert club and we are trying to improve on our mistakes of last Friday."

There you are, Diogenes, and we hope you're satisfied with our man. But if you want a clincher, we might add that the Riley Smith forecast of things to come was quite correct in every detail. Kentucky had a very fast team and Washington and Lee's chances of doing anything were just as slim as he said they were. You see, Mr. D., Kentucky won the game, 7-0, and right now we're sitting here waiting on the postman to bring us the explanation.

Former Alabama Star Tells of Faults and Makes Predictions

Bible, Texas Coach, Praises New Grid Rules

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Oct. 8.—Opposition to the new football rules has died to a whisper now that coaches have seen them work, D. X. Bible, member of the national rules committee, said today.

BIBLE

The University of Texas coach declared that, contrary to previous opinion, the rule allowing substitutions any time the ball is dead had speeded up the game.

"Take our game with Louisiana State Saturday," he illustrated. "We got it over in 2 hours and 1 minute. With Colorado the week before we ran it off in 2 hours and 20 minutes."

Bible also said the Texas-Louisiana game demonstrated the worth of the rule allowing use of three footballs when the field is muddy.

"We had a comparatively clean, dry ball throughout the game," he declared. "It takes no longer for a student manager to bring in a clean ball than it does a referee to wipe off one with a soggy towel."

The Texas mentor said football had opened up more. "It no longer is impractical to pass incomplete into the end zone on fourth down," he pointed out. Formerly such a pass resulted in a touchback.

Now that a team can afford to gamble the play is resulting in more scoring thrills, he declared on the basis of reports throughout the country.

There may be fewer field goal attempts but one rule change is due to bring more tries from a distance, Bible believes. This is the rule which kills a punt inside the opponents' 10-yard line and makes it a touchback.

"The receiving team must be given the chance to run back the ball from behind the 10-yard line," Bible said. "That opens the gate for more placement kicks instead of punts when teams are inside the 40. Such a play could produce three points and it is covered by the same rule as a punt, except the kicking team can down the ball anywhere on the field."

Irish Race Horse To Run at Santa Anita

Los Angeles, Oct. 8 (AP).—Starborn, a 3-year-old Irish colt with a record of ten victories in 12 starts in Ireland, has been sent to Santa Anita by Owner Albert Geddes, of Cristobal, Canal Zone. The colt is to be prepared for the winter meeting opening December 31 and is considered a potential nominee for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 7.

Pass Defense Stressed; Va. Scrimmages

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 8.—Pass defense was the major item on today's University of Virginia practice program as Coach Murray sent his squad through its third straight scrimmage session in preparation for the Richmond game here Saturday.

Despite the best efforts of varsity backs, their freshman opposition completed a good many throws. Defense against the freshman version of the Spider running attack was somewhat better, with Herbert Munhall and Don Niklason especially noticeable in knocking down ball-carriers from their fullback position.

Expecting to find it hard to move against the heavier Richmond line, Bill Dudley warmed up his throwing arm, firing passes from a skeleton formation before the rough work started. Johnny Neff, starting quarterback, who has been inactive since last week's Yale game, returned to direct the rehearsal.

Expect for minor ailments of Ed Steckmesser and Eric Schlesinger, tackles, the Cavaliers approach their first major State test in pretty good shape.

Maryland Aims For DukeGame With Stiff Drill

Maryland's eleven yesterday continued to work hard on its attack for Saturday's meeting with mighty Duke at Baltimore Stadium.

Passing, upon which the Terps appear to be staking all their hopes for an upset, again was stressed, both from single and double-wing formations.

Highlighting the workout was the continuation of two backfield duels for regular positions, between Elmer Rigby and George Barnes for left half, and John Cordyack and Bernie Ulman for the quarterback berth. It makes little difference, however, which two win out, because action is expected to be divided equally between the two pairs.

Meantime it was learned that Duke's squad of 35 players will arrive in Baltimore early Saturday morning, which means that the Blue Devils will miss only one home practice at Durham.

Landon Midgets Play

Lady Rasslers Hold Spotlight At Turner's

A couple of feminine wrestling stars—one a Carole Starr, of St. Louis, the other an Oklahoma Indian girl, Celia Blevins will share the spotlight tonight at Turner's Arena with two of the better known male grapplers.

It's double windup night at the Arena, and Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, will take on Pat Fraley, the Pacific Coast champion, in the other cofeature bout.

Miss Blevins is appearing here for the second time in the last four months. She showed here last against Mildred Burke, losing to the recognized feminine champion in some 18 minutes. The winner is slated to meet Miss Burke next month.

With Promoter Joe Turner planning an elimination tournament in the next few weeks, a flock of top-notch talent is working in supporting bouts, hoping to be in the thick of the fight. Nanjo Singh, the "Cobra Clutch' king, will meet Fred (Legs) Grobmier, of Des Moines, Iowa, in a special bout. Joe Cox, the Kansas Krasher, also a headliner, will take on Frank Judson, former Harvard mat coach, and the popular Maurice LaChappelle, of France, will oppose Abie Coleman.

First bout is at 8:30.

BrooklandBowlers Roll 1717 Pin Set; Gladding Leads

Brookland set an early season's record with a 1717 pin set in the Ladies' District League last night and won all three games from the Ice Palace. Lois Gladding led the count with a 384 set for the winners. Anna Daut tied the high individual set for the night with a 384 which paced Clarendon to a 3-to-0 victory over Rosslyn, which dropped three despite a 365 by Lucy Rose.

Helen O'Dea had 351 for Red Circle, which copped the odd one from Lafayette, while Lorraine Gulli posted a 354 for Hi-Skor, but her team lost two to Rendezvous. Other 2-1 decisions were Del Ray over Arlington, King Pin over Arcadia and Spillway over Convention Hall.

King Leads Bowlers at Silver Spring

Bill King, Diamond Appliance, last night rolled husky scores of 165 and 421 in the American League at Silver Spring to chalk up two season records. He also helped his team win high set with a 1752 count and two games from Willis Builders. For good measure, King's pin scattering won for him a free entry in the Norman Levy event in Norfolk. Sanford's took high team game with 612 and all three from Pickwick Grill. Georgia Tavern scored a sweep over Cornelius Printing.

Fort Davis

Fitzwater again led the Naval Research League at Fort Davis with his 143 and 366 but his Wrenchbenders quintet could take but one skirmish from the Nut Splitters. The Draftees set two season records with their counts of 562 and 1560 in taking team highs. The Tin Knockers lead the league.

Silver Spring

Fred Prentiss, Harrison Roofers, had high single of 156 in the Friendship League at Silver Spring to spark a two-game win over Wakefield Dairy. Malitz, Mascetti Shoe, had a 150 game and 396 set to lead an odd tilt win over T. L. & W. Brick. The Atlas Decorators won high team set with a 602 count while a record 1725 took high set for Wright Hardware. Pryor, Grotto Grill, led a sweep over Floral Tap Room with his 130-380. Herzog's Men's Wear and Willis Builders won all three from Freddie's Tavern and R. E. Barrett, respectively.

Queen Pin

Section C of the Catholic League at Queen Pin was topped by Phil Wilkinson, St. Joseph's No. 3, with 145. Phil Tolotta, St. Joseph's No. 2, led a three-game win over St. Joseph's No. 1 with high individual set of 357 and helped his team take high game with a 564 pinfall. St. Aloysius was best for set with 1556.

Clarendon

Lillian Tapp's 147-357 sparked the Clarendon Ladies League and led her Rite-Way Contractors to a record team game of 587 and a set of 1583. The girls from Rector's Flowers scored a sweep over Colonial Ice Cream. Monroe Pharmacy tops the league with Ellett & Short in second place.

Lucky Strike Bowlers Win With 1823 Set

Hokie Smith and his Lucky Strike champions continued their onward dash for a repeat performance in the Men's District League by taking all three games from Convention Hall, a 629 game and 1823 set their highs for the night. But Lucky Strike was not alone in clean sweeps as both Arlington and Penn matched them game for game, the former against Peacock's Bethesda and the later against Hyattsville.

Hokie again led his Lucky Strike boys with a 390 set but he was aided by Harry Aiken's 142 single and 376 effort. Tony Santini had high game for the Hallmen, a 142, with Meyer Weinberg rolling top set of 368, while the Singer boys, Julie and Dave, contributed 364 and 352, respectively. Frank Mischou was the hero of the Arlington sweep over Roger Peacock's Bethesdans with a 404 set, but Ollie Pacini tossed in high game of 151 along with a 372 set. Art Crown had second high set for the Virginians with 378. "Skinny" Pugh was top man for Bethesda with 348, while Leon Fleisher and Frank Riley each had 344.

Abe Weinberg topped the Penn attack with his 159 game and 414 set with Red Hamilton close behind after a 155 single and 394 set.

Lucky Strike is currently out in front by virtue of a two-game margin with Arlington next with 11-4, as they have a greater pinfall over Penn, although the latter also has won 11 and lost 4. Georgetown follows with 10 and 5.

Joe Harrison, Spillway, rolled 165 for top single of the night and Irving Simon, Hi-Skor, led for set with 421. Spillway had high team game of 688 while an 1890 total won high-set honors for King Pin.

On the American Grid Front

Army Backfield Stars Triple Threats

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 8.—Three-fourths of the Army backfield that starts against Virginia Military Institute Saturday may be triple-threat men.

Jere Mauphin and Hank Mazur virtually are assured of starting positions, and on the basis of his play during today's two-hour workout Johnny Hatch will get the nod over Ted Lutrzykowski at the plunging back spot.

Robin Olds, of Washington, D. C., sophomore, who got the call over a couple of seasoned juniors at right tackle in the Citadel game, also stood out during today's drill. He probably will be the only yearling on the first eleven Saturday.

Reitano Is Injured

New York, Oct. 8.—Just when New York U. Coach Mal Stevens was beginning to feel pretty confident, at least about his ends, for Saturday's football game with Texas A. and M., he lost that feeling again. Reason for the confidence was Vincent Reitano, who only yesterday returned to the left end job he held in 1940. Reason for the loss of confidence was the fact Reitano reported today with a fractured ankle, and will be out for at least three weeks.

Dartmouth Drills

Hanover, N. H.—The Dartmouth varsity hit both ends of the scale in a workout for this weekend's clash with Colgate. On defense the first-stringers stopped the freshmen, using Colgate plays, right in their tracks. But on offense against the scrubs the Indians could score only once.

Grigas in Line-up

Worcester, Mass. — Fullback Johnny Grigas, who scored all three Holy Cross touchdowns against Louisiana State ten days ago, returned to action and, while he still was limping a bit, made the Crusaders feel considerably more confident about their next assignment. This is with Syracuse Saturday.

Eagles Weak on Defense

Newton, Mass.—While the Boston College Eagles took to a bath of new plays given them by coach Denny Myers with considerable aptitude, they looked bad on defense against the forward passing plays which Clemson is expected to spring on them this week.

Columbia Has Tailbacks

New York.—Columbia will have the unprecedented number of four tailbacks on call at Princeton Saturday. This top-heaviness was caused by the return to action of Sophomore Leo (Tex.) Blanton, of Waco, Tex., who has been out more than a week with a trick knee.

Harvard Preps for Game

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard's ends will attend to most of the punting in this week's game with Cornell. In addition to Loren McKinney, star left end who has handled that assignment for two seasons, Coach Dick Harlow has Jack Morgan at right end, and plans to make sure one of them is always in the line-up against the Big Red.

Taylor, Ferguson Star

New Haven, Conn.—Ed Taylor and Jack Ferguson stood out as passing stars, and Taylor, Chuck Willoughby, Ted Harrison and Hovey Seymour broke loose consistently for long gains in Yale's final scrimmage for its game with Pennsylvania.

Manhattan Preps

New York—Manhattan College, which meets Duquesne under the Polo Grounds lights Friday night, had its hopes bolstered considerably when Frank Kiesecker was able to take part in contact work. Kiesecker, the regular fullback, handles all the Jaspers' punting and is a stout plunging back as well.

Drill for T. C. U.

Bloomington, Ind., Oct. 8 (AP).—Indiana University's football regulars worked out today against freshmen and reserves, using plays of the Texas Christian University Horned Frogs, who the Hoosiers will meet here Saturday. Coach A. N. (Bo) McMillin indicated Kenny Smith might replace Howdy Elliott at end and Chuck Steel either Capt. Gene White or Al Bragalone at guard.

Injuries Hit Purdue

Lafayette, Ind., Oct. 8 (AP).—Two Purdue University football tackles—Bruce Warren and Sophomore French—suffered leg injuries in practice today and trainees said they wouldn't be able to play at Ohio State Saturday. Fullback John Petty and Right Halfback Marion (Red) Carter also are on the sidelines. Coaches expressed pleasure at work of two sophomores—the running of Fullback John Andretich, who may replace Petty, and passing of Right Halfback Francis Meakim.

Warns of Techmen

South Bend, Ind., Oct. 8 (AP).—Football Coach Frank Leahy, of Notre Dame, warned his squad today against the passing and running of Halfbacks Johnny Bosch and Dave Eldredge, of Georgia Tech, which the Irish will play Saturday. He said the Notre Dame pass defense "has to smarten up a lot and every man must be on his toes every minute." The team will leave tomorrow noon for Atlanta.

Wisconsin Drills

Madison, Wis., Oct. 8 (AP).—Coach Harry Stuhldreher ran his University of Wisconsin football squad through a heavy drill today, the third in three days, in preparation for the Badgers' opening conference game Saturday at Northwestern.

Nebraska Battles Frosh

Lincoln, Nebr., Oct. 8 (AP).—Nebraska's football squad tossed aside its worries over Ralph Miller, of Kansas, and his passes today and spent the larger share of the practice session tearing the freshmen apart. Especially effective were Vike Francis and Wayne Blue, fullbacks, on smashes into the middle, and pass plays with Dale Bradley, Howard Debus, Marvin Athey and Fred Metheny throwing. Nebraksa, victor over Iowa State last Saturday, seeks to take the second step to another Big Six title against Kansas here Saturday.

Harvey Stars

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 8 (AP).—Diminutive Herm Harvey scored three touchdowns in a long workout against the freshmen today as Drake University's Bulldogs wound up hard work for their Missouri Valley Conference opener against St. Louis Friday night. Part of the drill was devoted to defense against Billiken formations and the Drake forward wall smothered frosh attempts.

Colonials Pessimistic Over W. & L. Game Tomorrow Night

Injury List Is Crowded With Stars

Monchlovich Still Liable for Early Draft Call; Passing Attack Still Bad

Questioned on George Washington's chances of beating Washington and Lee here Friday night, Coach Bill Reinhart last night was in a decidedly pessimistic mood. Injuries and the ever-present danger of the draft claiming a star player are twin worries for Coach Reinhart.

As of last night, said Reinhart, George Washington could not count on the services of three key players for the game with W. and L.'s Generals. These are Johnny Picco and Stan Ziobro, the regular ends, and Tackle Dan Snyder, who has not yet recovered from a preseason injury.

Add to that the fact that Center Mike Monchlovich is still being withheld from G. W. games pending clarification of his draft status and that several others are liable to early call and you have an idea of why Reinhart is not optimistic.

Not Clicking Yet

The genial Buff and Blue coach is not resigned to defeat at the hands of Riley Smith's Virginia eleven. But he is wise enough not to expect too much from his Colonials, who showed in their last week's loss to Manhattan that they are not yet clicking.

Besides Ziobro and Picco, who may play Friday, and Snyder, who definitely won't play, Reinhart also is fretting over the condition of star fullback Walter Fedora, and linemen Henry Agusiewicz, Floyd McGlinn, John Konizewski and Enrico Seeno. With Snyder definitely out and Konizewski ailing, Reinhart foresaw the possibility that sophomores may have to bear the tackle load against Washington & Lee, even as they did in the Manhattan game. At Manhattan, Konizewski was injured early in the game and from then on sophomores Walter Murphy and Bob Leonetti played almost all the time.

Hurt in Practice

Picco, one of the better ends in the East, was injured, oddly enough, not in a game but in a passing practice drill Monday when he twisted his knee. His injury is such that Reinhart does not know when to expect his senior flankman to return to shape.

Yesterday the Colonial varsity held its only scheduled contact work of the week, with frosh, using W. and L. formations, providing the opposition. In this workout Reinhart was pleased with the performance of Harry Ledford, who was converted from blocking back to end to plug up the depleted wing corps.

Otherwise, there wasn't, according to Reinhart, anything to become excited about. The passing, deplorably bad in the Manhattan game, showed little improvement and this is something Reinhart confesses he is unable to understand. Before the season he had been confident that Scott Gudmundson, Jim Graham and Don Pinnow would give the Colonials a needed strong aerial attack. But so far they haven't.

Braddock Plays Part in Defense Training

Ahearn Aids Attell; Apostoli Signed Here

Goldie Ahearn, for many years connected with the fight game here, will be associated with Johnny Attell in the promotion of boxing at the Uline Ice Arena, it was announced yesterday.

"Goldie" in his fighting days was managed by Attell for a time.

A change in the first Uline card, scheduled for next Tuesday, was also announced. The Beau Jack-Abie Kaufman bout will be dropped, and in its place Attell has signed Fred Apostoli, former middleweight champion, and El Brookman, pleasing local youngster, in a ten-rounder.

The show will be headlined by Chalky Wright, featherweight titleholder (New York-Maryland version), and Leo Rodak, Chicago lightweight. Other bouts scheduled are Art Dorrell, Texas welterweight, vs. Frankie Wills, local welter, and Billy Banks, another local boy, vs. Joey Archibald, former featherweight champion. All bouts on the card are listed for ten rounds.

Apostoli's debut here will be his third fight since hitting the comeback trail. He knocked out "Wild Bill" McDowell in the first and kayoed Joey Spangler in the second.

Cuban Horsemen Arrive Tomorrow

The Cuban Army jumping team, which will compete in the featured military jumping at the National Horse Show in Madison Square Garden November 5-12, will arrive in New York tomorrow on the S.S. Shawnee, according to an announcement by Amory L. Haskell, president of the horse show association.

With a total of eight horses—three more than they imported last year—the Cuban forces will include 7 officers, 3 of whom are veteran performers in the Garden. Members of last year's team will be Lieut. Chipi Cordova, Lieut. Pedron Perez and Lieut. Cantor Reybrava, with the additions of Lieut. Rodrigues, Lieut. Perez Betancourt, Lieut. Hernandez Gil, and Lieut. Naranjo Suarez, veterinarian.

The horses will be stabled and schooled at Governors Island until a few days before the opening of the show.

D. C. Golfers Face Quartet Of Tourneys

The District golf professionals will be a busy lot for the next four days, starting tomorrow with a quartet of tournaments on tap, two here and two out of town. They will be followed by the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. Championship next Thursday in Richmond.

Bob Barnett's annual pro-senior affair at Chevy Chase tomorrow will start things off. Barnett will be host to a luncheon with the 18-hole combined score affair following. At least 15 teams are expected.

Wiffy Cox will be in Hot Springs, Va., Saturday and Sunday for the annual invitation pro-amateur tournament which will draw a good many of the top-notch pros. The prize money will be in excess of $1000.

Al Houghton will lead a half-dozen pros to Chestertown, Md., for the Eastern Shore Open championship Sunday, over the 36-hole route. A pro-amateur will precede the Open on Saturday. First prize will be $125 with a total of nearly $400 for the top finishers. Houghton was second last year.

The above mentioned affairs will be mere warm-ups, however, for Monday's pro-sportswriter affair at Kenwood, sponsored by the Bowling Alley Operators Association. Partners will be drawn.

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship, with Rut Coffey defending, will be the season's closing affair. Al Houghton, Leo Walper and Bobby Cruickshank will also settle their Washington Open tie in the rounds of the championship.

U. of Maryland Soccermen Beat Virginia

Maryland University opened its soccer season with a bang yesterday, turning back the University of Virginia Cavaliers, 12-0, on the College Park field.

From the whistle the Terps took the offensive and never were seriously challenged thereafter. It was the third game and the third straight defeat for the Cavaliers.

Charlotte Hall Adds Woodward

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlotte Hall, Md., Oct. 8.—Charlotte Hall Military Academy has added a special game with Woodward Prep School, of Washington, to its 1941 football schedule, Coach Pop Ehringer announced today.

The contest will be played here on Friday, October 17, this filling in the only open date on the Cadets' schedule and giving Charlotte Hall a total of ten games for the season.

The Woodward clash will be sandwiched in between the Georgetown Prep game at Garrett Park on October 11 and the St. John's College game in Washington on October 25. Ehringer feels that he would rather have his charges in action on the weekend between these frays than to have them lose their edge by remaining idle.

Cleveland Outfielder To Teach High School

Fredericksburg, Va., Oct. 8.—Clarence "Soup" Campbell, outfielder with the Cleveland Indians, has accepted a teaching post at Caroline High School for the winter months.

Campbell is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence Campbell, of Sparta, Caroline County.

Fishing with JACK BELL

Monday saw the inauguration of the "Fish Peddlers Club." If you are an Ichthyophagous, you now have a chance to ichthyophagize with other members of the newly organized "Fish Peddlers.'

Every Monday, for quite a spell members of the local Izaak Walton League gather at noon to ichthyophagize in the Viking Room of the Neptune Restaurant. The affair has become so huge a success that the management has turned over the room to the newly organized "Fish Peddlers."

JACK BELL

There in the past many a curious dish, never caught with hook and line, has been served—Salmi of muskrat, ribs of whale, roast a la panther and slimy crawlers.

There are no dues and only one by-law or rule, and that is everyone pays for his own. Anyone with a desire to talk fish, fishing, or of his sporting activities, will find many sympathetic ears.

Like the original "Fish Peddlers Club," of Miami, some days you will find but a handful in attendance, while on others, the number is likely to surprize you.

Here we are in October with temperatures trying hard to reach 100 degrees in the shade. Several weeks past we all looked forward to what we hoped would be the best black bass fishing for some years. Earlier there were a number of bang-up days, but look at it now.

Heretofore anglers counted the days the Potomac River was clear—now we all have lost count of the days it has been clear, and if conditions keep up like they are we may lose the Potomac. The river has dropped to a low that few rivermen have seen before. The Potomac watershed has had no rain for so long the water has become stale, and lacks oxygen. Bass have become loggy and won't strike.

Rivermen tell us they have never before seen so many big cat-fish so far up river. Looks like they have eaten every thing around their old haunts and now have become long-range rovers.

Most of the bass anglers have given up fishing for bass, and are now concentrating on the pike of brackish waters. Many very good catches are being reported. In fishing for them don't horse them in, for their paws are still quite soft, and the hook tears out very easily.

Trout Are Biting

Reports of bay fishing over the weekend are that trout or weakfish weighing from 1½ to 5 pounds, and averaging 35 to a boat, are very general. Anglers fishing off Miles River above Annapolis are doing very well with rock-fish, many weighing up to 10 pounds. Baltimore anglers fishing the upper end of the bay off the mouth of the Chester River are catching anywhere from 20 to 100 stripers weighing from 4 pounds up to the limit. Tolchester and the Middle Grounds back of Millers Island is reported producing.

Channel bass ranging up to 40 pounds each have been active the past week in the surf at Fox Hills Levels and thereabouts.

From Wachapreague comes the report that channel bass are taking the bait, ten having been caught by one boat last week. Chincoteague and Cape Charles also report catches.

Goshen, 3-to-5 Shot, Fails at Hawthorne

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—After riding three winners in the first five races, Jockey Steve Brooks failed aboard the 3-to-5 shot, Goshen, in the Ullman Purse at Hawthorne today.

Brooks gave Goshen a typical whipping ride in the stretch, but Goshen failed to catch Mrs. L. H. Thompson's Mint Sand by three-quarters of a length, Mr. Smith finished third.

Mint Sand, ridden by N. L. Pierson, returned $10.60 for $2 and ran the mile and a sixteenth over a slow track in 1:50 1-5.

Brooks' three winners gave him 53 for the meeting, which comes to its 30-day end Saturday.

Navy Prepares For Lafayette Clash Saturday

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 8.—This is certainly "get Navy" year for the Middies' gridiron opponents, if there ever was one.

That's why Swede Larson, Middie coach, wasn't fooling when he said Navy would prepare for each and every one of its adversaries as they pop up on the schedule.

He isn't taking any chances—and rightfully so. Each one of the sailor's opponents so far—William and Mary and West Virginia—pointed especially for the Navy clash, hoping to upset the applecart.

And Lafayette, Navy's foe Saturday, is no exception. After that comes Cornell, Harvard, Pennsylvania, Notre Dame, Princeton and Army. They'll be out to "get Navy" and save their own hides.

Word comes to Crabtown that the Lafayette Leopards are concentrating on a new offensive just for the Middies. And Walt Zirinsky, the key to the visitors' attack, will be on hand. Zirinsky, a hard-running fullback, suffered an attack of appendicitis and only played a minute against New York University last Saturday. Lafayette lost, 6-0, as a result.

Considered Good Back

But Zirinsky is ready to go the full 60 minutes against Navy. The Lafayette attack is built around him. A triple-threater, Zirinsky is considered one of the best backs in the East.

Charley Nagle, right halfback, is a dangerous passer, especially when lanky sophomore Bill Ziemer, left halfback, is on hand. Ziemer was the ace ground-gainer last Saturday.

The Leopards have a veteran eleven, but lack scoring punch. Headcoach Hook Mylin right now is trying to develop a stronger aerial offense.

Larson shifted Warren Montgomery, a sophomore back, to the right end position today to make up for the absence of Lars Wanggaard, end who was injured last Saturday. Wanggaard will be out the entire week.

The Middies again today worked on fundamentals, pass defense and sharpening up the offense. That big game with Cornell comes up Saturday week at Baltimore, but right now the Middies are busy preparing to skin the Leopards this Saturday.

Desires Gridiron Clashes

The Cleveland Park Y. M. C. A. would like to arrange football games with teams in the 105 and 120-pound classes. If interested, phone Woodley 4314.

Wildcat Squad Will Depend On Sophomores Saturday

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., Oct. 8.—The greatest crop of sophomores to hit a Big Ten campus in years—combined with a true schedule test—may spark Northwestern to sectional and national football honors this fall.

Within the next four Saturdays Northwestern will play Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio State and Minnesota. First-year men alone couldn't carry the Wildcats to victory in those battles. But every veteran on Coach Lynn Waldorf's club knows that his slightest letup may result in a sophomore taking his job. In that knowledge lies a spark which could explode the Wildcats to the heights within the next seven Saturdays.

Northwestern has first-year men not only in quantity but quality. Last Saturday's 51-to-3 victory over Kansas State saw 19 sophomores in action. Their all-around performance—even discounting the caliber of the opposition—indicated that only through game-by-game peak jobs will veterans hold their posts over the Wildcat rookies.

No. 1 Northwestern sophomore is Otto Graham, from nearby Waukegan, Ill. A 180-pound youngster, he is one of the finest backs to arrive at Northwestern in several seasons. He can run, pass and punt. In his 90-yard touchdown return of a punt last Saturday he demonstrated the poise of a third-year star, picking his spots and making his moves so perfectly he took advantage of some half-dozen blocks. He looks good enough to force Bill de Correvont to stardom—or the bench.

Don Buffmire, Dud Kean, Casey Peifer and Ed Hirsch all looked fine as first-year backs, while notable sophomore linemen were Bob Carlson, Bill Ohland, Bob Wallis, Tony Samarzia and Bill Deoduic. Carlson, a tackle, is built along the lines of the veteran Alf Bauman and, like that veteran Wildcat star, likes the action at its roughest.

Northwestern should win over Wisconsin next Saturday, but the three games to follow would add gray hairs to any mentor's head, for Michigan, Ohio State and Minnesota are the big guns on the conference line. Should Northwestern weather their fire, the Wildcats still would get little rest against Indiana, powerful Notre Dame and tricky Illinois.

The very toughness of that schedule will enhance Northwestern's claims to national laurels should the Wildcats come through undefeated. Should that happen, it may be because those capable Northwestern veterans, riding the Wildcat charge, are mindful of numerous sophomores riding—and waiting—on the Wildcat bench.

Duck Hunting On Sundays Disallowed

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Oct. 8.—The Virginia Game Commission's move to allow duck and goose hunting in Virginia on Sunday was blocked today by discovery that such hunting would be in violation of an act of the 1936 General Assembly.

To bring its own regulations into conformance with the Federal ones which govern the shooting of waterfowl, the commission yesterday amended commission rules to permit Sabbath hunting of migratory waterfowl in the State. The Federal regulations open the season on November 2, which is Sunday, and the commission's amendment—if legal—would have added nine Sundays to the season this fall.

However, Commissioner Carl Nolting said, discovery of the 1936 act will render ineffectual the action taken by the commission. So Sunday will remain a sanctuary day for migratory waterfowl in Virginia.

Navy Jayvees Win Over Terps, 3 to 2

Annapolis, Oct. 8 (AP).—Checking its opponents' last minute rally, Navy's jayvee soccer team gained a 3-to-2 victory today over the University of Maryland "B" squad booters.

His team trailing, 3 to 1, going into the last minute of play, Russ Mizel, Terrapin wingman, outran the Navy defense to score his second goal, but the Middie defense held against Maryland's last-minute bombardment to carry off victory.

Wadlow Belt and Frit Clark, two subs, scored for the Midshipmen in the second period, and Benny Lennan tallied the other Middie mark-

Sassy Lady Captures Wye Mill Handicap at Laurel Track

Skin Deep Runs Second In Feature

Abrasion, Favorite Is Third; Winner Pays $9 Ticket; Mora Suspended

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Laurel, Md., Oct. 8.—Sassy Lady, a fleet daughter of Flying Heels and Lady Mitzi, brought her earnings for this year to $6,930 today by adding $1,400 for a smashing victory in the Wye Mills Handicap, featuring a card. The 5-year-old mare was purchased for a reported $5,000 by Mrs. C. E. Nelson in Florida last winter. Under excellent handling by Jockey J. Deering, the mare forged to the finish line 2½ lengths in front of the closest opposition.

Danny MacVean's Skin Deep was a driving second and lasted long enough to force J. W. Martin's Abrasion, the favorite in the field of six, into third position. Trois Pistoles, Itabo and Don Orlan were the others and were stretched out through the stretch at the end.

In winning her third race of the year in 12 starts, Sassy Lady brought her backers a $9 mutuel and recorded time of 1:12 3-5 for the 6 furlongs over a fast running surface. A crowd of 8000 celebrated the end of the heat wave at the track.

Sassy Lady gave her backers only one anxious moment and then because she was being given a "breather" by Jockey Deering. Skin Deep came up on the outside of the pacemaker approaching the stretch but Deering soon went into a hand drive and his mount opened daylight again.

Rides Double Winners

Jockey Henri Mora, who refused to ride John's Buddy on yesterday's program and delayed the program for more than 15 minutes, was suspended for the remainder of the meeting, the stewards announced before the first race.

Jockey Eddie DeCamillis rode both ends of the daily double, which paid scattered backers $23.40. In the first race he was aboard Agnes Knight, owned and trained by M. B. (Pop) Goss, of Winchester Va. The Baltimore boy booted this one home ahead of Peppery and Stand Alone, the latter the favorite in the field of nine. Agnes Knight paid $7.80.

In the third race, DeCamillis climbed into the saddle of Mystique, a 2-year-old filly owned by Bobby Curran, of Solver Spring, Md. He brought this one home after making a bold charge between horses in the stretch run. Impregnable was second and Our Blen, the favorite, was third to the $24.40 shot.

CITY JUDGE closed willingly from a slow beginning.

26-to-31-Year U. S. Bonds to Yield 2½%

By the Associated Press

The Treasury announced last night that the $1,300,000,000 of new bonds to be sold today will bear 2½ per cent interest and mature in from 26 to 31 years.

Those bonds maturing in 31 years have the second longest maturity of any bonds ever issued by the Treasury. The only longer term bonds were 50 million dollars of Panama Canal bonds issued in 1911 at 3 per cent to mature in 50 years.

Details of the new bonds were released following an announcement that $1,200,000,000 of the new bonds would be sold to the investing public and 100 million dollars' worth to Government investment accounts.

The money is needed by the Treasury to pay for defense expenditures, now exceeding $1,300,000,000 a month.

An additional amount of the new bonds was offered by the Treasury to holders of $204,425,400 worth of 1¼ per cent Treasury notes maturing December 15 in exchange for the old securities. Holders of the old notes may decline the exchange, however, and receive cash instead.

Treasury officials said that the interest rate was low considering the fact that the last two Treasury bond issues also bore 2½ per cent interest but matured in 11 to 17 years. Longer-term bonds usually carry more interest.

Thursday's big bond sale to banks, insurance companies and other large investors will be the largest single cash borrowing by the Treasury since World War days. The issue also will be the first offered to this type of investors since the Treasury began borrowing smaller amounts from small investors through the defense savings bond campaign which began May 1.

The new bonds will be dated October 20 and at that time will boost the Federal debt to approximately $52,700,000,000.

Better Weather Brings Increase In Cotton Estimate

By the Associated Press

Improved weather conditions during September brought about an increase of 351,000 bales in the 1941 prospective cotton crop, the Agriculture Department reported today.

On the basis of conditions prevailing October 1, the department estimated the crop at 11,061,000 bales as compared with 10,710,000 bales estimated a month ago.

Most of the increase in prospective production occurred in States adjoining the Mississippi River and in Alabama. In those States dry weather and high temperatures checked boll weevil activities and caused rapid development of the crop. Improvement also was shown in Oklahoma due to moderate rains.

The condition of the crop was 64 per cent of normal, compared with 65 a month ago and 72 per cent a year ago.

The department reported the indicated yield of lint cotton to be 234.2 pounds to the acre and the area for harvest 22,633,000 acres.

A month ago 10,710,000 bales were forecast on the basis of the September 1 condition of 65 per cent of a normal, which indicated a yield of 226.8 pounds to the acre.

Bond&Share Buys Preferred Stock

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Electric Bond & Share Co. announced to its annual stockholders' meeting today it had bought in the open market 7300 shares of its preferred stock under terms of a Securities and Exchange Commission order.

The purchases totaled $472,361, and were made up of 5400 shares of $6 preferred at an average of $68.12 a share and 1900 shares of $5 preferred at an average of $60.70.

S. W. Murphy, president, said earnings for the 12 months ended September 30 equalled 46 cents a share on the common stock, compared with 16 cents a share in the previous 12 months.

Murphy said sales of electricity in the 12 months covered by the report were 14 per cent ahead of the preceding year, and that gas sales were up 9 per cent. Because of higher operating expenses and greatly increased taxes, he said, net operating revenues were 4 per cent under those of the year earlier.

Sugar Shipments Up 24% in Period

By the Associated Press

Deliveries this year totaled 5,577,613 short tons, raw value, compared with 4,479,713 tons last year

Stocks of sugar held by refiners, beet sugar processors importers and mainland cane factories on August 31 were reported at 1,335,974 short tons" compared with 1,525,696 tons on the corresponding date last year.

The Outlook

Businessman Has to Run Fast Now In Order to Stay Where He Was

Following the taking over by the Federal Government of a shipbuilding plant at Kearny, N. J., at the request of the management after a labor deadlock over the closed shop, a panel of businessmen from various representative companies gathered privately in New York to discuss the larger significance of the incident.

A preponderance of opinion was that it might have been advisable for the management to have stuck to its guns and brought the issue to a conclusion. The viewpoint was expressed that the rank and file of workers, though receptive to the idea of collective bargaining and unionization, prefer the freedom of the open shop to the rigidity of the closed shop. This may perhaps be a proper subject for a Gallup poll.

If there is opposition to a mandatory "checkoff" of uniform dues, there is widespread approval for other types of "checkoffs," or automatic pay-roll deductions. "Checkoffs" are desirable to facilitate the purchase by employes on the partial payment plan of defense savings bonds, and I think the idea can be extended to help workers acquire a diversified investment portfolio by adding corporate shares to their holdings of Government bonds.

In addition, Secretary Morgenthau put out a feeler in favor of another "checkoff" in order to accumulate a fund for a dismissal wage for those separated from jobs after the armament boom. Presumably, the Cabinet member wanted to have this deduction made through an amendment to the Social Security Act, but, pending action by Congress, there is no reason why private employers and employes should not work cooperatively on a voluntary basis toward this objective.

Paul T. Cherington, market analyst, calls attention to significant social changes in the American way being quietly wrought by abnormal wartime controls and trends. 'Heavier individual income taxes, increased wages and 'parity' farm prices," he reveals in the Nation's Business, "are merely illustrative of basic changes going on behind the screen of a fabulously costly war. Wealth is being redistributed, control is being shifted, 'emergencies' are being used to effect social changes of momentous character.

"This is not the time, either, to be fooled or to be flustered. It is a time to be realistic, to dig in, to see the larger future, to manage wisely, to be militant. It is a time to be vigilant about private enterprise if one believes in it, and to make the advocates of economic crack-pottery justify their proposals on some more solid basis than the facile shibboleth that 'capitalism has broken down.'"

In other words, the businessman has to run fast nowadays in order to stay where he was.

Franzy Eakin, Decature executive, in the Controller, argues that businessman should exert leader ship in public affairs by developing techniques or double-entry bookkeeping in public affairs for formulating national problems succinctly and realistically. "Adequate statement of policy," he argues. "Appropriate form of organization" and bookkeeping to disclose facts can be used to reverse our trend toward a dictator. If used, they will also contribute to increased production for defense and civilian living."

The last-month figure brings this category of sales for the first nine months of 1941 to 1,785,113 units, establishing a new high sales record for the company. Last last year in the same period total sales were 1,358,157 units.

Sales to United States dealers in September totaled 81,169 units compared with 19,690 in August and 116,031 in September, 1940.

Consumer purchases of General Motors cars and trucks for the first nine months of 1941 were 1,716,395 compared with 1,285,194 in the like 1940 period.

United States dealers' purchases in the first nine months of this year were 1,633,912 compared with 1,249,883 in the like 1940 period.

1942 Sales Trend Uncertain.

Detroit, Oct. 8 (AP).—The sales trend in the motorcar industry still is following somewhat uncertain lines despite the fact the 1942 models of all the car producers have been formally introduced in the leading retail centers and their prices definitely disclosed.

It will require at least another fortnight, say some of the leaders among the trade experts, to measure definitely the buyer reaction to the new models. Some of the manufacturing executives and the heads of larger retail organizations say the absence of a national show this year has deprived the trade of a very important promotional factor.

Reports to statistical services and to trade authorities generally tell of increasing interest in the new models but also major concern about the new price scales. The new retail listings advance retail prices from 10 to 16 per cent over last year's initial figures in the volume models. An even greater increase was made in some of the medium price dlines.

The price increases, according to analysis in trade quarters here of reports from a number of representative areas, have proved more important to the potential car buyers than most of the company sales managers anticipated. At the same time it is explained in authoritative quarters, would-be buyers have been a little disappointed at the trade-in allowances now being offered.

September sales totaled $2,303,897, or 20.4 per cent heavier than in the same month last year. Comparative monthly figures follows:

P.-C. A. Traffic Jumps

That air transportation is serving in national defense is indicated by the tremendous increases in traffic over Pennsylvania-Central Airlines' routes, particularly in travel to and from Washington. J. J. O'Donovan, vice president of the air line, revealed yesterday that in September, 40,212 revenue passengers were carried and 7,605,131 revenue passenger miles were operated by Pennsylvania-Central last month, representing respective increases of 86.41 per cent and 102.05 per cent over September of last year.

In Washington alone, 7488 revenue passengers boarded P.-C. A. planes last month, as against the 3525 who enplaned there in September, 1940—an increase of 112 per cent.

Yule Boxes May Cost Extra

Those fancy boxes so often given free to customers for Christmas gift wrapping may cost extra this year, a bulletin of the National Retail Dry Goods Association indicated yesterday.

Citing a prediction that defense shipments would take so much paper and so many cardboard boxes that ordinary users would get just half their normal supply, the Association urged that elaborate free gift wrapping be minimized.

It said priorities would account for probably 3,000,000 tons of boxboard a year, leaving 6,000,000 tons to meet an annual civilian demand for 12,000,000 tons.

Airlines Report 30.46% Gain in Revenue Mileage

Chicago, Oct. 8 (AP).—Revenue passenger miles flown by domestic airlines during the first eight months of 1941 encreased 30.46 per cent over the same 1940 period, the Air Transport Association reported today.

The January-August figure for 1941 was 869,518,236 miles, compared with 666,517,142 a year ago. August was the peak month in travel with an increase of 6.99 per cent over July, the previous record month. The August mileage of 146,041,369 was 31.47 per cent above August, 1940.

Express traffic showed corresponding gains, the gross revenue for July the greatest in history of the service. Revenue increased 50 per cent over July, 1940, and the weight of shipments passed the million-pound mark for the first time since the service started in 1927. Total weight was 1,073,644 pounds, a 68 per cent gain over July, 1940.

Steel Output Near Record in Month

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—The average weekly steel production during September totaled 1,593,389 tons, the second highest on record, the Amerlean Iron and Steel Institute estimated today.

August's average week was 1,530,351 tons, while the record average, posted in March, this year, was 1,609,851 tons. Last September the average was 1,415,011.

Total steel production during September was slightly under the August total, the institute said, as a result of the shorter month and the Labor Day shutdown.

Delegates See Steeper Prices In Restaurants

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Restaurants will be steeper and everything will be steeper, and every thing will be la carte—even to the extent of charging extra for bread and butter, as a result of the emergency.

These were the predictions at a session of the American Restaurant Association, where Miss Grace E. Smith, association president, said American diners would prefer that to getting smaller portions.

"A test of public opinion was recently made in questionnaire form," she said, "and the results show that diners favor raising prices and maintaining quality, serving bread and butter only if requested, and charging for it; charging extra for desserts, beverages soup, celery and olives, and cutting down on the variety."

Help Shortage Cited

A shortage of help is the most pressing problem confronting the restaurant keepers, Miss Smith said.

"Cooks have moved to defense boom towns, waitresses have found jobs in factories and many married women have quit work because their husbands now earn enough to support them both. Until new help can be trained, service," Miss Smith said, "is bound to be slow."

Rising food prices give the restaurant men and women—one-sixth of the restaurants are run by women—another headache."

"The public has only recently become conscious of higher restaurant prices," said Miss Smith, "but food costs have risen steadily for several months. Government figures show they were 18 per cent higher in June this year than last year and the rise has been at more than 10 per cent a month."

While many restaurants have raised their prices, Miss Smith said she knew of no case in which the increase had been more than 10 per cent and declared new conditions threaten to wipe out the restaurant keeper's "margin profit."

'Penny Pricing'

"Many restaurants have adopted the practice of penny pricing, she said, adding, " a penny or two here or there as the market changes, instead of raising prices by the nickel or the dime. This has met with little resistance from the public."

Smaller portions may be expected, some of the others thought, as the restaurants adjust to the new situation. Meanwhile, the shortage of help was heightening interest in the labor-saving machinery on display at the convention's exposition, and manufacturers said they were taking many orders. Typical of the machinery was a new tenderizing machine said to make it possible to broil steaks in half the present time.

Some 15,00 restaurant keepers are expected to attend the convention's sessions, which run through Friday, making it one of the country's largest gatherings of retailers.

Willis Blames Price Fears on PublicOfficials

Paul S. Willis, president of the Associated Grocery Manufacturers of America, Inc., charged yesterday that "responsible public officials" are misrepresenting the cost of food to the public in statements to the effect that food prices are up "as much as 24 per cent."

Grocery manufacturers "would be the last to deny that the prices of staple foods are rising," Mr. Willis said, stating "they are . . . but they are rising slowly, and they are being forced up by other powerful economic forces." Food prices today are 19 per cent below those of 1929, are .02 per cent below the highs of 1937 and are only 8 per cent above prices during the "depression '30s," on the basis of Bureau of Labor statistics, he declared.

Three principal factors, all beyond the control of the food industry, are at work gradually forcing the price of food up, Mr. Willis said. These he listed as Government spending, higher cost of production and subsidized and greatly increased farm prices. He pointed to these factors, he said, "not in condemnation but in explanation."

Mr. Willis declared that official statements of food price rises of 24 per cent repudiates the "authentic findings of the Bureau of Labor Statistics" and "spread rumors which may easily lead to hysteria on the part of 30,000,000 housewives in America. And such hysteria could well lead to hoarding, price spiraling and possible inflation."

"Those who utter scare-head plaints about food prices have these figures available as we do," he declared. "Not to refer to them indicates that the food industry is to be made the new whipping boy.

"We have no intention of submitting to this. Already the food industry is in the middle of a gigantic squeeze play, in which farm prices are being subsidized to new high levels on one side, and retail price ceilings and new taxes are being threatened on the other. We cannot stand both pressures at once."

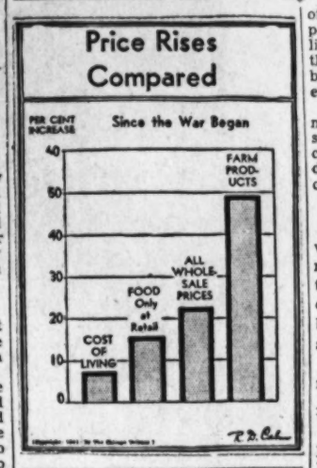
Stock Trend Mixed in Narrow Range; Turnover Slow, Traders Move Warily

New York, Oct. 8.—The stock market followed a narrow course today, but even so, appeared to have recovered from the attack of nerves it had Tuesday, when news of increasing German pressure against Russia made itself felt.



Closing quotations showed plenty of leaders, in all divisions, in both plus and minus columns. For the list as a whole, declines were a little more numerous than advances, but those unchanged about balanced either ups or downs.

Turnover was slow and traders moved warily throughout the session. Volume was 444,140 shares, compared with 602,120 shares Tuesday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 42.4.

In the share list, some preference was shown for airlines and aircraft manufacturers, although even here the direction was not altogether conclusive. Air transports were aided by a record August total of passenger revenue miles flown.

Up in the group by fractions to more than a point were American Airlines, Pan American Airways, United Air Lines and Douglas.

Eastman, U. S. Gypsum and Johns Manville gave ground rather easily. Dow Chemical advanced more than 2 on relatively light demand.

Unchanged to a little higher were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Telephone, General Motors, Woolworth, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Western Union, Chrysler, Santa Fe and Standard Oil (N. J.).

Down minor amounts were Westinghouse, American Can, New York Central, Sears Roebuck, United Aircraft, Sperry, American Smelting and Pennsylvania.

In the Curb market there were a few sharp retreats, running to a point or two, but mostly on minor activity. These included Gulf Oil, Colt's Firearms, Singer, Montgomery Ward "A" and Sherwin Williams. By and large, the list was spotty. Volume was 97,000 shares against 123,000 Tuesday.

The bond market had smoother sailing today after a selling move against the rails was reversed and light demand appeared for an assortment of specialties.

The five major groups in the Associated Press averages held unchanged or within .1 of a point either way of Tuesday's prices with the low-yields duplicating the 1941 high at 114.6. Transactions of $6,478,575, par value, compared with $7,704,300 the day before.

Decouping fractions to a point or more of the previous day's losses were Pacific Gas 33-4s at 112, Wabash 4 1-2s at 20 5-8, Western Union 5s at 85 1-2, Warren Bros. 6s at 86, Colorado & Southern 4 1-25 at 19, Commercial Mackay income 4s at 56 3-4 and American telephone 3s at 112 1-8.

Unchanged to lower issues included St. Paul general 4S, Illinois Central 4 3-4s, Rock Island general 4s, Portland General Electric 4 1-2s and Western Maryland 4s.

Taiwan electric power 5 1-2s lost 7 points on sale of 5 bonds. New South Wales 5s and Cuba 4 1-2s were higher.

Grains Rally On Report of Huge Exports

By the Associated Press

Grain futures recovered from sizable early losses yesterday to close fractionally higher and set the best pace of the commodity market.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard's statement that huge supplies of United States foodstuffs would be sent abroad under Lend-Lease provisions stimulated buying of grain futures.

Chicago wheat closed ½ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel higher, corn was up ⅜ to ⅞ of a cent and soybeans were 1¼ cents lower to ⅝ of a cent higher. Hog prices declined 15 to 25 cents a hundredweight and cattle lost 10 to 15 cents, while lambs rose 10 to 15 cents.

New York cotton futures finished $1.45 to $1.75 a bale lower, forced down by selling that followed a larger-than-expected Federal crop estimate, 11,061,000 bales compared with 10,710,000 a month ago.

Cottonseed oil declined about .1 of a cent a pound in sympathy with cotton. Santos coffee futures lost about .1 of a cent a pound. World sugar futures were unchanged to up a shade, domestic contracts ahead for the day.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 cash commodities at wholesale declined to 92.07 per cent of the 1926 average from 92.35 per cent the day before.

Power Output Sets New Peak

New York, Oct. 8 (AP).—Electric power production for the week ended October 4 soared to 3,289,692,000 kilowatt hours, a record peak, the Edison Electric Institute announced today.

Output was 1.7 per cent greater than 3,233,278,000 in the preceding week and 17.8 per cent more than 2,792,067,000 in the corresponding period a year ago.

The rise in output exceeded seasonal expectations and the Associated Press index of electric power production advanced to 148.4 from 146.4 the previous week. A year ago the figure was 129.1. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, is based on 1929-30 production as 100.

Shoe Output Dips

Production of boots and shoes, the Census Bureau says, totaled 44,763,941 pairs in August, compared with 44,794,441 in July and 39,603,443 in August of last year. Production for Government account was about 1,200,000 pairs in August.

Steel Shortage Blamed Partly On 'Hoarding'

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Oct. 8.—Steelmaster Tom Girdler declared today "if all the facts were known, I believe it would be revealed that not all the steel being currently produced is being currently consumed."

"The surplus is being tucked away in stock," asserted the Republic Steel Corporation's chairman. "'Protective buying' is the new term coined to describe the procedure. I believe some of that has been going on in steel. Better operation of priorities should do much to straighten out the tangle."

Continuing an address drafted for the National Safety Council's mining section, the Cleveland industrialist said "No one questions the need for central planning and for the application of many kinds of control during an emergency like the present. But we must make sure that controls so necessary in war time are not carried over as permanent policies in time of peace.

"There are already a number of straws in the wind that bear strong resemblance to ideas and methods common to the dictator counries. For example, recently suggestions have been made that the Government place precisely the same kind of fixed profit limitations upon industry as have been established in Nazi Germany. We need no Nazi brand of controls over American industry.

"Apparently theer are some people in our Government so cynical as to assume that profit at the expense of patriotism is the sole motivation of industry in this emergency. I do not believe it. Moreover, under present tax laws it is utterly impossible for any business to make an inordinate profit out of defense, and that is at it should be."

Steel Delay Slows Navy Shipbuilding

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 8 (AP).——W. H. Gerhauser, president of American Shipbuilding Co., today told stockholders at the annual meeting that, despite high priority ratings, delay in steel plate deliveries had slowed up construction on naval vessels.

He said in one instance delayed delivery of plates ordered in May for 12 new naval tenders would set back the beginning of fabrication until next week.

MAKING AMERICA STRONG
SHIPBUILDING INDUSTRY RUSHING COMPLETION OF TWO OCEAN NAVY
WORKING DOUBLE AND SOMETIMES TRIPLE SHIFTS, NATION'S SHIPYARDS WILL COMPLETE TWO-OCEAN FLEET IN 1944—
2 YEARS AHEAD OF ORIGINAL SCHEDULE
NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS

This is one of a series of illustrated articles designed to inform the public of the progress being made by American industry in providing the weapons for national defense. The facts presented have been gathered in surveys of leading defense industries and from other authoritative sources.

By a Herculean effort the Nation's shipbuilding industry has been able to advance the completion schedule for Uncle Sam's two-ocean navy by two full years.

Navy sources report that barring labor trouble or actual warfare the fleet—largest in the world—will be practically completed by 1944. The date originally set was 1946-47.

Some truly amazing accomplishments in shipbuilding already have been effected by both Government and private yards. For one thing, the time for building a man-of-war has been cut some 12 to 13 per cent. One privately owned yard turned out a destroyer in 10 months, whereas the normal time for a destroyer is two years. Another West Coast private yard is from two months to a full year ahead of schedule in constructing a fleet of submarines.

Such gains—even the slightest of them—are of utmost importance for, as Navy officials point out, each vessel completed clears the ways for laying the keel of another one of the 368 ships in the two-ocean navy program. The full program—which includes 17 battleships—will not be completed by 1944, but the two-ocean Navy will be sufficiently well along to be prepared for exigencies in either the Atlantic or Pacific.

Worker training programs have played a part in this progress. Multiple shifts have also been a factor.

An example of the degree to which this vast building program has been stepped up is to be found in the figures for the two months of July and August of this year, during which a warship keel was laid on an average of every two days and a ship launched almost every week.

Die-Hard Card Fan Explains

...ur erepitating correspondent ...g the World Series goodby ...ractically the same state of ...d as the colored lady who broke her engagement by sticking her ring in a shotgun and shooting it back at her ex-everlovin'. Your correspondent was a Yank pitcher and a St. Louis Cardinal man and, regardless of all that has happened and ...d to happen since, he still ...s to the opinion that, if it ...could have been got together ...one piece, the Southworth ...gers would have been the ...m of the can.

...unningham

...he principal idea of this post-...em is not to post-mortem at ...but to be the first with a pre-...on. That prediction is that ...aforementioned Cardinals ...t miss winning the National ...gue pannant next year and ...e into the World Series at ...an 8-to-5 favorite. That's ...ng them far ahead, but I ...e believe in being shy.

...ok what happened to them ...year. They slugged it out ...t down to the wire despite the ...d epidemic of injuries ever to ...the neck of a pennant con-...ter. There was scarcely a first-...operative who wasn't out of ...mission, at some time or other, ...ix, even for weeks.

Grief List

...ort Cooper, one of the unit's ...nier bowlers, was hospitalized ...ix weeks with an arm injury. ...e Slaughter broke his collar-...e in the duel with the Dodgers ...y got serious. Walker Cooper, ...-string hind snatcher, broke ...shoulder. Jimmy Brown, the ...f popper-upper of the infield, ...out for what seemed to be an ...minable spell. Capt. Terrance ...re was drilled in the head ...a beanball and injured so ...ously that he was lost for the ...three weeks, which is where ...he fighting was.

There was more, including Johnny Mize's shoulder, when it was almost too late to matter, but that will serve to give even the most captious a vague idea. By the law of averages, that will can't happen again. There's a ball club that has some luck coming. But still, carrying all that grief, they almost made it, and against a healthy, hilarious Brooklyn that had all the better of the late schedule.

The Cards aren't an old ball club. They can afford to stand pat. Moore, Slaughter and Hopp are plenty of outfield, and it would be a selfish manager, indeed, who'd want an abler inner quartet than Mize, Crespi, Marion and Brown.

Walker Cooper is close to the best young catcher in the league and, as a matter of fact, it's a little difficult to figure whom he's next to. Perhaps they're only close to him, and the distance no more accurate than near-beer was to the genuine article.

Pitchers? What's wrong with Bill Crouch, Ira Hutchinson, Howard Krist, Clyde Shoun, Ernie White, Lon Warneke, Morton Cooper, Harry Gumbert and that new southpaw who came up from Houston to show 'em in the stretch, Howard Pollet?

How about a left-handed crew composed of White, Shoun and Pollet? Who can top it, or even match it?

And replacements? They have ample. Not even the Yanks, with their far-famed farm system, are better staffed with future greats. The Yanks may have their Newark, but the Cards have their Columbus, and they turn about as many real stars out of one league as the other. One means they have no monopoly on talent over on the Jersey flats.

I like a fighting ball club and, of course, Brooklyn qualifies there, but there's a powerful lot of sentiment flowing to a crowd that gives its noble best, uncomplainingly, in the midst of a run of luck that would try the patience of Job.

There's more than sentiment, too. If they can almost go the distance once, despite every shackle, they figure to go all the way in a second try with all the shackles removed. The justly celebrated law of averages, previously cited, figures to remove at least some of these another year in the case of Mr. Southworth's embattled gladiators. Don't say you weren't advised in time.

The Football Picture

EAST—Fordham, which pulled one out brilliantly against S. M. U.; Navy, which steamrollered West Virginia; Pennsylvania, Columbia, Dartmouth, Yale, Cornell, Colgate, Princeton, Army and Holy Cross, which suffered the disturbing loss of Quarterback Frank Saba with a twisted ankle, are still in the undefeated class. Fordham, Navy and, possibly, Colgate, with a dark-horse vote for Penn, are generally rated by critics the tops.

SOUTH—It's Duke, now carded as a national bellwether; Tulane, who rolled right on Saturday, burying Auburn, 32 to 0, and the Mississippi State, that belted out Alabama.

MIDWEST—Minnesota, which was idle Saturday; Northwestern, which buried Kansas State; Notre Dame, which looked extremely promising while smacking Indiana, and Michigan, which squeezed by Iowa, 6 to 0, are still out in front.

BIG SIX—It's Nebraska again, as usual.

SOUTHWEST—The critics seem to be right for once and Texas is supreme—score Saturday, Texas 34; Louisiana State, 0.

FAR WEST—It's Stanford, now, all alone in their big league with Santa Clara, the free-lancer, still potent and unscarred. Stanford was notable against U. C. L. A. after a wobbly start the previous week. All-America Quarterback Frankie Albert had his big team really rolling in this workmanlike, 33-to-0 rout.

It looks like a terrific football year, in action, upsets and crowd interest. Better get your pasteboards early.

Service Men's Entertainment Plan Approved

Full support to the Army and Navy plan for a stage-screen-radio entertainment "wheel" covering all of America's armed forces was pledged yesterday by the Nation's major talent and industrial organizations.

At an all-day meeting at the War Department, conferees arranged preliminary details of the largest scale amusement venture ever attempted anywhere. Brig. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn, chief of the Army Morale Branch, presided.

Completion of the program, and its launching, awaits the outcome of further conferences to be held in Hollywood, New York and other key cities with representatives of unions and other groups whose cooperation is required.

Types of Entertainment

The War Department discussions were concluded late yesterday. They had been scheduled to be continued today, but intensive morning and afternoon sessions succeeded in condensing the working schedule into a single day.

The conference revolved largely around the type of entertainments which can best be fitted into facilities available at Army camps and naval stations.

"Names" at the meeting included Eddie Dowling, actor-producer and chairman of the entertainment committee of the citizens' committee for the Army and Navy, Inc.; Lee Shubert, noted stage producer, and Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters.

Others Present

Other participants were Lawrence Phillips, executive director of the Dowling committee; Y. Frank Freeman, chairman of the Hollywood branch of the Motion Picture Committee Cooperating for National Defense; Lawrence Bellenson, Screen Actors Guild; Alfred Harding, Actors Equity Association; George Heller, American Federation of Radio Artists; Erwin D. Tuthill, executive director of the USO, and Judge James P. B. Duffy, of the USO.

Representing the Army, besides Gen. Osborn, were Col. William H. Draper, jr., Lieut. Col. M. M. Montgomery, Maj. James Carroll, Maj. Marvin Young, Lieut. Col. W. Mason Wright, jr., and Maj. F. A. Collins. Commander John Reynolds and Lieut. Comdr. Arthur T. Noren represented the Navy.

Also present were Samuel E. M. Crocker and Francis Keppel, executive director and secretary, respectively, of the joint Army and Navy committee on welfare and recreation.

Listen!
with Glynn

By Nancy Dixon, substituting for Paul Glynn, who is on vacation

In case you ever wake up in the night wondering what makes one of those radio shopping programs go round . . . here's the low-down on one of them. It's cooperation . . . first from the stores, who let me in on news, style shows, big sales, and all that. Also, they're careful about calling me before broadcast time when those cute little dresses I looked at yesterday are selling so fast it isn't safe to talk about them today . . . or when the rest of that shipment of little boys' suits failed to arrive . . . minor tragedies that take the place every day in the world of merchandising!

As to the radio announcers, on whom I also depend for cooperation . . . well, the man of the day tears himself away from that perpetual game of gin-rummy half an hour before air time to hold a stopwatch on my notes, check up on the pronunciation of mousseline, cloche, faille, and other strictly non-masculine words, and helps me cut line after line when we find about 17 minutes of dialogue instead of the required 14 1-2. Then he goes on the air and visits with me as though that shopping expedition of mine were really pretty important to him! For all of which I'm thankful every afternoon at 4:45!

Contract Bridge

Today's hand was played in one of the early tournaments of the American Whist League, which sprang directly from the popularity of that first match.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♣.

The bidding might be called old-fasioned but the play was classic, and we wonder how many of our self-confident declarers of today would find the secret which unlocks four hearts.

The opening lead is a club, won by declarer's lone ace. The missing high cards are easily placed in South's hand from his opening bid of one no-trump, but how to finesse with such a trickless dummy is the problem.

West must reach the dummy hand twice if he is to make both his queens good. This is necessary if he is to make his bid, as he is certain to lose the two low cards and the king of trump.

The successful West player of years ago led the jack of hearts at trick two and overtook with East's queen. South could win or not, his kings were due to be trapped. The defender won the trump king and returned the king of clubs; declarer trumped high and played a small heart, winning with dummy's seven. A low diamond went to the queen which held. Another low trump put East in once more with the eight to lead a spade through South's king, making West's queen good.

West made four hearts by giving up the first lead of trumps, and losing one spade, one diamond and one heart.

Lindsey Called Feebleminded; Defense Rests

Defense attorneys for Roland J. Lindsey, on trial for rape in District Court, rested the case yesterday after Dr. Ernest Y. Williams, Howard University psychiatrist, testified that the 19-year-old Negro defendant was "feebleminded, with a psychosis, and has the mentality of a person 5 years and 8 months old." Following closing arguments this morning, and final instructions by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, the case is expected to go to the jury by noon.

Dr. Williams also told the court that Lindsey "is an imbecile," and he recited various incidents "in evidence."

Contrary testimony was given earlier in the day when Dr. Martin Gross, another defense witness, superintendent of the Crownsville (Md.) State Insane Asylum, said that he did not believe Lindsey was of unsound mind. Dr. John E. Lind, of St. Elizabeths Hospital, a Government witness, also told the court that he thought Lindsey was sane.

Much of the afternoon was spent in a duel of words between United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and Dr. Williams.

After the psychiatrist had testified that Lindsey once held a $30 week job, the United States attorney asked him, "Well, $30 a week is pretty good for an imbecile, isn't it? Do you think it's reasonable that an imbecile could hold such a job?"

"It all depends," replied Dr. Williams, "as to what kind of a job it is, and who is paying out the $30."

The organization voted to cooperate with the Brookland-Woodridge Minister Association in organizing a greater Woodridge area Christmas celebration.

Record Number Of Fingerprint Cards Sent to FBI

The Federal Bureau of Investigation received an average of 26,418 sets of fingerprints cards a day last month—an all-time record—the Department of Justice announced yesterday.

The files now contain more than 23,500,000 of such identification records as compared with the 810,000 on hand when the Identification Division was established in 1924, Director J. Edgar Hoover said.

Hoover said 577 fugitives from justice were located in September through use of the fingerprint file. In 64 per cent of the instances, where local law enforcement agencies asked the FBI to check prints, identification was made with prior arrest records.

Another record was set last month in the number of local law enforcement agencies which contributed fingerprints to the bureau. Cards came from 11,424 such agencies.

Sally Rand Won't Give Up Her Feathers for a Horse

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 8.—Relax, gentlemen, Sally Rand, who boomed a fistful of feathers into a fortune, isn't the gal to remake a fan into a feather duster. Impending matrimony with a bronco-buster will not retire her permanently to any home on the range.

"Why, podner, I reckon I can combine a career with matrimony," she said today with the soft accents of the lone prair-ee. The famous fan dancer issued this ukase here today in the diningroom of her hotel as she and her fiance, bronco-bustin' Turk Greenough of Red Lodge, Mont., held hands over the luncheon table.

An old cacw hand herself, once proprietress of Sally Rand's Nude Ranch, a feature of San Francisco's late World Fair, she plans to open a dude ranch (with clothes) when she and Turk are spliced by the parson, Sally announced.

"Yeah," agreed Turk, a strong, silent man right out of any horse opera, written or screened. Tall, dark and lean, with no waist or hips to speak of, Turk is here to compete in the annual rodeo in Madison Square Garden.

"But Turk's going to give that up when we're married. It's too dangerous," said Sally.

"Yeah," agreed Turk, as he spooned up some vanilla ice cream.

"We'll start a new kind of dude ranch," enlarged the petite, blonde, blue-eyed fan-dancer, completely disguised in a cow gal's outfit of white buckskin and a 10-gallon hat. "There won't be a singing cowboy or a guitar player on the place.

"We'll just have good beds, good food and good horses. And any cacw hand who sings 'Bury Me Not On the Lone Prairee' can pack up his bedroll and start looking for a new job. Can't he, hon?" asked Miss Sally. "Yeah," said Turk.

Just when the Rand-Greenuogh nuptials will be solemnized is a matter puzzling to the principals of this romance. The first Mrs. Greenough does not seem in any haste to obtain a divorce out where the West begins. At the momeent, she is in California, and talks only through a lawyer, Miss Rand said sorrowfully.

Gateado, Big Texas Longhorn, Takes Formal Bow Today

More hullabaloo and razzle-dazzle than accompanies the premiere of a Hollywood food market are promised for the Zoo this afternoon when Gateado is dedicated.

Gateado is the huge Texas longhorn steer which arrived at the park yesterday and was promptly placed off exhibition in deference to his formal unveiling at 2 p. m. today.

Representative Wright Patman, president of the Texas State Society, promised last night that the presentation ceremonies will feature such choral numbers as "Roll Along, Covered Wagon" and "Last Roundup," sung by the entire Texas Congressional delegation; the entire Texas Aggie football team;

Gateado, which is Mexican for "catlike," occupied a freight car to himself on the five-day trip from Hebbronville, Tex. The car's sides were heavily padded as a concession to the beast's habit of charging at strange things.

Zoo Director William M. Mann, Patman and Montague were at the freight yards bright and early yesterday to welcome the longhorn, which was roped last month on the quarter-million-acre ranch of Tom T. East, who is presenting the $5000 souvenir to the zoo through the Texas State Society.

3780 in G. P. O. Join Roll Call

The Government Printing Office turned 3780 memberships in the District Red Cross Roll Call yesterday which at the end of its seventeenth day had a total enrollment of 60,329 members, Chairman Edgar Morris announced yesterday.

In all, 7397 new members were added yesterday, it was said. The GPO report came from Mrs. Rosalie Wright, secretary of the Governmental unit headed by Maj. Gen. James C. Magee. The Palais Royal department store was reported yesterday to have enrolled all of its 825 employes for the fourth consecutive years, by David E. McCoy, chairman of the General Business Group.

Morris was awarded a new volunteer service badge by Brig. Gen. F. R. Keefer, District Red Cross chairman, at a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Morris for nearly 500 Roll Call workers at the Sulgrave Club.

Pointing out that people living in Washington have difficulty in realizing there is much suffering, despair and horror in many other parts of the world, Dean John R. Fitzpatrick, of Columbus University Law School, over Station WMAL, appealed to all citizens to enroll with the Red Cross immediately.

Meanwhile, Otto S. Lund, manager of the District Red Cross chapter, announced the first quota which includes 2124 knitted and sewn items to be produced by local volunteer workers for the Army and Navy has been accepted by his organization. It is expected the quota will be filled within a month, Lund said.

The organizaton of two new Red Cross lifesaving classes for swimmers was also announced by Lund. One, a junior lifesaving class, will be held on Saturdays at the Ambassador Hotel with James Cope instructing from 11 a. m. to 1 p. m.

A senior lifesaving class to be held at the same place on Tuesdays from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m. will begin October 21, with Miss Lillian Smith as instructor.
